Senate Kills Roosevelt Court Bill, 70 to 20; Congress Moves to Adjourn Before August 15

Senate Gives D. C. Tax Bill Right of Way; To Act Today

2 Blocs to Fight Sales, Land Levy

Revenue Omnibus Faces Joint Conferences if Passed.

By James D. Secrest.

The long-delayed District tax bill was given the right of way in the Senate yesterday for consideration as unfinished business today.

Majority Leader Barkley said the bill will be disposed of before the Senate quits for the day. It was called up just before the day's recess was taken upon motion of Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada.

An agreement to make the measure special order of business today was reached with Senate leaders after conferences promoted by Chairman King of the Senate District Committee, immediately after it became apparent that the court bill was to be recommitted.

While assured consideration, the omnibus tax bill has a rough road ahead before it becomes a law. A liberal bloc in the Senate is prepared to fight the "luxury" sales tax reported by the District Committee, and objections also are in prospect for the $1 land levy.

Conferences Ahead.

After passing the Senate, the measure will have to be ironed out in conference with House managers because of the drastic amendments reported by the Senate committee.

Other developments in the District tax situation were:

An attack on the Potomac Electric Power Co., the Public Utilities Commission, and the sliding scale of adjusting electric rates in the House.

A report from Auditor Daniel J. Donovan that the District has an excellent credit rating with the U. S. Treasury.

The attack on local power rates was made late in the day by Representative Pierce (Democrat), of Oregon, in a 25-minute speech on the floor.

Utility Rates Attacked.

Pierce charged that District electric rates are too high, that the Potomac Electric Power Co. does not pay adequate District taxes, and that the Public Utilities Commission and the House District Committee have been lax, in not remedying the matter.

The Oregon Representative suggested that high utility taxes might well be substituted for increased realty rates.

"My brief review of this situation seems to indicate," Pierce said, "that the District is about $2,000,000 shy each year in taxes which ought to be paid by the utilities, over $800,000 of which should justly come from the electric company.

"What has lulled the District Committee and the Utility Commission into acquiescence in this obvious fraud?"

Pierce compared electric rates in Washington with those of Tacoma, Wash., which owns and operates its own power plant. He found the Tacoma rates lower, although the latter pays more than twice the percentage of its gross earnings in taxes.

Assailing the sliding scale plan

Mystery Airplane Is Reported Again Close to Bermuda

New York, July 22 (AP).—A second radio message which appeared to confirm a report of a mystery airplane droning over the Atlantic toward Europe was received here today by Radiomarine Corporation.

The American freighter Scanmail, which relayed the first message last night, reported the British steamship Coryton, bound from Pensacola, Fla., to Glasgow, Scotland, had sighted the plane's lights.

A third message was received by the Coast Guard station at Salem, Mass., from the Furness liner Queen of Bermuda at noon. The liner radioed "plane passing overhead." The ship was approximately 175 miles from Bermuda, several hundred miles south of the spot where the plane first was reported.

The Scanmail reported last night an unidentified ship had seen and heard the plane 500 miles east of Cape Race, New Foundland.

Leading American fliers were located aground today and an airport manager at Edmonton, Alberta, revealed a mystery shipment of 500 gallons of gasoline and 45 gallons of oil was still being held there for Prince Constantin Cantacuzino, Rumanian flier, who had announced round-world flight plans.

Rebel Bombardments Kill 63, Injure 150 in Fight for Madrid

Air Attack Leaves 50 Dead in Town 15 Miles North of Capital; Single Shell Slays Eight in Beleaguered City.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, July 22.—Sixty-three persons were killed and more than 150 wounded in intensive insurgent bombardments of Madrid and two towns today.

The heaviest toll was in Colmenar Viejo, about 15 miles north of Madrid, where an air bombardment killed 50 and wounded about 100. Several houses were wrecked, and some burned.

In Madrid, 8 were killed and 20 wounded in the Central Gibeles Square by a single missile which fell near a street car during a severe shelling. Madrid was not bombed.

The insurgents loosed about 400 bombs in their 4-hour air attack on the town of Quintanar de la Orden, taking a toll of 5 dead and 32 wounded. The bombing started at 11 o'clock last night and continued until 3 a. m. today. Quintanar de la Orden is in Toledo Province, south of Madrid.

Along the twisting front west of Madrid, government and insurgent artillery subjected enemy lines to terrific bombardments.

One body of Gen. Francisco Franco's insurgents, after being repulsed in an attack, moved back across the Perales River and began to dig in.

Another assault on government positions east of the Guadarrama River was repelled.

Both sides turned withering shellfire on small objectives, neither risking a large-scale offensive in the bitterly contested area, where the "battle for Madrid" has been in progress for a week. Each evidently was waiting for the other to crack first.

There was little change, consequently in the thumb-shaped salient government troops have jabbed into insurgent territory about 15 miles west of Madrid.

The "thumb" points south, its tip at Brunete and its sides at Quijona on the west and Villafranca del Pardillo on the east.

Insurgent forces centered their pressure in the Brunete sector in an effort to drive between the government lines.

Insurgent commanders believe they can force the government back from its 100-square-mile salient if they can split its forces at Brunete.

On the other hand, the government is pointing the "thumb" toward Navalcarnero, south of Brunete, an important base for the siege

Painters Stop Picketing, Wait NLRB Decision

200 Strikers on Private Projects Ordered Back to Work.

Picketing was suspended on all Government projects by the striking painters' union late yesterday, pending the outcome of action of the regional office of the National Labor Relations Board at Baltimore regarding charges that the contracting firms of William Wilson & Son, of Atlanta, and Coons & Raptis, of Brooklyn, were violating the Wagner labor law and the Bacon-Davis law, regarding fixed wages to be paid various classes of labor.

Suspension of the picket lines was ordered by Bryce P. Holcombe, business manager of the painters' union, after his complaints had been filed against the firms.

He also announced that all painters employed on private projects in the District, numbering more than 200, would return to work, and that there "would be work for every union painter somewhere in the District today."

Order Is Surprise.

Holcombe's order came as a distinct surprise in the late afternoon. Earlier his 600 painters, and 75 glaziers who had struck in sympathy, stood ready for a mass demonstration at the Treasury. After this they were to march on Capitol Hill, to show the Nation's lawmakers their strength. Holcombe has indicated the strike might become Nation-wide if the American Union with headquarters at Lafayette, Ind., gave orders to strike in sympathy on all Government projects from coast to coast.

"We are waiting to see what the Government will do," Holcombe said last night.

On another of Washington's strike fronts peace returned when Secretary of Labor Perkins notified Col. Daniel I. Sultan, the District Engineer Commissioner, that wage rates for 11 classifications of skilled labor on public contracts must be strictly at the predetermined figures agreed upon for each job.

Would Stop Cost Cuts.

Upholding the position of the Washington Building Trades, the ruling would prevent reduction of labor costs by the device of placing

Chiang Accepts Truce in North, Japan Reports

Both Powers See Peaceful Settlement; Tokyo Halts War Preparations.

Tokyo, July 22.—Both Japan and China tonight appeared to have decided to seek settlement of their North China conflict by peaceful means rather than war.

Here and in Nanking government measures pointed strongly in the direction of peace.

Domei, the Japanese news agency, reported from Peiping the central Chinese government had agreed to local settlement of the clash of Chinese and Japanese interests.

Such a settlement, providing for varying degrees of withdrawal of troops of both nations, already had been reached by local Chinese and Japanese commanders.

Officials said this would remove the most dangerous source of friction between the two powers. They expressed belief it would dispel much of the tension which has gripped the Orient since the night of July 7, when small Japanese and Chinese units clashed near Marco Polo Bridge, 10 miles west of Peiping.

War Orders Halted.

The Japanese war office issued orders which indicated a halt in preparations for large-scale war.

Chinese and Japanese troops alike were reported evacuating the immediate zone of conflict west of Peiping.

Domei said the Nanking government had notified Gen. Sung Chehyuan, chairman of the Hopei-Chahar political council and commander of the Twenty-Ninth Army, it would accept his settlement with Japanese military leaders in North China.

Hitherto Nanking has stood against any such local solution, insisting the issues were national and must be settled between the Tokyo and Nanking governments. The Japanese have insisted the autonomous Chinese authority in the north had power to make settlements with them.

Japanese reports from Nanking said the way had been paved for renewal of direct negotiations between the two national governments on larger issues. They indicated the efforts of foreign diplomats at Nan-

Holiday Crowds Pay to Watch Diver Hunt Arkansas Monster

By the Associated Press.

Newport, Ark., July 22.—Business was virtually suspended here today as hundreds of Newport residents and tourists watched Deep Sea Diver Charles B. Brown, of Memphis, begin a hunt for White River's mysterious "monster."

Holiday atmosphere prevailed at the scene six miles to the south as Brown twice invaded a mile-long, 60-foot-deep eddy, where a huge bubble-blowing denizen of the river was reported sighted several times in the past four weeks.

An 8-foot, razor-keen harpoon in hand, Brown first was lowered into the water in a test exploration. This afternoon he began his four-day hunt in earnest.

The Newport Chamber of Commerce sponsored the search after reports the monster story was created to obtain publicity for this farming town of 4,547 inhabitants.

Newport stores closed and crowds flocked to the scene for what may turn out to be an epochal discovery or just a sunken boat or oil tank.

Half a dozen eyewitnesses, including Bramlett Bateman, plantation owner, reported seeing a great creature rise to the surface on rare intervals, float silently for a few minutes and then submerge, making its presence known only by occasional snorts that bubbled up from the bottom.

Brown formerly dived for the United States Navy and now is employed by the United States engineers. He said he expected to find "an overgrown catfish." Others have theorized the monster was only an old scow or an alligator.

A dance floor was constructed near the eddy with announcement an orchestra would play for dancers as long as the hunt lasted. A Memphis barnstorming aviator arranged in a nearby field to take passengers aloft for an aerial view of the eddy. The Chamber of Commerce fixed a small fee for spectators to defray Brown's expenses.

End in Sight First Time During Year

Administration Willingness to Compromise May Be Factor.

Housing, Farm and Wage Bills Await Action.

Adjournment of Congress before August 15 yesterday became the objective of Capitol Hill as the controversial Supreme Court reorganization bill, which was jamming the legislative machinery, was removed.

Whether this aim to have Congress wind-up the current session in the next three weeks by unremitting work is realized depends to some extent on the willingness of the Administration forces to compromise on controversial matters. But on Capitol Hill yesterday there was widespread sentiment for ending the session as promptly as possible.

It may be that adjournment sine die may come a few days after the middle of the month, as is usual on Capitol Hill when a specific date is set. But for the first time this year the end of the session was definitely in sight, and when that happens it is difficult for the leaders to prevent a stampede for adjournment, especially after such a tense, nerve-wracking period as that now ended.

5 Bills in Doubt.

Aside from the modified judiciary reform bill agreed on by Senate leaders yesterday, the Administration wants action at this session of Congress on the following five measures:

1. The Black hours and wages bill.
2. An agricultural stabilization bill.
3. The Wagner housing subsidy bill.
4. The President's executive reorganization bill.
5. A bill to plug loopholes in the income tax law.

Outcome in Doubt.

It is extremely doubtful whether the Administration can obtain all it wishes along these lines. Enactment of that program in its entirety would keep Congress here until October, at least, and that is out of the bounds of possibility. Fur-

Edward Ousted By Conspiracy, Jardine Asserts

Baltimore, Md., July 22 (U.P.).—The Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, parson who married the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Warfield, tonight charged that the former British King was driven from his throne in "a political-religious conspiracy" by an "ecclesiastical cad," the Archbishop of Canterbury, and "a grandmotherly person called Baldwin."

The former "poor man's parson" of Darlington, England, who gained international renown when he married the former King and "the woman that I love," spoke on "Once There was a King" at the Lyric Theater. It was the first public speech of his American tour.

Rockefellers Keep Seat on Exchange

New York, July 22 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange membership held by the late John D. Rockefeller, sr., for 54 years, will remain in the Rockefeller name, it was disclosed today.

A brief announcement by the exchange said it was "proposed" it be transferred to Laurence Spelman Rockefeller, his 27-year-old, studious grandson, now assisting his father, John D., jr., in the management of the Rockefeller charitable enterprises.

Garner Shows U. S. He's No Throttlebottom By Canny Strategy in Ending Court Battle

By Franklyn Waltman.

The myth of the Vice President of the United States as an Alexander Throttlebottom, whose chief occupation was feeding peanuts to pigeons in the park, yesterday was buried forever on Capitol Hill.

It was buried by Vice President John Nance Garner, who brought to a decisive conclusion the bitterest and most historic legislative battle which has occurred on Capitol Hill since the debates over slavery.

Defeat of President Roosevelt's proposal for reorganizing the Supreme Court appeared inevitable last May. But it was "Cactus Jack," of Uvalde, Tex., who ended the battle by facing the realities of the situation and thereby prevented a long-drawn-out, agonizing oratorical struggle. It was he—and there was none other who could—who persuaded the President and the Administration forces to concede their defeat.

No Throttlebottom He.

The beetle-browed Texan acted in order to save the Democratic Party from being further torn apart. Since last Sunday his one motivating thought has been to do whatever was possible to end the struggle within his party and to effect a conciliation between the White House and the insurgents on Capitol Hill. The latter task is still before him. Whether the Vice President, when he left Washington in June, anticipated what has since happened and left with that in mind, only he knows and he has kept his silence. But by leaving the scene of turmoil in June, before the court bill became a flaming issue on the Senate floor, the Vice President placed himself above the fight and thus qualified as a mediator in whose impartiality both sides could trust.

His original plan was to come back to Washington during the last week in July. The death of Senator Joseph T. Robinson, however, brought him back a week earlier. He lost no time in getting down to work.

The Vice President left the grave of his friend in Little Rock, Ark., last Sunday and immediately took charge of the situation. As he boarded the private car at the end of the special funeral train, there was a glint in his eye. That glint had been seen in the Garner eyes on several occasions when he was seeking to keep the House in order when he was Speaker of that body. The first thing "Cactus Jack" did on entering the private car was to take off his coat. Then he took off his shirt. Then he called out to the porter on the car: "Boy, bring me some branch

Senate Enacts Low Rate Loan Bill Over Veto

Measure to Keep Down Interest to Farmers Passed, 71 to 19.

By Sidney Olson.

The Senate voted yesterday, 71 to 19, to write into the law of the land, over the veto of President Roosevelt, a continuation of low interest rates on farm loans.

Since the House had already overridden the President's veto of July 12 by a vote of 260 to 98, the act became law.

It extends for one additional year the 3½ per cent interest rate on certain Federal Land Bank loans, provides a 4 per cent interest rate on such loans for the period of July 1, 1938 to June 30, 1939, and provides for a 4 per cent interest rate on Land Bank Commissioners' loans for a period of two years.

Senator Ablen W. Barkley, of Kentucky, Senate majority leader, making his maiden address as Democratic chieftain, warned the Senate that passage of the bill might influence borrowers from the Home Owners Loan Corporation and other Fedreal agencies to seek special advantages which would take a possible $200,000,000 toll from the Treasury.

He said that his statement was purely explanatory, and not intended to influence the votes of Senators.

But opposition to the veto was highly vocal and extremely vigorous. Only Senators Sherman Minton, of Indiana, and William H. King, of Utah, both Democrats, fought to have it sustained.

Senator Carter Glass, Democrat, of Virginia, in one of his increasingly rare but still fiery speeches, said:

"I have noted efforts in Congress toward economy and toward speeding up a return of a balanced budget.

"The last major speech of Sen-

Girl, 18, Vanishes From Rowboat On River in Md.

Elkton, Md., July 22 (AP).—A missing 18-year-old girl who disappeared from a rowboat in the Northeast River, a mysterious blackhulled sailboat later found abandoned, and discovery of part of the girl's clothing in the empty rowboat supplied Cecil County police with the ingredients of a summer mystery today.

The girl is Janet Wohlsen, daughter of John O. Wohlsen, Lancaster, Pa., manufacturer. She left her summer home at Red Point, near here, to go fishing yesterday.

Later members of her family saw her in a rowboat about a mile from shore. At that time a sailboat, its hull painted black, was sailing in the vicinity. The girl failed to return home. Searchers found the rowboat anchored a mile below her home. In the boat were the girl's shoes, sweater and fish lines. A few hours later the searchers found the sailboat drifting in the river 3 miles below Red Point.

Pigeons Confused By Radio Waves, Navy Tests Show

Homing instincts of carrier pigeons—one of the marvels of natural science—are confused by the operation of a radio transmitter, the Navy Department announced yesterday on the basis of experiments with pigeons from the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J.

While the tests made were not considered of sufficient duration to warrant conclusions, the department reported that there appears to be "some foundation" for believing newspaper accounts of the influence of radio activity on the homing instinct.

Groups of five birds were released from the A. T. and T. radio telephone station at Ocean Gate, N. J., at intervals while the station was transmitting and while it was off the air. Birds in the former group, it was found, circled in "an erratic and confused manner very close to the station and required from 42 to 52 minutes to return to their home loft 10 miles away.

When the station was not transmitting, birds circled in "the conventional manner," departed for the home loft within 5 minutes and arrived within 19 to 21 minutes.

Reconsidering Of Richardson Suit Is Vetoed

Roosevelt Unwilling to 'Declare Government Infringed Patent.'

President Roosevelt yesterday vetoed a Senate joint resolution providing for reconsideration by the Court of Claims of a $10,000,000 patent infringement suit brought against the Government by William K. Richardson, now living here.

Holding Richardson, who formerly lived in Leavenworth, Kans., had had his day in court, where the claim was held "not well-founded," the President said, "Sufficient reason does not appear for reversing the decision of the court by legislative action."

In his veto message, Mr. Roosevelt wrote:

"Some time ago William K. Richardson brought suit against the United States in the Court of Claims to recover the sum of $10,000,000 for an alleged infringement of a patent relating to artillery projectiles. The Court of Claims, after taking testimony and hearing the case on the merits, made comprehensive and detailed findings of fact and rendered an opinion dismissing the petition. While sustaining the validity of the patent, it upheld the contention of Government counsel that the patent had not been infringed by the Government.

"The purpose of the present resolution is to remand the case to the Court of Claims for reconsideration, subject to the limitation, that the amount claimed should be reduced to 3 per cent of the original amount, to wit, $300,000. In addition, by the recitals contained in the preamble, the resolution would practically declare the prior decision of the court erroneous, and would affirmatively declare that the Government infringed the patent in spite of the ruling of the court to the contrary. Further, it would expressly waive certain affirmative defenses of the Government, such as the effect of the prior adjudication. . . .

"In view of the foregoing considerations, I feel constrained to withhold my approval from the joint-resolution."

Alaskans Flee Swaying Homes As Temblor Shakes Fairbanks

By the Associated Press.

Fairbanks, Alaska, July 22.—Half-dressed men and women ran from homes and hotels, frame buildings swayed and merchandise tumbled off shelves as a strong earthquake struck Fairbanks and the Alaskan interior today.

The first quake began about 7:09 a. m., Fairbanks time (12:09 p. m. Eastern standard time), and lasted more than a minute. A second came at 7:55 a. m. A third, at 8:01, was so severe it put the University of Alaska seismograph out of commission.

There were no reports of injuries and estimates of damage were not available.

Concern was felt for the Black Rapids glacier district, 125 miles southeast of here. Communication lines were down. Tremors recently started the glacier moving toward rapidly again after it virtually had ceased its advance.

Motorists arriving from the south reported the quake cracked the earth from 4 to 6 inches in places along the highway, forcing up gushers of water and mud from 4 to 8 feet high.

Epic Battle Is Concluded To Prevent Party Split

Garner, Barkley Act for Harmony

New Plan Will Omit All Controversial Features.

Chronological history of the controversy over President Roosevelt's proposals for reorganization of the Supreme Court is on page 4.

By Robert C. Albright.

In a dead calm that stilled court tumult and shouting, the Senate yesterday wrote the last anticlimactic chapter to the Administration's Supreme Court enlargement epic by returning the discarded court bill to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The historic drama closed with a 70-to-20 Senate vote to recommit the President's bill and stifle perhaps for all time the Administration's proposals to increase the Supreme Court, name a "proctor" for it, and sanction "roving" judges in inferior courts.

By the same vote, the Senate instructed the judiciary committee to report in ten days a new bill "relating to judicial reform." By general agreement, the new measure will drop all hotly controversial features of the President's program.

Long Battle Ended

"Glory be to God," shouted Senator Hiram Johnson, California Progressive Republican, as the Supreme Court emerged unscathed. Senators applauded. Galleries laughed and cheered.

It was a thoroughgoing victory for court plan opponents who for six months have battled with words and nearly flawless parliamentary strategy the President's unprecedented proposal for complete reorganization and enlargement of the Federal Judiciary.

But the Senate vote was not unexpected. Administration capitulation actually came two days ago. An extraordinary session of the Judiciary Committee yesterday received the formal surrender. Vice President John Nance Garner and Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley threw in their cards and appealed for an end to party strife.

Formal Compact Made.

Slight, blond Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, the "James Madison" of the meeting, took careful notes of the agree-

By William V. Nessly.

Harry Jones' children like carrots, and that fact was duly recorded yesterday, over protest of the Republic Steel Corporation at the National Labor Relations Board's hearing into charges that the steel corporation has violated the Wagner labor relations act.

Moreover, Jones' own liking for groundhogging also went into the record, along with the desire for a bowl of soup that led Walter Albert Meyer and his wife into the midst of the shooting that marked the Massillon, Ohio, fatal steel strike riot on July 11.

These bits of testimony were introduced by board attorneys in order to show that the men who found themselves in the maelstrom of shot and gas in the strike outbreak had not been "conspiring to kill or be killed" just before the disorder flared. Instead, they were pictured as family men, interested in the little problems of home and daily life.

When Jones was asked what he had done in the Sunday afternoon hours which preceded the violence, Republic attorneys objected. They were overruled, however, and Jones' story of his drive into the country near Massillon to get some carrots, which his children like, and visit friends, and his plans to go groundhogging the next morning, followed.

Jones for 12 years has been a Republic Steel employe. He is a C. I. O. member and was on strike at the time of the shooting, when two men were killed, allegedly by special police.

Jones told of parking his car across the street from C. I. O. headquarters in Massillon on the Sunday night in question. As he stepped from his car, he testified, he noticed some 15 police strung across the street in front of his car. Around C. I. O. headquarters were grouped some 200 men, he added. A cry came from in front of his car to turn off the lights on his car "or we'll shoot them out." He did so, he said. A few minutes later he re-entered the car to drive away. He started the motor and turned on the lights.

Then, Meyer earlier testified, there came a shout:

"The —— —— asked for it; let's give it to 'em."

A burst of shooting followed. Meyer's car and Jones,' parked in front of it, were riddled with shots.

Meyer, his wife and two friends were in his car, he said, debating whether to go to C. I. O. headquarters "to get a bowl of soup."

"I yelled for them to duck," he said.

"Did they?" he was asked.

"I'll say they did," he replied. Three volleys were fired before Meyer could get his car out of the danger zone and into an alley.

A dozen or more men were staggering in the street, he said. He stopped his car, had his wife and friends get out, and loaded into the car one man who was badly wounded and moaning, "I'm dying." Meyer drove him to a hospital, where the man died the next morning. On the following day Meyer's car couldn't be operated, because of the bullet holes through the radiator.

He said he saw no shots fired from the group of men around C. I. O. headquarters, though Luther Day, Republic attorney, asked him if he wasn't "ducked down" during the shooting so he couldn't see.

Meyer, also on strike from the Republic plant, where he has been employed 12 years, said he recognized one of the police as a Republic employe.

Jones told of shots pouring into his car. He jumped out and climbed on the rear bumper, he said, but gas shells were exploding and the gas drove him from that perch. He ran down the street, ducking into doorways. He saw others running from the scene, he said.

After the disorder had ceased, he said, he went to the police, trying to regain possession of his car. In the course of this effort, he testified, he was arrested early Monday morning. He said that when he was searched a pocket knife was found in his pocket and he was charged with carrying concealed weapons. He said he had no food while he was being held, from early Monday until Tuesday. He said that when he was released he was charged $1 storage on his car during the time he was in jail.

Tells Alien Charge.

Earlier, Richard B. Hardman, city solicitor of Massillon, testified that only 5 of the 165 pickets arrested after the shooting were subject to deportation. He said the Massillon Law and Order League had charged many of the pickets were aliens and in this country illegally.

Henry W. Krier, Massillon mayor, another witness, told of numerous requests he received to enlarge the police force during the strike. He agreed to appoint and equip 50 extra police, he said, with $8,000 which the Law and Order League was to raise, but he said he told the league the special police would not be sent to the picket lines.

Day, Republic attorney, and Donald Wakefield Smith, member of the board, clashed several times during the day's hearings.

Four witnesses remain to be heard today before a recess is taken. The hearing later may be transferred to Cleveland.

Hourly Wage Stipulated.

In her ruling to Commissioner Sultan, Secretary Perkins held the prevailing hourly wages in the 11 classifications to be as follows:

Bricklayers and stonemasons, $1.75; carpenters, $1.50; cement finishers, $1.37½; electricians, $1.65; plumbers, $1.50; steamfitters, $1.50; painters, $1.57½; ironworkers, $2; rodmen, $1.50; tile and setters' helpers, 87½ cents, and steamfitters helpers, 82½ cents.

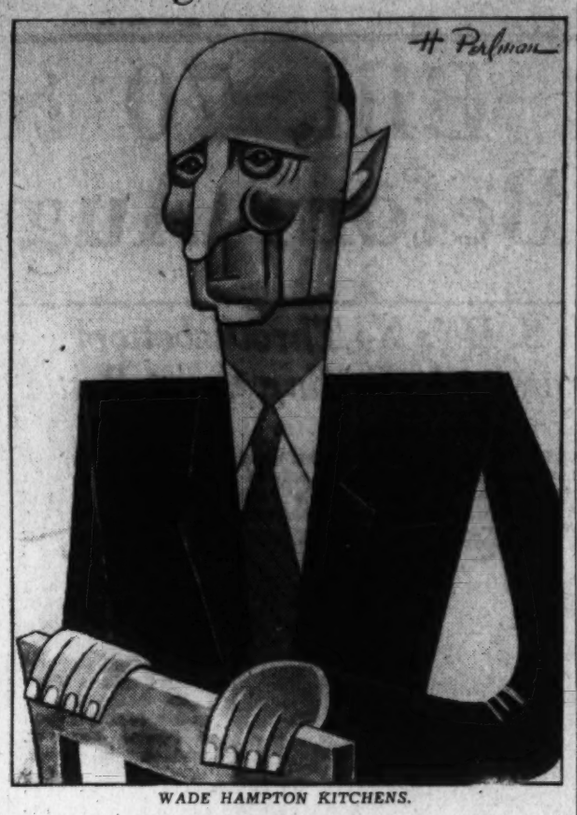
She ruled, in accordance with the provisions of the Davis-Bacon act, the rates are predetermined as classified and are the minimum wages to be paid on such contracts.

District jobs under controversy were the John W. Hunt and Jeffries-Dyer Co.'s operations, where work was stopped early this week.

Stop order against work on the Paul and Young schools, under construction by Hunt, were issued but work is expected to be resumed on Monday, while the Jeffries-Davis Co., warned it would be proceeding at its own risk on the Grimke School project, is expected also to resume Monday.

New Faces in Congress

Kitchens, Arkansas, Dreamed Of Congress Since He Was 11



WADE HAMPTON KITCHENS.

Thinks Fulfillment Worth Uphill Fight to Top; Hung Out Shingle in Philippines With Three Mexican Pesos in Pocket.

Sticklers for old maxims may say "Let justice prevail though the heavens fall," but as far as Representative Wade Hampton Kitchens, of Arkansas, is concerned who the devil wants such a catastrophe?

"I haven't got that far yet," wryly commented the 58-year-old legislator in commenting upon Supreme Court supporters who glorify the ex cathedra pronunciamentos of the bench.

Though "not committed" as yet on the President's court reorganization plan. Representative Kitchens significantly admitted his electorate is backing it to a man.

Biographical sketch: He was born near Falcon, in Nevada County, Arkansas; was educated in the public schools and the University of Arkansas; graduated in law from Cumberland University in 1900; was admitted to the Oklahoma bar, then volunteered for service in the Philippines. With three Mexican pesos in his pocket he hung out a shingle in the islands, practiced three years, then came home to be married. After a honeymoon trip around the world, he finally located at Magnolia, Arkansas, in 1909. In 1917 he enlisted in the Army and was commissioned captain of infantry by the President. Eleven years later he was elected a member of the State Legislature; was re-elected in 1930. Defeated for Congress in 1932, he won out by 750 votes in the '34 primary election. His opponent however was seated, despite a court ruling, and for 4½ months Kitchens was a-knocking in vain for some recognition or action from Congress.

He is here now and likes it. "I had the dream since I was 11," he will tell you. "And a dream like that is worth the candle and the uphill fight to the top."

U. S. Rushes Cash For Hopper War

By the Associated Press.

The second major offensive of the summer against grasshoppers, which threaten to destroy crops in excess of $91,000,000 damage charged against them last year, began yesterday with movement of Federal funds to aid farmers in a dozen Mid-Western States.

Authorization for the allotment of $400,000 of the second $1,000,000 appropriated by Congress this year to control crop destroying insects was sent by the Agriculture Department to the Government's grasshopper control headquarters at Minneapolis.

Within a few days carloads of death-dealing materials—saw dust, poison and bran—will reach infested aeas in North and South Dakota, Iowa, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and New Mexico. Fast passenger trains will take the bait material into areas where it is urgently needed.

Berry Found League Job Too Much Work

By the Associated Press.

Senator Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, said yesterday he resigned last May as president of Labor's Nonpartisan League, an organization which actively supported President Roosevelt in the last election.

Announcement of his resignation was withheld, he said, while the league considered a successor. One has not yet been chosen.

Berry explained he resigned because he could not carry the burden of two offices, and because "I questioned the propriety of my holding the league presidency while I was a Senator."

Report Assails Chicago Police In Strike Riot

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee yesterday branded as "unprovoked" the Chicago police attack on marching strikers at the Republic Steel plant on Memorial Day.

In a report presented to the Senate by Senators Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, and Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), Utah, their primary conclusion was that "the consequences of the Memorial Day encounter were clearly avoidable by the police."

Ten strikers were killed in the fray—seven of them shot in the back while fleeing, and a score were injured.

Indictment of Police.

The report, written with cold restraint, actually was a detailed indictment of the Chicago police for their use of force on that occasion. In one point the report said:

"From all the evidence we think it plain that the force employed by the police was far in excess of that which the occasion required. Its use must be ascribed either to gross inefficiency in the performance of police duty or a deliberate effort to intimidate the strikers."

Senator Thomas, in making a separate conclusion, said: "The use of police officers in such a way that they seem to be allied with either side of a labor dispute destroys their effectiveness as peace officers representing the public.

"The moment they are used in defense of a given group they are associated in the minds of the opposing group as partisans to the dispute."

Challenged by Mayor.

In Chicago, according to an Associated Press dispatch, Mayor Edward J. Kelly challenged its conclusions on the grounds that a coroner's jury had pronounced the ten deaths as "justifiable homicides." He said:

"I am convinced the people of Chicago want law and order regardless of who is affected. From all information and unbiased reports, the police were attacked. There was no general order to shoot. It is man's natural instinct to protect himself when he is on the ground.

"There never was a prearranged attack as far as the police were concerned. It was an impulsive attack by someone else. I am sorry that the committee at that distance sees things as it does."

The points raised by the mayor already had been discussed in detail in the committee's report. According to medical testimony, the report said, "the nature of the marchers' wounds indicates they were shot in flight.

"The police contended that the only shooting by police was either in the air to intimidate the strikers and stop the barrage of missiles, or by individual policemen, struck to the ground and defending themselves from attack.

"That shots were fired into the air is clear, although it should be noted that the photographic evidence makes its apparent that some of these were fired by patrolmen located well behind the police lines at a time when the crowd was already in full flight.

"Common sense tells us that shooting in the air cannot explain 40 gunshot wounds, the majority of them in the back.

"The alternative theory of the police that they shot in self-defense, firing only when they had been thrown to the ground by assailants, is likewise refuted by the photographic, medical and oral evidence. We need not here repeat the labored efforts of the police to reconcile those back wounds with any rational theory of self-defense.

Fired at Retreating Men.

"Neither the newsreel nor the newspaper photographs reveal any evidence of resistance on the part of the marchers. They further show at least seven instances of police guns not fired in the air but leveled at those in retreat."

In discussing the use of long, white unpainted hatchet handles as extra clubs against the fleeing strikers, many of whom were clubbed while prone and helpless on the ground, according to the report, the committee's testimony records that the Chicago police, "when confronted by photographic evidence that could not be denied or explained away, took the position that the incident in question represented only an isolated use of excessive force which could both be understood and defended because of the passions aroused in the breasts of individual patrolmen by the conduct of the marchers."

On Capitol Hill

Barkley Leads Two Lost Causes, Plans to Call Wage-Hour Bill Next Week.

IN HIS FIRST DAY on the job, Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, the Democrats' new floor leader, started off by leading two hopelessly lost causes—the court bill and farm interest rate bill fights—and wound up by announcing he will call up the Black-Connery wage and hour bill next week.

The genial Kentuckian said the bill has been so modified as to escape prolonged debate and that therefore its early passage appeared likely. He declined to go any further, however, in disclosing legislative plans for the rest of the session.

Of at least equal interest to most persons on Capitol Hill is the question of adjournment, and on that, too, Barkley was silent.

Meanwhile, on the House side the Labor Committee was pursuing its work on the wage and hour bill by refusing to exempt workers in the fresh fruit and vegetable industry from regulation.

An amendment for such exemption was offered by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, which would have taken from under provisions of the bill workers employed in growing and marketing perishable fruits and vegetables. The vote on the amendment was 11 to 8.

BI-PARTISANSHIP colored Senate activities when Senators Berry (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, joined in a demand for a Congressional investigation to find out how American steel and iron scrap is being used after it is exported.

Discussing a resolution they introduced, Bridges said:

"There are no facts before Congress indicating whether or not an embargo on scrap is necessary to keep foreign nations from a bloody war."

He added the investigation would provide information on whether an embargo would keep the domestic supply of scrap intact and keep prices within a fair range for American iron and steel producers.

"American users of scrap, collectors of scrap and Army and Navy experts," Bridges said, "should all be given a chance to be heard before Congress considers an iron and steel scrap embargo."

ABATEMENT OF ONE average citizen's nuisance was favored by the Senate when it passed a bill allowing the filing of income tax returns without an oath . . . Improvement of Mobile Harbor at a cost of $76,000 was added by the Senate Commerce Committee to the omnibus rivers and harbors bill . . . Louisiana fared even better, however, when the committee added the $9,200,000 Calcasieu waterway and several other projects in that State to the bill . . . Senator Pepper, of Florida, said President Roosevelt has asked a report from the DeSoto commission on a proposed $350,000 appropriation for a celebration in 1939 at Tampa in honor of the 400th anniversary of DeSoto's landing on this continent.

REPRESENTATIVE CITRON (Democrat), of Connecticut, asked the Federal Bureau of Investigation to "investigate at once" the so-called "Nazi military training camps being established at Andover, N. J., and other places."

Camp Nordland, at Andover, has been set up by the German-American Bund.

In a letter to the bureau, Citron said his informants had complained about 17 such camps in the United States, "all oft hem seemingly under a single, planned organization whose probable financial backing, direction and control are not only by aliens but probably indirectly the present German government."

It would seem, he wrote, "that a supposedly friendly nation is conducting itself, through subversive activities, in such a way as not only to create ill-feeling within the boundaries of this country, but also in violation of law and the spirit of our laws."

A $15,000,000 REDUCTION in the Navy's planned $21,000,000 shore construction program was proposed by the Senate Naval Affairs Committee yesterday.

The committee recommended to the Senate authorization for the Navy to proceed with projects totaling $6,099,057. The bill originally before the committee would also have authorized construction of a $15,000,000 naval supply depot at Oakland, Calif.

DR. R. C. FOSTER, president of the University of Alabama, advocated legislation authorizing grants to each State for establishment of engineering and industrial research stations.

Speaking for the State University Association, an organization of State schools, Dr. Foster told a House Interstate Commerce subcommittee such stations would help develop and conserve the Nation's natural resources.

He suggested grants start at $20,000 for each State this year and step up to $60,000 in 1942 and annually thereafter.

THE OMNIBUS FLOOD control and river and harbors bills, authorizing the expenditures of approximately $73,500,000 on projects throughout the country, reached the Senate. It carried the new projects named above and a few others.

The Commerce Committee approved both measures after making a number of changes in the form in which they passed the House.

The rivers and harbors bill would authorize $48,715,525 in improvements by the War Department.

The flood-control measure would permit expenditures of $24,877,000 for levees, flood walls and drainage structures to protect cities and towns in the Ohio River Basin.

Gold Stocks Drop To $12,402,226,982

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury reported yesterday the first decline in its huge gold holdings since the gold sterilization program was inaugurated last December.

Gold stocks declined $41,777,543 on Tuesday to $12,402,226,982, the Treasury said. The decline presumably was due to operations under one or both of the Treasury's new monetary agreements with China and Brazil.

The Treasury supply of silver bullion increased only $930,290 on July 20. If part of the decline in gold holdings resulted from sales to China, however, a purchase of silver from China need not necessarily have taken place coincidentally.

Widow of Crater Denies Asserting Judge Was Slain

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 22.—District Attorney William C. Dodger today invited Mrs. Stella M. Crater to tell him "the entire story" about the disappearance of her husband, former Supreme Court Justice Joseph Force Crater, seven years ago.

"Frankly, I don't know one way or the other what happened to him," he told reporters, "but I shall be glad to make a thorough investigation of the entire matter."

In a letter to Mrs. Crater, Dodge said:

"If you said that your husband, Judge Joseph Force Crater, was slain, I assume that you are in possession of some facts on which that statement was made. . . ."

NLRB Partisan, Unfit to Judge, Nye Declares

Senator Charges Board's Attitude in Disputes Proves Bias.

Senator Gerald Nye (Republican), North Dakota, charged yesterday that the National Labor Relations Board "seems to have gone out of its way to demonstrate to the public that it is a partisan body rather than a judicial institution. It has disqualified itself as a referee between management and workers."

Saying he had no interest in any specific case before the board, the Senator, in a statement, declared "we would be less than truthful if we acted on the presumption that the NLRB has been nonpartisan and dispanssionate in its activities."

Declares Accord Is Duty.

It is "far better to scrap a governmental bureau," he said, if there is no alternative, "than to let that bureau make hash of our national welfare." The country's future he held to be dependent upon conciliation and co-operation. "It is up to the referee to bring about accord between the disputants," he warned, adding that "this, most emphatically is not being accomplished."

He does not want "to see the Government umpire batting for either side," he added, and he cautioned the friends of labor "who hail the obvious partisanship of the N. L. R. B." that there may come a day "when another governmental body of the same type will use its tremendous powers to oppress labor."

Expressing "the highest respect" for the personal integrity of the board members, J. Warren Madden, Edwin S. Smith and Donald Wakefield Smith, the North Dakotan added that public statements by the three "clearly indicate that they are not only partisans but that they have also taken sides in labor's internal disputes, at a time most injurious to the cause of the labor movement'." Referring to the breach between the American Federation of Labor, headed by William Green, and the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization, the Senator said "the N. L. R. B. has such a pronounced pro-C. I. O. bias that the average man regards it as an adjunct."

Lacks Public Confidence.

It would be equally bad or worse, he added, "if it had a pro-capital bias."

The North Dakotan said the charge has been made openly that the N. L. R. B. "is a recruiting office for the C. I. O." While not passing on the charge itself, he added that "it is obvious that the public has no confidence in the efficacy of the N. L. R. B. and the basis of that lack of confidence lies in the board's failure to promote and restore economic harmony."

Nye referred to David J. Saposs, industrial adviser to the board, as "an associate of the Brookwood Labor College, a close friend of William Zebulon Foster, author of a book entitled 'Left Wing Unionism,' which endorses Foster's and Stalin's doctrine of boring from within," and said he is, in effect, "the public prosecutor or district attorney for the N. L. R. B.

"I have no fault to find with Mr. Saposs' views or convictions," the statement continued, "but it is obvious that he has no place on a semijudicial body."

Garner Shows Nation He's No Throttlebottom By Canny Strategy in Ending Court Struggle

water, which he meant ordinary drinking water.

Then he commenced his conference with those on the train. Those who conferred with the Vice President reported he had been noncommittal regarding the legislative crisis which had developed. He chiefly asked questions, apparently seeking to appraise the situation which had developed in his absence.

On Monday the Vice President had a press conference aboard the train. He appeared more determined than ever and less communicative. He warned the dozen newspapermen who gathered around him they would get nothing out of him, except an announcement he was neutral in the Senate leadership fight. Asked to specify the plans of the week for the Senate, he replied: "Better wait and see—if I told you now, it would not be news when it happened."

The conferences went on. By the time the special train reached Washington at midnight Monday, "Cactus Jack" apparently had made up his mind, for Tuesday morning he was closeted with President Roosevelt. What he told the President remains their secret, but it is understood that in his colloquial phraseology he told Mr. Roosevelt that "something was rotten up the crick" and that the court fight was lost. Apparently he persuaded Mr. Roosevelt that the time had come to admit that defeat.

Gets Proponents in Line.

He returned to Capitol Hill and got the leaders of the opposition into a corner and let them know they had won, but he also told them, as he reiterated before the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday, that they must not forget the President remained the head of the party, and urged them not to give any unnecessary "kicks in the face" to the President. Then he had to persuade the more ardent of the court proponents to agree to let the opponents write their own ticket.

The results of his work became evident yesterday as the agreements were publicly made and the Supreme Court issue publicly abandoned. Even at the last minute the Vice President left the chair to bring the volatile Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, into line for the motion to recommit the court bill.

Throughout the 32 years of his presence on Capitol Hill, "Cactus Jack" always has been a dynamic figure. He became by long experience and association with the masters of politics one of the shrewdest conciliators ever to sit in Congress. He was known as such as Democratic floor leader of the House and as Speaker of that body.

Never Was Figurehead.

He did not become a figurehead when he moved his "trappings" from the House to the Senate wing of the Capitol March 4, 1933. For many years the Vice President had become known as an unnecessary appendage of the Federal Government, essential only in the event of the President's death. Sometimes one would assume the task of doing the President's "dining out," or shared some of his social duties.

President Harding made a place at the Cabinet table for Vice President Calvin Coolidge, but the latter had little to do with the affairs of Government until he became President, when he professed ignorance of things that had happened previously. Vice President Charles G. Dawes became famous for sleeping through a tie-vote in the Senate, while Vice President Charles Curtis made the front pages only because of his sister's battle for precedence at dinner tables. For a Vice President to take a hand in the affairs of the Senate prior to March 4, 1933, was unthinkable.

Steered Controversial Bills.

Thus when George S. Kaufman and Morris Ryskind a few years ago wrote their rollicking musical comedy "Of Thee I Sing," their Vice President Alexander Throttlebottom, a well intentioned, but inoffensive, timid man, who spent his time feeding the pigeons and following tourist guides around Washington, became one of the most popular characters to tread the American stage. The public liked Vice President Throttlebottom, in the person of Victor Moore, for he seemed so true to life.

But "Cactus Jack" Garner was never a Throttlebottom. He cared nothing for social precedence and dined out only three or four times a year, retiring on the other nights promptly at 9 o'clock. But he kept track of what went on in the Senate during the last four years, and quietly laid out the strategy for the pasage of several controversial measures. Occasionally since he has been vice president he has taken a hand in the affairs of the House.

Now "Cactus Jack" has written in bold letters his name across the final chapter to the momentous, Nation-shaking Supreme Court fight. When it was all over yesterday, he called for "some branch water" and last night retired at 9 o'clock as usual.

Former Banker Is Named Chief Of Immigration

Roosevelt Picks James L. Houghteling to Take MacCormack Job.

James L. Houghteling, former banker and newspaper executive, was nominated yesterday by President Roosevelt to be commissioner of Immigration, succeeding the late Col. Daniel W. MacCormack.

Houghteling in 1917 married Laura Delano, of Washington, and is, therefore, a cousin of the President by marriage. He is a native of Chicago.

From 1909 to 1920 a member of the banking firm of Peabody, Houghteling & Co., Chicago, he joined the staff of the New York Evening Post in 1920. He went with the Chicago Daily News in 1921, but left after a few months to become chief editorial writer for the Chicago Evening Post. In 1923 he rejoined the Chicago Daily News and was vice president and treasurer from 1927 to 1931.

At the time of the overthrow of the Russian Czar in 1917, Houghteling was an American Embassy attache at Petrograd. He wrote "A Diary of the Russian Revolution."

A Yale University graduate, Houghteling is a member of the Illinois committee on immigration and naturalization.

He was a captain of artillery in the World War and served in the Argonne and Meuse offensives.

He and Mrs. Houghteling have four children, James Lawrence, Margaret Stuyvesant, Frederic Delano and Louise Delano.

Sachems Back Dooling Choice Of Copeland

Leader Keeps Tammany Hold as Candidate Is Indorsed, 15 to 8.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 22.—Tammany, stronghold of Manhattan's Democrat, upheld its leader, James J. Dooling, tonight and voted Senator Royal S. Copeland as Tammany's candidate in the forthcoming Democratic primary for mayor.

The district chieftains balloted 15 for Senator Copeland and 8 for Grover Whalen, who had been designated by the Democratic leaders of four other New York City boroughs as their candidate to oppose the incumbent Mayor F. H LeGuardia, fusion candidate.

The test of Dooling's leadership, several times threatened in recent months, came in a meeting of the executive committee.

New Deal Main Issue.

A week ago, Dooling said Senator Copeland was Tammany's candidate. The Democratic Leaders of Kings, Queens, Bronx and Richmond counties declined to follow Dooling, and selected Whalen, former police commissioner and now president of the New York World's Fair Corporation, to carry a New Deal banner in the campaign.

It was considered virtually certain both Copeland and Whalen would enter the September 16 primary with the New Deal as the paramount issue.

Leaders of the Democratic organizations of the four boroughs indorsing Whalen have been friendly to Postmaster General James A. Farley.

The Dooling-Copeland forces gained considerable strength on the eve of tonight's showdown by effecting an alliance with a third faction that had been seeking the nomination for Borough President Samuel Levy.

Levy, Prial on Ticket.

As a result of this move, Dooling announced Levy would run for President of the City Council on a ticket headed by Senator Copeland. His choice for the third city-wide office, that of comptroller, was Frank J. Prial, head of the Civil Service organization in the city.

Whalen's running mates were Comptroller Frank J. Taylor, who seeks renomination, and Max J. Schneider, for council president.

Dooling was elevated to his post three years ago after the Republican-Fusion victory with LaGuardia had led to a shakeup.

State May Push Baby Kidnap Case

Abduction charges against Mrs. Marian W. Campbell, Washington school teacher, may be pressed despite reluctance of the parents of 20-month-old Philip Shane to prosecute.

Mrs. Campbell, arrested Monday for abducting the Shane child, was released yesterday on $1,000 bond, $500 on the abduction charge and $500 on a charge driving while intoxicated.

Alan Bowie, Prince Georges County prosecutor, said that the wishes of Mrs. Alice Shane to drop kidnaping charges were of "no interest to the State.

Bowie said he would reserve decision until after a hearing Thursday at Hyattsville.

Summerlin Heads Protocol Division

By the Associated Press.

The State Department announced appointment yesterday of George Thomas Summerlin, now Minister to Panama, as chief of a newly created division of protocol.

Richard Southgate, present chief of the division of protocol and conferences, the department said, would head a new division of international conferences.

The announcement explained that growth of the protocol work—drafting proposed diplomatic papers—in connection with international conferences and congresses made it essential to divide the division into two sections.

Senate Agreement Killing Bill to Enlarge Supreme Court Comes as Climax of Epic Fig

Roosevelt in Message Urged Change to Meet National Need

January 6—President Roosevelt, in his annual message to Congress, declares that "means must be found to adapt our legal forms and our judicial interpretation to actual present national needs," and that "it is not to be assumed that there will be prolonged failure to bring legislative and judicial action into closer harmony." He added that a Constitutional amendment was not required.

February 5—President Roosevelt, on ground of congestion and delay in courts, proposed legislation authorizing him to name six new justices to Supreme Court by device of naming additional jurist for each incumbent over 70, who, having served 10 years on Federal bench, failed to retire within six months of that age; plan also applied same principle for appointing additional judges to lower courts and provided for procedural reform.

February 6—Reports of Attorney-General and Solicitor-General showing no congestion in Supreme Court and no relation between aged judges and congestion in lower courts disclosed.

February 7—Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, leads group of Southern Democrats in declaring opposition to President's plan.

February 8—Senators Borah and Johnson, leaders of the famed fight against American entry into the League of Nations, assail plan.

February 10—House passes Sumners-McCarran bill permitting Supreme Court justices to retire (on full pay) at the age of 70, after serving ten years on the Federal bench.

February 13—Senator Wheeler, Western Democratic liberal and running mate of the elder La Follette in 1924, denounces President's plan; young Senator LaFollette declares in favor of it.

Cummings Backs Bill.

February 14—Attorney General Cummings pleads for adoption of bill on ground "it is essential that new blood be infused into our judiciary." The Baltimore Catholic Review has front page editorial proclaiming "Hands-Off Supreme Court."

February 15—Senator Glass assails Cummings' speech as "evasive." Senator Burke contends constitutional amendment is proper solution.

February 17—American Federation of Labor indorses President's plan.

February 18—Farm groups become active on behalf of court bill.

February 26—Senate passes Sumners-McCarran retirement bill.

March 1—Supreme Court votes 5 to 4 to uphold validity of Congressional resolution abrogating gold clause in contracts where bullion was specified.

March 4—President Roosevelt at Democratic Victory Dinner, in fighting speech, declares economic conditions made court plan necessary and that it must be passed "now, now, now."

Sees Economic Collapse.

March 9—President, in fireside chat to Nation, adopts more conciliatory tone, declaring threat of another economic collapse made his bill necessary; sharply assails Supreme Court conservatives.

March 10—Attorney General Cummings appears as first witness on behalf of bill as Senate Judiciary Committee opens hearings on measure.

March 22—Sentaor Wheeler reads before Judiciary Committee letter from Chief Justice Hughes, indorsed by Justices Brandeis and Van Devanter, denying any congestion in that tribunal's docket and pointing out court could not sit in sections or divisions.

March 29—Supreme Court upholds, by 5-to-4 vote, Washington State minimum-wage law, thus reversing its decision in Adkins case, 14 years before; also upholds validity of collective-bargaining provisions of railway labor act.

April 23—Senate Judiciary Committee concludes hearings after receiving views on both sides from 82 persons and compiling a record of 2,040 printed pages.

AD ONE— HISTORY

April 28—Senate Judiciary Committee splits, 10 to 8, against bill as Senators McCarran, O'Mahoney and Hatch reveal their opposition.

No Compromise, Says Farley.

May 14—Postmaster-General Farley leaving the White House says there will be "no compromise" and makes his now famous remarks about Senatorial consciences in referring to Senators O'Mahoney and McCarran.

May 18—Justice Van Devanter announces he will retire from Supreme Court on June 2. Senate Judiciary Committee votes, 10 to 8, for adverse report on court bill, after several compromises offered by Administration supporters are rejected.

May 24—Supreme Court upholds unemployment social security taxes by 5 to 4 vote, upholds old-age pension taxes by 7 to 2.

June 1—Supreme Court adjourns for summer recess.

June 2—Democratic Senate leader Robinson discusses with Senator Hatch compromise based on authority to President to name additional justices to Supreme Court for each incumbent over 75 years old, but not more than one appointment to be made in any calendar year.

President Assails Court.

June 4—President in press conference assails Supreme Court for going on vacation without acting decisively on litigation testing validity of the TVA and utility holding company acts.

June 15—Senator Robinson quietly working with Senators Hatch and Logan to perfect proposed compromise.

June 25—President Roosevelt at Jefferson Islands holds first of three-day "harmony" meetings with House and Senate Democrats to repair the rift in party.

July 2—Senators Hatch and Logan introduced in Senate compromise along lines of original Hatch proposal.

July 6—Senator Robinson started debate in Senate on Court bill, offering Hatch-Logan compromise as substitute for original bill and defies opposition to filibuster measure.

Debate Is Bitter.

July 8—Little used Senate rules invoked to restrict debate on bill as controversy reaches bitterness rare in Senate, widening Democratic split.

July 9—Senator Wheeler opens attack on bill.

July 13.—Chairman Sumners of House Judiciary Committee, without notice, delivered one hour attack on Court bill, asserting that his committee would not give compromise a favorable report should Senate pass it.

July 14—Senator Robinson was found dead in his apartment and entire legislative program on Capitol Hill thrown into confusion. Truce declared until Robinson is buried.

July 15—President in letter to Senator Barkley asserted truce has been broken; insisted all his judiciary reorganization objectives remain the same, but that he is not interested in particular measure; banned constitutional amendment as solution.

July 16—Word given out that President is still for court bill and that Southern and Western Senators are using it as "punching bag" to prevent passage of wages and hours bill.

July 17—Tension over Supreme Court fight and split in Democratic Party caused bitter discussions as Democrats travel to Little Rock, Ark., to bury their dead leader.

July 18—Vice President Garner boarded special train for Washington from Robinson funeral and commenced conferences with Senate Democrats.

July 19—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman issued letter to Senator Robert F. Wagner assailing bill and asserting need for independent judiciary.

July 20—Vice President Garner informed President of determined bitter opposition to his bill; seven first-term Senators informed Garner they will vote to recommit measure to Judiciary Committee; President reported again willing to compromise, omitting reference to Supreme Court in bill, after second visit by Garner and other Senate leaders.

July 21—Garner told leaders of opposition they may "write own ticket," with agreement to recommit bill immediately.

July 22—After Judiciary Committee meeting, in which it was agreed to strip the bill of all provisions relating to Supreme Court and to provide additional judges for lower courts only on basis of need, Senate by vote of 70 to 20 recommitted bill to committee.

of adjusting electric rates in Washington, Pierce charged that there had been much propaganda and misinformation disseminated regarding it.

"The fact that the power trust everywhere is proclaiming the virtues of this plan and that it has the indorsement of certain Government officials," he said, "is not without significance."

Passage of the District tax bill by the Senate today may obviate the necessity for House action on the Kennedy emergency loan bill on Monday.

As the loan clause is carried in the tax measure, it probably will come before the House as part of the conference report as soon as an arrangement is reached.

Debate on the tax measure in the Senate will find the District Committee itself divided. Senator King, the chairman, is prepared to fight the Tydings rider, which has no application to the District, but seeks to sanction State price-fixing laws.

McCarran Handles Bill.

King also is opposed to the $1 land tax and the sales tax, but he has indicated he will go along with the committee on these levies.

It was because of his opposition to the Tydings proviso that Senator King turned the bill over to Senator McCarran to report and handle on the floor.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, has given notice that he will battle the sales tax vigorously along with Senator Capper, of Kansas, ranking minority member of the District Committee.

An amendment to eliminate the land tax and substitute ice and fuel for clothing as an exemption under the sales tax was being considered by Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire.

The Senator stated, however, he had not decided whether to press the amendments last night.

Thomas Has Amendments.

Senator Thomas, chairman of the subcommittee on District appropriations, introduced two amendments before the Senate took a recess yesterday and said he will ask they be adopted today.

One of them, however, is already in the bill. It is the authorization for the District to obtain Treasury loans. The other is the parking meter authorization that was stricken out of the tax bill in the House and off the District supply bill in the Senate.

The tax bill came very near being passed by unanimous consent yesterday.

king and of their governments had something to do with persuading the two powers to seek peace.

The head of the Chinese government, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, was described as having presided over a stormy session of Nanking leaders this morning and to have thrown his power in favor of a "wait and see" policy which his colleagues finally adopted.

Authoritative sources in Tokyo made it known the war office issued orders indefinitely suspending deliveries on large war contracts, which was taken as indication the government was convinced major war had been averted.

The war office also halted shipments of war materials to North China. The suspended contracts dealt with munitions, motor fuel and motor transport.

Experienced observers expressed conviction civilian elements in Japan had regained a large measure of control over the imperial policy and put the brakes on plans of impetuous militarists to make further advances into North China.

It was admitted that the North China truce, if it becomes effective, may be merely a suspension of the long-continued conflict of the two powers. Large issues, of grave import to the Orient and possibly to the world, remain unsolved.

Senate Enacts Low Rate Loan Bill Over Veto

Measure to Keep Down Farmers' Interest Passed, 71 to 19.

ator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, was along the line of economy. But that effort, like all others, was successfully resisted by the Congress.

"Now today I'm not going to support this effort to begin economy on the farmer.

"It doesn't affect my State very much. It doesn't affect me politically because the probability is I shall be dead before my term shall have expired in the Senate.

"In fairness to the farmers, I will vote to override."

Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, Republican leader in the Senate, charging the President has not made any substantial attempt to balance the budget, said, "I think it is very unfortunate that the President should talk now of balancing the budget by taking money away from the poor man who has mortgaged his farm to stay in business."

This was the second occasion at the present session of the Congress when both houses have overriden a Presidential veto. On June 1 the Senate and the House joined in voting a bill to extend temporary Government insurance policies of World War veterans for another five years.

The President's veto had been based on a number of considerations, particularly his belief that "there is no justification for continued Government subsidy of Federal Land-Bank interest rates below the unprecedentedly low rate these banks are now offering farmer-borrowers on a business basis."

He had stated in his message that approval of the bill would be "inconsistent" with his intention to balance the budget.

The bill affects about 640,000 Federal Land Bank borrowers and some 455,000 borrowers from land bank commissioners. The President had said that the bill's enactment would mean a $52,900,000 "gift" from the Treasury to individual borrowers on the first type of loan, and would reduce the annual income of the Farm Mortgage Corporation by about $8,350,000 on the second type.

The vote by which the Senate overrode yesterday President Roosevelt's veto of the farm interest rate bill:

Commissioner Sultan announced he would issue an order for resumption of work at the disputed projects today, to become effective Monday, based on Secretary Perkins' ruling.

Violation ofboth the Wagner labor relations act nad the Bacon-Davis act controlling wages paid workers on public contracts, was charged by the painters in their appeal to the National Labor Relations Board.

Meanwhile, Holcombe pointed out, the walkout of painters on Government projects made it probable that almost 200 members of one of the highest paid of the building trades, the iron workers, might be without work within a few hours.

He pointed out that 98 per cent of these iron workers are employed on the Archives Building, and their work has reached the point where painters are necessary to complete it.

Conference Is Held.

A conference was held yesterday between Holcombe and other officials of the painters and the legal division of the International Brotherhood of Elevator Constructors.

In its formal charges against William Wilson & Son and Coons and Raptis, the painters' union, through Harry S. Wender, its attorney, and Holcombe, charged violation, in the case of the Williams firm, of the Wagner act, and in the case of Coons & Patis, violation of the Bacon-Davis act.

The Wilson Co., according to the charges, is working painters eight hours per day for straight-time pay, while "it is the established custom in this city to work only seven hours per day." It also charged that ordinary laborers were being worked on the job place of painters.

Roosevelt Bill to Increase Court Dies in Senate by 70 to 20 Vote

Dramatic Struggle Is Halted To Frustrate Split in Party

Calm Finish Takes Place After Garner and Barkley Give Up; New Measure Will Be Devoid of All Controversial Features.

Reassignment of judges by the senior circuit judge of local circuits.

Appointment of new judges based on need, not age.

These are the seven articles on which the new "procedural" lower court reform bill will be framed at meetings of the Judiciary Committee beginning at 10:30 this morning.

And it was on the basis of this agreement that Senator Marvel M. Logan, of Kentucky, rose in the Senate yesterday to ask unanimous consent "to make a motion to recommit to the Committee on the Judiciary Senate bill 1392, to reorganize the judicial branch of the Government, with all amendments thereto.

Logan, who had collaborated with the Administration in drafting the doomed substitute bill providing one addition to the Supreme Court each year, volunteered to make the ...tion after Senator Barkley de... injurious ... honor.

breach be... ...eratio... was cleared by a committee ...tion made by Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, and seconded by O'Mahoney. This stipulated the committee would report a new bill on condition the old bill was removed from the Senate calendar. Only Senator Carl A. Hatch, of New Mexico, co-author with Logan of the substitute plan, and Senator James H. Hughes, of Delaware, dissented in committee.

This was all that was officially revealed, but behind the closed doors of the committee was plenty of plain talk by Vice President Garner, hot words by opponents over possible "reprisals," and an unsuccessful effort by Barkley to avoid formal recommittal of the President's bill.

So the fight actually was over when Logan arose in the Senate. It was officially documented when one by one all but 20 Senators gave their assent to the plan, many grudgingly with weak, unenthusiastic "ayes" that brought laughter from the galleries.

Fifty-three Democrats, 16 Republicans and 1 Farmer-Laborite voted to recommit the bill. Eighteen Democrats, one Progressive and one Farmer-Laborite, many resentful at what some privately called their "let-down" by the Administration, loudly boomed their "noes."

Then came the happy but ungloating exchanges of court plan oppor... in the cloakrooms, mutual congratulations and a graceful acceptance of "defeat" by Chairman Henry F. Ashurst of the Judiciary Committee.

Party Split Averted.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, liberal leader of the opposition, and Senator Burke, co-leader, each bestowed the laurel of triumph on his colleague in an amusing Alfonse and Gaston scene.

For them it was the happy ending of a near-tragic drama. For Vice President Garner, central figure in the peaceful settlement, who received both in his Capitol office, it was the end of a threatened party split and a practical armistice in the best interests of the country, the President and the Democratic organization.

Senate action was brisk, without repetition of the bitter debates that have made the chamber a court battleground.

"After a very full and free hearing this morning," Logan explained to the Senate, "the Committee on the Judiciary directed me to make this request, with the understanding that it would be instructed to report a bill for the reform of the judiciary within ten days if my motion should prevail. I ask unanimous consent that I may be authorized to make the motion at this time."

Parliamentary Mixup.

There was a brief parliamentary mixup as Vice President Garner prematurely put the motion to recommit. On remonstrance from the floor he then obtained consent for Logan to make his motion.

Senator Hiram Johnson, California Republican, wanted further explanation. He asked what Logan meant by "judicial reform."

Logan said the committee reached an "understanding" they did not think it was necessary to put in the motion.

"The senior Senator from Wyoming, Mr. O'Mahoney, wrote out what we had before us in the committee," explained the Kentuckian. "It was a statement of what had been said, I believe, by the leader and some others, and that did not refer to the Supreme Court. That was not to be considered at all, I might say."

"The Supreme Court is out of the way?" asked Johnson.

"The Supreme Court is out of the way," confirmed Logan.

But further explanation was in order. Senator Warren R. Austin, Vermont Republican, took exception to Logan's language in presenting the motion. Austin said the committee agreed to make a report in 10 days "not on a bill to reform the judiciary, but on a bill for reform of judicial procedure."

Logan said he had written down the committee suggestion and submitted it to Burke for approval. He said his memo stated that "Senate bill 1392, with all amendments, should be re-referred to the Judiciary Committee with instructions to report a bill relating to judicial reform."

"Exactly," said Austin.

"Within ten days," continued Logan. "That is the exact language that was agreed upon and that is the motion which I undertook to make."

Before the vote was ordered by Garner, Logan obtained permission of the Senate to print along with his remarks a speech he had prepared to "make my position clear." Logan, who made one of the opening speeches for the court bill, once before complained he was not given an opportunity, because of the crossfire of questions, to make a connected speech.

To assure a record vote on the Logan motion, Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary demanded the "ayes and nays."

Minton Says "Aye."

Majority Leader Barkley, Chairman Ashurst and a score of other formerly ardent court bill supporters joined in the vote to recommit the bill. One of the most enthusiastic court reform advocates — Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana—who was observed in intense discussion with Garner before the Senate met, barely whispered "aye." There was general laughter, and Garner rapped loudly for order.

Behind the scenes accounts of Garner's earlier speech before the Senate Judiciary Committee, told of an ungarnished, man-to-man, plain-spoken talk by the Vice President.

In effect, Garner told the group, one Senator said:

"There is no use kidding yourselves. No matter what your ideas are, everybody with any sense knows that all proposals with reference to the Supreme Court are out of the window."

Garner said he was interested in settling the whole dispute as quickly as possible for the sake of the country, the President and the Democratic Party.

Opponents Are Warned.

He warned opponents of the court program that President Roosevelt still heads the Democratic party and urged them not to give the President unnecessary "kicks in the face."

Then there was a good old-fashioned family row. Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, is said to have declared Postmaster General James A. Farley is grooming a man to run against him for re-election next year, and to have sought assurance there "will be no reprisals." Assistant Attorney General Joseph Keenan, in charge of Justice Department patronage, and active in support of the court bill, came in for his share of opposition criticism.

Garner and Barkley said they could only speak for themselves, and so far as they were concerned there would be no reprisals.

"This thing has split the party and has the country turned upside down," Garner is reported to have said. "We must have party harmony for the country's good. You are saying mean things about each other which you shouldn't be saying."

McCarran was reported to have said that if "Joe Keenan" was sent back to the Attorney General's office, and if "Jim Farley" was confined to the Postoffice "you'll get the party harmony you are looking for."

Another fight developed around the plea of Barkley that the court bill be left on the Senate calendar and action be "postponed indefinitely." To this the opposition refused to assent, insisting on a motion to recommit until Monday, and failed in this also.

Wheeler Hails Vote

Both Garner and Barkley left the meeting without comment to newsmen.

But after the vote in the Senate, Barkley said:

"The Senate's action today indicated a desire among a large majority of the Senate to obtain substantial legislation at this session with reference to judicial reform. The reference of the bill to committee I hope will result in accomplishment of that legislation."

Senator Wheeler said the Senate vote was "a great victory for the American people." He said he believed it would put an end to any further talk of a split in the Democratic Party. Then he paid tribute to his opposition coleagues, particularly to Burke, who was standing nearby.

"Never in my life have I seen a group that has worked together so unselfishly," the Montanan said.

Burke strolled over and placed his hand to Ashurst's forehead.

"No blood there," Burke laughed. "My head is bowed, but unbloody," smiled Ashurst.

Burke turned serious.

"I want you to know," he said to the Arizonan, "I am going to waive some of my convictions in order to bring a strong bill out of the Judiciary Committee, carrying out the President's objectives."

Later the Nebraskan explained he was referring particularly to the Sumners bill, to expedite Government intervention in constitutional cases, and appeals to the Supreme Court. He said he would "go along on that" now, although he had previously favored no action.

"And we are willing to give them from 12 to 20 lower court judges in places where they can show they need them," Burke said. "But it must be based on need, not age."

Ashurst was joshed by his friends of the press, and joined in the merriment. He told how Senator Glass, of Virginia, had handed him two handkerchiefs after he voted to recommit his own bill.

"You'll need both to wipe away your tears," he said Glass had chuckled.

"I wish some day," declared the ever versatile Ashurst, "I could have a victory so I could prove I am just as gracious in victory as I am in defeat."

Then the judiciary chairman assured reporters there would be no tricks in the Administration's court strategy.

No Sleight of Hand.

"There will be no sleight of hand," he said. "Nobody wants to put anything over. We wouldn't do it even if we could, and I don't think we could."

Opponents earlier had expressed fears that the Senate's action might be reversed in the House, but yesterday they said they received assurances this would not be attempted.

One recourse they have to prevent such an attempt, it was pointed out, is to place the forthcoming lower court reform bill as a rider on the Sumners bill to expedite Government participation and action in constitutional cases. That bill already has passed the House and is now pending before the Judiciary Committee. If such strategy was adopted, it would not be necessary for the new bill to go to the House. It would go to conference, instead, and later the completed conference report would come before both houses for action.

McCarran "Gratified."

Commenting on the Senate's action last night, Senator McCarran said the opposition's chief "consolation" comes in the knowledge that "the new leader of the Senate, Senator Barkley, undoubtedly reflected the attitude of the President of the United States in voting with us to recommit the bill."

"The special gratification that I get," said McCarran, "is that by the action of those members of the Judiciary Committee and those who stood with us in the fight, we have brought to the attention of the President of the United States and to the attention of the people of the United States the fact that he was led into error, and being led into error, he is big enough and strong enough to admit his error, and the country is now safe.

Sees U. S. Leading World.

"Our form of Government will go on and lead a torn world along lines and avenues as intended by progressive civilization."

Speaking for the American Bar Association's special committee on the Supreme Court proposal, Sylvester C. Smith, chairman, commented on the Senate's action in a statement last night:

"This will meet the aproval of four out of five of the members of the American Bar who expressed their opinion in that ratio during a recent poll."

Smith said any forthcoming lower court legislation "should be based on accurate fact-finding and a recognized need for speeding up justice."

He said the American Bar Association has always favored additional judges in the lower courts, where needed, to speed up the administration of justice.

A referenda conducted by the association favored intervention by the Attorney General and direct appeal to the Supreme Court in cases involving constitutionality of any statute.

thermore, there is little sentiment on Capitol Hill for taking a recess until October and then working through the fall months.

Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley yesterday said he expected, if possible, to call up the Black wages and hours bill next week. This measure was reported two weeks ago by the Senate Labor Committee, in a greatly revised form from the original Administration measure. In its present form there is not a great deal of objection to the bill, but efforts to restore it to its original form undoubtedly would stir up a bitter fight.

Even should the Senate pass the bill in its present form, the measure may run into stormy weather and in the end be left in conference between House and Senate. Reports from the House Labor Committee are to the effect that body does not propose to go along with the revisions made by the Senate committee but will report a measure containing many of the discretionary grants of powers to a wage board stricken out by the Black committee.

Reorganization Opposed.

The fate of the farm legislation remains in doubt. Neither Senate nor House committees have held hearings on pending bills and it is too late now for extended inquiry. Senator Barkley explained he would like to have action on this legislation if it could be gotten out of committee in time. The prospects, however, are none too bright for that.

One solution for that problem now being considered by leaders is to authorize the House and Senate Agriculture Committees to sit during adjournment, hold hearings on the pending farm bills and have a measure ready for House and Senate consideration immediately after Congress convenes next January. If action then were prompt, it would satisfy the exigencies of the farm situation as seen by the Administration.

The Senate Labor Committee is about ready to report on the Wagner housing bill and may do so today or the first of next week. Senator Barkley said he would like to take up the housing measure after the Senate acted on the wages and hours measure.

The joint committee of House and Senate which has been investigating income tax avoidance as a prelude to plugging up loopholes in the existing law is scheduled to meet today and a bill should be ready for House action sometime next week. This measure is not expected to stir up any controversy or require extended discussion.

The bitterest sort of controversy exists over the President's bill for reorganization of the executive departments and it is a foregone conclusion this program will not be enacted in its entirety. Certainly the President's proposals regarding extension of the merit service throughout the Federal Government and giving him power to shift about, consolidate and abolish Federal agencies will not be enacted at this time.

The House has divided the executive reorganization program into four bills. Two may receive favorable House action within a week. The first, which will be taken up today, would authorize the President to appoint six administrative assistants. The other would provide for reorganization of the General Accounting Office, lodging in that agency authority to make a post-audit of all expenditures. It will be reported to the House next week.

But whether the Senate will approve either of these two measures is problematical. No hearings have been held on the reorganization program by any Senate committee and there is a general inclination to let the subject lie over until next year. The late Senator Joseph T. Robinson, who was chairman of the Senate Reorganization Committee, was opposed to splitting up the program. So far none has been named to the vacant chairmanship.

In addition to these major Administration bills, Congress has before it a number of less controversial or less important measures to pass on. The Interior Department appropriation bill for the year which commenced on July 1 is still tied up in conference between House and Senate, the House again sending that bill back to conference yesterday.

Sugar Quota at Stake.

There also is agitation for action on a bill extending the quota system for sugar production since the existing law expires at the end of this year. The SEC is anxious to have amendments made to the act which created it, strengthening its authority over protective and reorganization committees. There also remains before the Senate the controversial Argentine sanitary convention awaiting ratification, much desired by the State Department.

Still another matter which may come before the Senate and cause some extended discussion is the appointment of a member of the Supreme Court to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Justice Willis Van Devanter. Mr. Roosevelt, however, has given no indication that he will make such an appointment before adjournment, or who he may name.

Barytone Wins Wardman Park 'Talent Quest'

Agriculture Bureau Entrant Carries Off Honors in Audition.

By Chanticleer

The first audition of the Wardman Park Hotel's "Quest for Talent" among the Government employes was won by Gordon Barnes, representing the Agriculture Department. The contest, which is held every Thursday night, offers a week's engagement at the Metronome room as the prize. All Government employes are eligible to enter. Mr. Barnes is a barytone.

Incidentally, if you have not availed yourself of the opportunity to "swim-dance" at the Wardman, now is the time to do so. Every night until 10 the pool is kept open for the convenience of the patrons of the Metronome room. Of course, the regular patrons of the pool also are invited. In the Metronome room dance music is provided by Jimmy Santmeyer and his orchestra.

"Sugar and spice and everything that's nice . . . that's what little girls are made of." So goes the nursery rhyme, but the modern personification of that verse may be found in the flesh any night gracing the orchestra stand of the rainbow room in the Hamilton Hotel. "Ginger" Lee is the young lady's name, and if you don't believe in nursery rhymes, just give yourself the opportunity of allowing your eyes the chance of convincing you that "Ginger" certainly is possessed of the sugar; most certainly has the spice, and we'll leave the decision as to "everything that's nice" up to your judgment.

The midsummer revue at the Lotus is creating a good impression on the patrons. Six talented young ladies bring one of the fastest, peppiest and altogether grand entertainments before the audience. Featured on this week's bill are Jordan and Grace in something different; Guido and Eva in creative dance moods and difficult adagio acrobatics; Marion Dawn, singing the latest song hits; the Franklin Sisters, rhythm queens of the revue, and Sue Harmon, doing individual acrobatics. Al Norton is master of ceremonies and Bill Strickland and his Capitolians are playing for dancing and accompaniment of the show. There are three shows daily. The first, a matinee performance at 1 p. m., the second at 7:30 p. m. and the last during the supper dance at 11:30 p. m. The Lotus is air conditioned and is one of the most popular places of dining and dancing in downtown Washington.

Jack Neal—he is the tall, thin lad who tries to hide behind the miniature piano at the Hi Hat Cocktail Room, but who, because of his stature and deep, resounding bass voice, never is quite able to remain out of the spotlight for long. Jack is the key-tinkling member of the Three M's, who entertain nightly at the Ambassador's cocktail room, and we are right in accord with the many who give him their sole attention when his voice booms out such popular favorites as "Old Man River." Listen to his piano rendition of "Nola" if you want another musical treat.

Whatever it is that keeps bringing the customers back to the Nightingale, the host, Mr. Ellsworth Nightingale, is determined to continue in the providing of such features for the increasing number of dancing Washingtonians who are fast learning of the delights of this spot. Thus, there is little fear that the music of Watson Powell and his note-blowers, the delicious dinners served at this Richmond highway nightery (3 miles below Alexandria) or the reign of popular prices will be superseded by anything less attractive at this spot.

Tucked neatly into a comfortable corner of the Commodore Hotel is one of Washington's most friendly and intimate cocktail bars . . . the Cork and Bottle. Unsophisticated is the word which most accurately describes not only the room, but its atmosphere and its patronage. Incidentally, it is a grand place to sip a drink and indulge in heavy thinking. Also a cozy place wherein to indulge in two-handed conversation. It's quiet, it's comfortable, it's inviting.

The three Russian aviators missed one of the best spots in the good old U. S. when they passed up the chance to visit Brinkley's, which is located in the Southeast section on Eighth street. At that they might not have been able to find a seat, and certainly with the music of Carl Gunther agitating the feet of the customers, the dance floor would have been hardly able to take care of them. However, don't make the mistake (as did these intrepid airmen) of not visiting this spot. Now, on your next flight into nightosphere, take off for Brinkley's.

Like Chef Jacques' biggest decorated cake is the Shoreham Terrace in midsummer. Covered thick with the rippling green of the grass and sprinkled generously with beads of bright color—tiny chairs and tables and figures. No wonder the Shoreham Terrace is so tempting when the things that make it up are just as good as the things that make up Jacques' cake.

Just now the eight Texas Rockets are the spice. They go to town in a choo-choo chug dance.

Heavily Laden Brigade Hikes to Ringgold, Md., Naps in Pup Tents.

By Phillip Austensen.

A Staff Correspondent.

Ringgold, Md., July 22.—A weary Fifty-eighth Infantry Brigade rested on its arms in bivouac here tonigh tas part of its brigade maneuvers, under command of Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock. Acting as a part of the Blue Army, the brigade marched from Camp Albert C. Ritchie this afternoon to cover debouchment of the Twenty-ninth Division from the passes of South Mountain between Waynesboro and Boonsboro.

Loaded with combat packs and in war array, the brigade hiked the 4 miles to its bivouac near Harbaugh Church and pitched pup tents for the night.

The brigade maneuver was planned to get the troops out of camp and in position for the pitting of the two regiments against each other in a sham battle tomorrow.

Whites to Defend Gold.

The First Infantry will become a part of the White Army of Albinia and will heva as its mission the defense of a store of gold in the canteen at the end of the parade ground in Camp Ritchie.

The brown army of Brusilia, represented by the Fifth Infantry, is to endeavor to capture the store of gold, and is assisted by airplanes and trucks, which the white army does not have. The problem is to demonstrate the superiority of a regiment with such air and truck complements.

The white army will retreat to a position in the middle of the parade ground at the camp and entrench. The brown army then will send its reserve battalion around camp by truck and attack the right rear of the white's.

Tourists to See Battle.

The finale of the battle will be staged in a natural amphitheater and it is expected that a number of visitors from nearby summer resorts will be on the neutral ground in camp to watch the battle.

The service company, First Infantry, of Silver Spring, received high praise at an inspection held yesterday by Gen. Woodcock. The men of the service company had arranged their tents and equipment in such orderly manner that the general said:

"This is the best arrangement of equipment and tents that I have ever seen."

He also was struck by the shining condition of the company's rifles and asked Capt. Ward H. Caddington if his men had varnished their rifles.

Ship Subsidies Get D. A. R. Approval

The present policy of building up the merchant marine fleet is a far-reaching step toward adequate national defense, the Daughters of the American Revolution declared today.

Pointing out that the United States must have a merchant marine not only to carry American exports and imports but to serve as a supply fleet in case of an emergency, the national organization announced its hearty support of the ship building and ship operation subsidy program launched by the recently created Maritime Commission.

Instead of ocean mail contracts, operation of American shipping, under the new program, will be aided by direct subsidies, which will lower cost to a level comparable to those of competing foreign countries, D. A. R. headquarters official said.

District Organizing Unit To Map Drive Tonight

The District Organizing Committee is a delegate body of representatives from the various Washington locals along with interested individuals from agencies where no local as yet exists. Temporary acting officers are Arthur Stein, chairman; Matthew Faerber, vice chairman, and Helen Schnetzler, secretary.

Miss Daingerfield Granted Allotment; Sister Approves

An order confirming approval of a monthly allowance of $825 a month to Miss Mary Daingerfield, central figure in a lengthy battle for control of the $2,000,000 estate of the late Edward L. Daingerfield, was signed yesterday by Corporation Judge William P. Woolls, of Alexandria.

Miss Daingerfield, 55, is now living in a local hotel after spending several weeks in a North Carolina resort.

The allowance from the estate of $825 a month—$125 of it is for chauffeur hire—was fixed at a hearing before Judge Woolls two days ago.

Albert V. Bryan, committee for the estate, brought about the hearing. Paul L. Delaney represented Miss Daingerfield and John Barton Phillips represented her sister Mrs. Sally V. Stirling. Contrary to a report in The Post yesterday, Attorney Phillips did not oppose the allowance for Miss Daingerfield. He was present at the invitation of the court to protect the rights of his client. Both he and Mrs. Stirling were anxious to see that Miss Daingerfield was properly provided for and were entirely satisfied with the settlement.

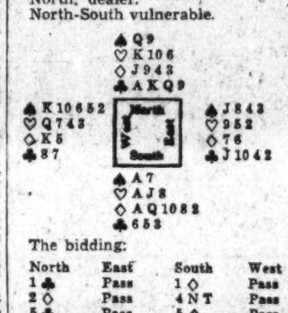
MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Giving Declarer Rope.

Signal cards are always important, but they become a great deal more so when the declarer is not expert. One of the best ways of defeating the average player is to leave him to his own devices—to let him work out his problems without either hindrance or aid. As a general rule this policy involves nothing more than a series of exit plays, meaning that the defenders prime object should be to get rid of the lead without loss to themselves. Today's hand is a very simple example of giving a declarer rope.

North, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	4 N T	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

West, despite the fact that spades had not been bid, did not relish leading away from his King and chose what appeared to be the safer opening of the club eight. Declarer won, and East carefully signalled with the Jack. This signal was well considered. It was not that West had any hope of making a club trick—his reason was entirely negative, namely that he could not stand any other lead. It was reasonable to suppose that West would regain the lead shortly and East did not want to help declarer with a free finesse in either hearts or spades. The diamond nine was led and passed, West winning with the King and obediently exiting with a club. Dummy won, the outstanding trumps were drawn in one more lead, and declarer then tried to split the club suit. When he found that East had the suit stopped he did just as defenders had hoped.

Completely unaware of the fact he had at his command a play that could not lose, he tried a blind heart finesse up to his Ace-Jack. West won, and promptly exited with a heart. Finally declarer had to concede the spade King.

The play referred to that could not lose was for declarer to ruff dummy's fourth club and lay down the Ace and low spade. With spades and clubs stripped from the North-South hands, whichever defender were to win the spade King would either have to lead a spade, affording a ruff and a discard, or give declarer a free finesse in hearts. Any expert would have made this play, of course.

The point, however, is that had East failed to signal for a club continuation, or had West attempted to win a heart or a spade trick by aggressive methods, not even this declarer could have gone astray.

$700,000 Estate Left by Brawner, Dairy President

An estate of approximately $700,000 was left by the late Henry N. Brawner, jr., 60-year-old president of the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, who died early this month at his summer home, Cape Nedick, Me., it was shown yesterday when his will was filed for probate.

Personal property, including stock in the dairy, was valued at $394,355 and real estate at slightly more than $300,000.

The will requested that his widow, Mrs. Iola Brawner, be given $50,000 in stock of the National Dairy Products Corporation, with directions that the rest of the estate be held in trust. The will suggested that the trustees give $250 a year to Children's Hospital in the name of the Rotary Club, of which Mr. Brawner was a past president, and lee-way was given the trustees to "recognize in a substantial way the needs of various charities in the District."

The major portion of the trust fund income is to be divided between the widow, a son Edgar N. Brawner, and a daughter, Mrs. Sarah B. Pardoe, all of Washington. Besides his connection with the dairy,

Modify Tactics, Leibowitz Told In Attack Trial

Change Ways or Face Trouble, Scottsboro Judge Warns.

By the Associated Press.

Decatur, Ala., July 22.—Spectators sat in tense expectancy at the "Scottsboro case" trial today after Samuel Leibowitz received a judicial warning to "get ready for" trouble if he did not change his tactics.

The reprimand interrupted the New York lawyer's sharp interrogation of Mrs. Victoria Price, in his effort to discredit the "Scottsboro" assault story.

Leibowitz took over cross-examination of Mrs. Price, one of two young white victims of the alleged mass attack by nine colored men, after she identified Charlie Weems as one who molested her.

Sights Trouble Ahead.

Judge W. W. Callahan, noted for his rigid court discipline, faced the lawyer.

"It's not too late for me to enforce orders of the court," he said, "and I am warning you now your mannerism is going to lead to trouble and you might as well get ready for it."

Leibowitz charged testimony of Mrs. Price was "perjured" and moved it be excluded from the record.

Calls Story "Rampant."

"I don't see any occasion for a grandstand play like that," Callahan said.

"The evidence is so rampant it is filled with perjury," Leibowitz charged.

Earlier the State waived capital punishment in the case of Weems. A precedent of death demands for all the nine defendants was broken by prosecutors last week in suggesting 50 to 75 years' imprisonment for Andy Wright. The jury gave him 99 years.

A death sentence was imposed on Clarence Norris a week ago.

Trees Tell of Drought Year Columbus Sailed

By the Associated Press.

Drought, fire and insects were plaguing parts of the West in the days of Christopher Columbus, F. P. Keen, of the Bureau of Entomology, said yesterday.

His study of tree rings showed a long dry spell ended in 1492.

Generally the rings are wide in years of plentiful moisture, he found, thin in drought years. Keen said his record does not support the theory that short cycles occur regularly.

2 Cents Dividend Costs Recipient Cent in Postage

For 2 cents dividend on $2 he had failed to withdraw from a bank closed during the depression, Adrian De Vries, of 1822 Newton street, estimater for the W. G. Cornell Plumbing & Engineering Co., yesterday paid back 1 cent in postage.

The letter carrying the check reached De Vries, 1 cent of its postage shy, after traveling from a bank in Hawthorne, N. J., to Upper Darby, Pa., to Chevy Chase, to Newton street, where it reached De Vries.

The check was mailed on July 8. It was interest on the $2. It reached De Vries and his wife, Mrs. Marie De Vries, yesterday. Before he could open the letter, De Vries paid the additional postage.

"As to the profit," said De Vries last night, "it probably will be squandered recklessly."

Lawyer Given New Trial on Fraud Charge

James J. Laughlin Wins Own Case in Appeals Court.

Because extraneous matter was admitted in the trial of James J. Laughlin, an attorney, on charges of forgery and embezzlement, the United States Court of Appeals yesterday ordered a new trial, probably this fall.

Laughlin was convicted by a jury in District court last March and sentenced to serve 12 to 13 months by Justice Peyton Gordon.

The court said the sole question in Laughlin's trial was whether $1,500 was paid by Laughlin to Erma Miller or was embezzled by him and a receipt forged. Testimony concerning other writings by Laughlin was not pertinent, the opinion added.

Laughlin, the father of five children, prosecuted his own appeal. He was accused of getting the money from three defendants who were awaiting trial in the District Jail on charges of false pretenses. The money was to have been used to obtain their release on bond.

Jobless Musicians Will Give Concert

During the last two years, Creatore has been employed on a WPA project in New York. The 80 other musicians taking part in the concert were discharged recently, due to a cut in fund allotments.

At one time Creatore led his famous military band through a stage and radio concert tour of the East, he also conducted a successful concert series in the Capital.

REA Gives Light In 100,000 Homes

By the Associated Press.

The Rural Electrification Administration estimated yesterday that current from lines financed by it will be lighting 100,000 farm homes by fall.

Now in the second fiscal year of its ten-year program, the REA has loaned $62,000,000 for projects to serve 200,000 farms. Power already has been brought to 28,600 farms, and construction work is under way on lines to reach 80,000 more.

Independent surveys, officials said, support their belief the projects will be financially successful.

Tax-Dodging In D. C.

The special committee appointed to study tax delinquency and related problems in the District of Columbia has done a thoroughgoing piece of investigation and made various recommendations for reform that should receive prompt attention.

The study of office procedure, for instance, shows that the District system is antiquated, decentralized and wasteful. The establishment of a central accounting office and a billing office, as recommended, are changes long overdue. Modern business machinery to do away with slow handwork and sweeping changes in the methods of procedure in the assessor's office are also suggested.

A number of legislative recommendations are designed to strengthen the drive to collect personal taxes. The collector would be given power to attach bank accounts and other intangible property of delinquent tax payers and to obtain liens against their real estate. The report states, somewhat acidly, that the purpose of a collector's office is not merely to receive tax payments but to collect them. In case of the personal tax, the percentage of delinquencies is extremely high compared with losses from the real estate levies. To capture these back taxes the committee recommends "vigorous systematic collection methods modeled after the successful plans of private corporations with a large number of accounts."

That, however, is only half of the program. It is also necessary to see that people in the District liable for payment of personal taxes return declarations. The assessor is urged to use every possible effort to ferret out tax-dodgers. Of course, it is never possible to enforce effectively a bad tax law that puts a premium on evasion by arousing resentment and at the same time provides numerous loopholes of escape. With the best efforts, a good deal of taxable personal property will continue to elude detection. But so long as Congress refuses to vote substitute tax measures, the personal tax will have to be relied upon as a source of revenue. It is the duty of District officials, therefore, to see that due diligence is exercised in assessment and collection.

Honest taxpayers are penalized by the dishonest evasions of other residents, and the knowledge that they are thus being imposed upon is most demoralizing. Indeed, such a breakdown of revenue laws makes tax-dodgers out of ordinarily conscientious citizens. That is one of the most telling arguments against this kind of taxation.

The committee has done the community a good service by stressing the importance of assessing and collecting these obnoxious impositions. The best way to arouse public sentiment against the dilatory tactics of the Congressional lawmakers is to impress upon taxpayers the necessity of reform by relentless enforcement of the present laws.

Tapering Off.

One man's toil is another man's relaxation.

Was it Senator Vest who ascribed his perfect health to the fact that he never took any exercise? No matter. He or some other famous old man was in the habit of bragging that he made it a point to avoid some particular form of manual labor at least once every day. The story is often told and it is probably true. Moreover, it is quite possible that the Senator spoke in sober sooth and that there was ample warrant for his assertion.

With equal cheerfulness, we may accept as truth that statement made a few days ago by a 78-year-old New Albany, Ind., man to the effect that he had been sprinting daily on a private cinder path for 10 years past. Indeed, these two old men may have been potatoes from the same patch. The New Albany man was formerly a circus acrobat. His daily sprint begun at 68 may, therefore, be a natural tapering off from the strenuous exercise to which he had aforetime been accustomed.

It may be that the retired acrobat will eventually be able entirely to wean himself from his former bad habits.

The probability is implied in his statement: "I may have to give it up when I grow old." But in the meantime he serves as an interesting example of the fact that life-long habits affect bodily needs as well as mental characteristics.

Victory Calls For Restraint.

Widespread gratification over the Senate's action yesterday springs from two sources. First and most important is the realization that the opponents of court packing have clinched a decisive and complete victory. Secondly, the winning group has had the good judgment to turn its remarkable victory to constructive purposes.

Only a week ago there was a question as to whether opponents of the court bill could command enough votes to send it back to the Senate Judiciary Committee. But when the test came yesterday 70 Senators joined in defeating the measure. That vote, coming at the climax of one of the most dramatic fights in the history of the country, should stand as an effective bar against any future attempt to encroach upon the independence of the judiciary.

Fortunately, however, the group of Senators now in control of the situation is not satisfied to defeat the compromise court bill. Before the Senate terminated this historic controversy, its Judiciary Committee had decided to sponsor a genuine measure of judicial reform. Undoubtedly that decision was in the minds of most Senators when they voted overwhelmingly to send the bill back to the committee, with instructions to work out plans to facilitate the administration of justice and with an understanding that the Supreme Court will not be disturbed.

There is always danger in cases of this sort that revolting legislators will run wild. The taste of victory is often intoxicating. But true statesmen do not yield to this indulgence; they are most calm and deliberate in their hour of triumph. For victory always carries with it a heavy responsibility to direct the dominant forces into constructive channels.

Leaders of the campaign against the court bill are entitled to a large measure of credit for the restraint they have thus far manifested. No doubt they had the votes to frustrate the President completely in this matter. But they realize that there is an urgent need for additional judges in some districts and for acceleration of the judicial process when important constitutional cases are involved. Their prompt move to carry out these objectives, despite the bitterness of the row extending over the last six months, sustains the claim that this unprecedented contest has been based on principles and not politics.

Stripped of all reference to the Supreme Court, the new bill can strike directly at the congestion and delay which have caused so much dissatisfaction with our judicial system. Presumably the Attorney General will be given authority to intervene in cases involving the constitutionality of Federal acts. Special arrangements to facilitate the progress of such suits to the country's highest tribunal are also in order. If the new bill follows the tentative outlines indicated by members of the Judiciary Committee, it should have the support of the entire Senate.

With this happy outcome in prospect, the court squabble cannot be too soon forgotten. The foremost task of leaders on both sides is to restore harmonious working relationships within the Democratic Party. It is to be assumed that Congress will now play a more important role in shaping the policies of the Nation. But that does not minimize the desirability of terminating feuds so that all issues can be considered on their merits.

An early adjournment of Congress might contribute substantially to the better temperament which is needed for analysis of the major problems still awaiting action.

Now Up To Geneva.

Despite its overwhelming majority in the House of Commons, which permits it to ride roughshod over the opposition when that is necessary, the Chamberlain government has refused to permit the plan for the partitioning of Palestine to come to a vote at this time.

In the government's opinion, the Peel commission's recommendation constitutes the only possible solution of the tangled Palestinian problem under existing circumstances. This plan provides that Palestine and Transjordan be divided into a small Jewish and a large Arab state, with Great Britain remaining mandatory over a stretch of territory including the holy places of Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Nazareth plus a corridor to the sea. That position the London government has defended in both houses of Parliament and is prepared to defend again before the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League of Nations, which is to consider the Peel report next week. Yet the Chamberlain regime has shown that it is aware of the widespread criticism which the partitioning scheme has aroused not only in Arab and Jewish quarters but elsewhere in the world, including Great Britain.

Rather than force the issue in Parliament at this time, the British leaders agreed to pass the buck to Geneva. If the Permanent Mandates Commission and the League Council approve the scrapping of the present mandate and the division of Palestine into three segments, there will be time enough for Parliament to act. If not, the government will nonetheless be under the necessity of seeking a new solution of the problem of reconciling Arab and Zionist aspirations.

As it happens, the Chamberlain regime appears to be thoroughly convinced that the present arrangement is and will continue to be unworkable—defeatist attitude which, in itself, helps make it unworkable. But even if this is admitted, and by no means all students of the Palestinian problem are prepared to make such an admission, the fact remains that the British plan is so revolutionary that it must not be pushed through by a coup de main.

Sufficient time must be given to permit a thorough discussion of its provisions as well as possible alternatives. And above all, it is essential that the Permanent Mandates Commission be uninfluenced in its consideration of the British plan by any feeling that this plan represents the last word of London. Fortunately, Parliament's unwillingness to do more than tacitly recommend the partition scheme simply as a basis of discussion does give the mandate body a free hand.

The motherland of three great religions, Palestine and its future claim the interest of the entire world. The decision as to what the fate of the Holy Land should be must not be rushed.

The New Farm Bills.

The House Agriculture Committee has invited representatives of national farm organizations to attend a legislative conference next week to discuss the farm-relief program. Two plans are now to the fore—one embodied in a bill sponsored by the American Farm Bureau Federation and another submitted by Representative Jones, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee. Both measures are offered as soil conservation projects; both aim to maintain parity prices for farm products and parity of farmer income; both provide for an "ever-normal granary" or reserve supply of certain major agricultural commodities.

In the Jones bill, which is less elaborate and less rigid than the rival measure, the Secretary of Agriculture would have broad powers to decide when and in what amounts loans might be made available for storage of surplus crops. When the total supply of an agricultural commodity should be proclaimed to be substantially above normal and the current average farm price unreasonably low, the Surplus Reserve Loan Corporation which the bill proposes to set up might make advances to farmer co-operators agreeing to store surplus stocks. If prices should rise above parity, such stocks could be released and disposed of.

In theory the removal of agricultural surpluses in years of abundance for use in lean years of drought and flood appears to provide a means of stabilizing prices. It has long been the aim of Secretary Wallace to link such a program with a system of crop insurance that would not only even out prices but also indemnify farmers for crop failures. In actual practice, however, the ever-normal granary would not operate with the automatic precision required to make it effective.

Take the case of wheat, for example. This year we have a bumper wheat crop selling at high prices while Canada faces a severe shortage and European crops are small. It would be folly to store surpluses available for export under such conditions. The situation emphasizes the impossibility of attempting to regulate the price of agricultural commodities for which the market is world-wide. Even when the domestic supply only is considered, the yield cannot be predetermined since it bears no predictable relation to the number of acres cultivated. Yield is chiefly affected by weather, disease and insect pests.

The danger of putting the Government into the business of buying and selling surpluses ostensibly for the purpose of stabilizing prices of farm products was revealed by the unfortunate experiences of the Farm Board. While the ever-normal granary proposal is linked up with plans for controlling output, it would be affected by the unpredictable nature of agricultural productive processes. Moreover, any surplus control plan would certainly meet with political opposition when attempts were made to dispose of acquired stocks.

In any case, there is no immediate need of considering a permanent farm program. The position of the farmer is greatly improved as a result of rising prices and good crop prospects. There is no emergency justifying hasty enactment of new kinds of benefits and new types of control at this stage of the legislative session.

Dr. Jean Piccard returned to earth via an Iowa tree after an unsuccessful attempt to revisit the stratosphere. His continued efforts to leave this world will sooner or later result in permanent success.

As an old saying has it, "Every time you take a breath, a Chinese dies." And even this isn't fast enough to suit the impatient Japs.

Four Pillars Of Wisdom.

(From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.)

The late George Apley, subject of J. P. Marquand's successful novel in the form of a memoir, stood for a collection of qualities on which rests an imposing part of our national character. It is called the "New England tradition." Although no one has fully anatomized that tradition, it played so important a role in one American cultural flowering that it may well do a second time. The "New England tradition" has been said to rest upon these four maxims:

Eat it up. Wear it out. Make it go. Go without.

Each maxim is soaked with the flavor of Boston-dominated New England—that sober civilization in which parson and mechanic took turns in reading philosophical papers at their lyceum meetings; in which beans, codfish and a little meat were the frugal mainstays of both rich and poor; in which the financial ideal was to live upon the income of income, and in which an impeccable formality of conduct had been found the smoothest way to carry on day-to-day human relationships.

Rediscovery of some of these pillars on which the American character rests might give a disturbed nation something solid on which to continue building; it would do no harm to have framed in every household those four bits of advice: Eat it up, wear it out, make it go, go without.

The Painters' Strike.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The union painters ought to be satisfied. They have had the cream of Government jobs for years. Why not let some one else make a living? Other men have families to support.

They know that no painters could work at Greenbelt, a Government relief job, unless he put up $150 to join the union. Workmanship or speed did not count with the craftsman or labor relations man. Family or no family, out you went.

There is not a contractor outside of the Government that would pay $1.75 an hour for a bricklayer with a bucket of acid water and a brush to clean a brick building, nor pay an iron worker $2 an hour to roll an iron girder into a building on the ground where no skill is required.

They say that at Greenbelt they tried to make the men pushing wheelbarrows take out engineer union cards. But Senator Byrd said no, they didn't need to, for there were no whistles on the wheelbarrows. HARRY JONES.

Washington, July 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: About a score of men are spending their time picketing the Internal Revenue Building, with placards which state that the building is "unfair" to the organized painters, as painters not belonging to the union are employed in that building. The union men are on strike because the Government employs non-union painters.

So this is "Free America!" Such a union advertises its own unfairness on these placards. Those who deny others the right to work unless they join their union are acting the part of despots—intolerant of the rights of others. They seek to coerce the Government, or intimidate it, into employing only union men. What business is it of theirs whom the Government chooses to hire? Suppose the non-union men said the Government was "unfair" because it employed union men! How "fair" would they call that?

What must we think of a union that is so intolerant and unfair that it would seek to throw honest workmen out of employment, with all the suffering that that entails, unless they fall for this union "racket?"

Things are coming to a fine pass in our "free" country when organized labor can defy the courts by continued trespass upon an employer's property, can hold up the U. S. mail and damage the homes and families of non-union men!

No organization has the right to deny others the right to work. If it uses such tactics it becomes a public enemy of the worst sort.

The President's Smile.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why does President Roosevelt always have to have a smile when he has his picture taken? I, for one, prefer my President to be a little less of a smiler. Lincoln did not smile and Jackson, whom Mr. Roosevelt likes to yodel about, had a face like granite with nary a smile, and I like him that way. Mr. Roosevelt has created so much havoc in our lives that he has left us nothing to smile about any more.

Eleanor Holm's Picture.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It would be helpful if newspapers would not keep on publicizing people who are admittedly not worth much to society. A sample case is Eleanor Holm. What in the world has she ever done to help the world? Won a championship swim? And gave what kind of an example to young people and sport? Yet she's given space not accorded to men and women working their eyes out and their arms off to help make the world a better place.

Incident Of Spanish War Meeting.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At a meeting sponsored by the "Friends of Spanish Democracy" there occurred an incident which should put every advocate and lover of democracy on his guard. At the conclusion of a mass meeting celebrating the first anniversary of the Spanish civil war, addressed by Representative Bernard and others, three young men and a girl were attempting to distribute literature outside the hall, on the sidewalk.

This literature represented the viewpoint of a group supporting the Spanish workers and peasants who are fighting against Franco. The views of this group do not coincide with the position taken by the official Communist or Stalinist Party. Therefore, some 50 or 60 of these Stalinists took it upon themselves to give a practical demonstration of how their "democracy" operates. They set upon the three youths and girl, tore the literature they held in their hands and proceeded to beat them up.

These hooligans and cowards did not attempt to perpetrate their "democratic" act in full view of the audience while it was leaving the hall, but waited until the hall lights were put out so that they could perform their deed in the dark.

It is necessary to call this act to the attention of Socialists, liberals and other groups who are a part of the "Friends of Spanish Democracy" who were oblivious to what occurred. Do they support such action? Are they prepared to openly sanction it? Or do they disavow such a manifestation of "democracy?" Let them speak up and proclaim their attitude.

It is high time that all those who support genuine democracy in action as well as in words make it their business to stamp out such criminal hooliganism and banditry.

MARY CARMINE.

Washington, July 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Spanish civil war was transferred to the United States this week. At a meeting of the "Friends of Spanish Democracy," several members of our organization were threatened with severe beatings. Our heinous crime was that of trying to sell newspapers!

In Spain the Popular Front government persecutes persons and organizations for the crime of "lese majeste" against the bourgeois state. Thousands of anarchists, syndicalists, POUMists have been executed, tortured or imprisoned, their newspapers suppressed, because they dared to strive toward the dictatorship of the proletariat. And in this the Communist and Socialist parties acquiesce!

Of the many arrested is Hugo Oehler, national secretary of our organization, who was once the Mid-West organizer for the Communist Party. His blood is now being demanded by this same party. From a good Communist he has become "an agent of Franco"—and why? Because he happens to disagree with the policies of Stalin and wishes a new Communist international.

In the United States, the Stalinists use force to prevent the workers from knowing their counter-revolutionary role in Spain. This explains the hooliganism of Tuesday night's meeting.

We hesitate to reveal these "splits" in the ranks of the workers to the boss class. Yet we would be forgetting our revolutionary duty as Marxists-Leninists, if we did not expose to workers everywhere the masked hypocrisy of these "Friends of Spanish Democracy." First, they wish a bourgeois democracy, and not a workers' dictatorship. Second, they themselves are the first to suppress the democratic rights of other organizations to express themselves. We place our unbounded faith in the ability of the workers to learn, not in hooliganistic gangsterism, or in name-calling.

Far Eastern Outlook.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one who has lived and worked in China, I am writing in regard to the present ominous situation in the Far East.

Many of those who are in touch with recent developments believe that we are facing the most serious situation which has arisen in the Far East during the past two decades. If the clash between Chinese and Japanese soldiers, which occurred on July 7, is followed by an invasion by Japanese troops, of China, south of the Great Wall, the stability of the Chinese republic will be destroyed, the progress which has been so pronounced during the decade will be impeded and the country will be set back at least a quarter of a century.

If the Japanese attempt to become strongly established in North China, within striking distance of inner Mongolia, the maritime provinces of Siberia and the port of Vladiyostok, it is difficult to see how Russia will remain indifferent. If Russia moves, Germany, which has an understanding with Japan, may also act. The possible effects in Europe and even beyond are obvious.

The United States has the power to stop the threatened aggression in China, not by military force, but by the application of sanctions. Japan cannot wage war or cannot really exist on its present economic level without steel and cotton from the United States and without selling tea and silk here. An embargo on American exports of steel and cotton to Japan and on American imports of tea and silk from Japan, would make it impossible for Japan to carry forward its present threatened action in China.

Japan has far more to gain from a peaceful, prosperous China than it can ever gain from conquest and attempted military control. The Chinese are astute and clever and will never allow real profits from an attempted control of their own cotton and iron resources by a foreign power, and the present occupation threatened by Japan will merely bring loss to both countries and will endanger the peace of the world.

The statement of John Hay of over a generation ago, "The storm center of the world has shifted to China," is even more true today. Intelligent and patriotic Americans ought to do their part to make impossible the inexpressibly disastrous effects of such a world storm.

Dogs Versus Humans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Oh, dear me! Being a dog owner and a dog lover and never being happy unless I have one or more of these faithful companions lying at my feet or running over the fields or through the woods ahead of me, my heart bleeds for those helpless faithful creatures who have been deprived all these hot summers of the comfort of four stanch and, I hope, multi-colored awnings.

How those soulful eyes will look up with gratitude and thankfulness into the faces of those charitably inclined donors of said awnings.

And again, dear me, having profound sympathy also for the countless number of poor helpless human beings who are confined in one or other of our 11 hospitals without the comfort of air conditioning and mostly without awnings. Truly my heart bleeds for them profoundly, sincerely and our hospitals staggering under constantly increasing deficits, crying for financial aid from our citizens to donate said awnings, plain or multi-colored, to say nothing of funds necessary to properly care for these suffering mortals and to give them that which modern science considers as the minimum necessity.

Oh, dear me, and for the third time my heart bleeds to think as a result of our last strenuous drive to secure funds to make up the deficits of the past two years and to provide for the vital necessities for the present heated season we were able to raise but a comparatively small proportion of the funds needed.

Ah me, why not turn from dog days to human days and go deeper into our sympathies and our pockets for the funds to protect hopeless and helpless human beings.

THE MAN FROM HIDEAWAY.

Alarums On Claverly Street

ALAS, ye rash ones who have given hostages to fortune upon a suburban street in form of pet or progeny! Fate will surely find you out. Children, as all men know, are the final blessing of mankind. But they utter loud noises, climb neighbors' fences and knock baseballs ardently and by accident into the center of lawn parties. As for dogs, even the most faithful of Man's Best Friends will bury fragrant shank bones in the next-door geranium bed.

Mrs. West's telephone rang the other night on Claverly street. When she came back to the table she sighed.

"Mrs. Tilbury has your football again, Robert, and she says she's going to keep it this time."

Mrs. Tilbury is the West's next door neighbor.

Now the Tilburys have given no hostage to fortune. They have neither cat nor canary, dog nor child. In calm rectitude they ask only to be let alone on Claverly street, which, alas, is the hardest chore to put upon a prolific neighborhood. For pet they nourish only the biggest and shiniest automobile on Our Street, and whoever heard of an indiscretion from a straight-eight? Does a motor car bury bones; does it kick footballs? Certainly not, and Mr. Tilbury (who is not a bad sort of fellow, in the downtown bank) shows his one sign of human frailty in waxing and polishing this new acquisition almost daily as it stands beside his door, or pausing before it in the reverence with which Americans still regard these massy aggregates of pyroxlin and horsepower.

"But, Ma," protested Robert, crossly, "I never kicked no football!"

"Any football. You lent it to Roger, and Roger gave it to Junior, and Junior threw it in Mrs. Tilbury's yard. And she has it! And Junior's mother just called up, and she says she'll buy you another one if Mrs. Tilbury doesn't give it back, which she says she won't."

"Aw—cracky!" said Robert, in discouragement at man's inhumanity to man.

Now it was within this very hour that a remarkable event occurred; such an incident as is, in retrospect, part of the cherished saga of every suburban street. It was, you remember, the pleasant hour of gloaming. Now families were reunited; now suppers on Our Street were finished or finishing; now neighbors sat in festival, or on cool side porches behind latticed honeysuckle. Through the screens came evening sounds of crickets and mumbling June bug; the final whir of lawnmower. A distant church bell tolled indistinctly. The declining sun threw its final rays over the tranquil scene. Now was the hour of peace, intensified rather than broken by the hammer of Mr. Lugerly making some domestic repairs to The Ark, the swish of Mr. Tilbury's hose against his motor deity, and the merry notes of children rising in their final frolic.

Suddenly the calm air of Claverly street was riven by an earpiercing note. Shocked families waited for it to end. It did not end. It grew. It was a horn, and its screaming voice warned of unimaginable disasters. What sacrilegious thumb could be eliciting that note?

Claverly street then beheld a memorable sight. Mr. Tilbury was dancing with excitement before his brilliant car, hose still squirting in hand. His machine had apparently gone berserk. From its giant lungs issued the alarm. No one was inside; apparently the hose itself had produced a short circuit within the machine's vitals, and it was throwing its last horsepower into passionate self-expression. From its hood poured the vituperative stream which high-spirited motor cars owned by polite people are wont to hurl at each other at busy intersections, by the sheer force of which they lift out of their way the hapless pedestrian.

Neighbors gathered about the blushing Mr. Tilbury as he essayed to calm his reverberating monster. He scrambled for the horn, but apparently there was no horn. The ingenuity of designers was too much for him. And the iron roar continued. Amusement now illuminated the faces of Claverly Street. At that minute Mr. Tilbury would have sold his car and his responsibility for a song; at least a quiet song, a lullaby. But instead there issued that bitter wail of Frankenstein against Man; a noise which generations of skilled inventors have compounded to set the world's teeth on edge.

Calmly through the crowd came Robert West. Adeptly he scrambled under the car. And suddenly, with a shock that left one's ears ringing, there was deafening silence. Robert, who knew more about modern cars than most garage mechanics, emerged moistly and modestly from beneath the tamed trumpeter.

The crowd dispersed, grinning. The sound of the lawnmower resumed. A cowed robin tried a note. A scissors grinder went by, ringing a little bell. The peal of youthful laughter came once more from behind vines of honeysuckle.

Mrs. West's telephone rang. "Yes," said Mrs. West. "Yes."

She hung up the receiver. And it was no surprise to any of them when she remarked:

"Robert, if you run over now, I think you can get your football."

Tom McCarthy

Advice From a Veteran.

MITCHELL, S. DAK., July 20.—"You're a lousy-looking bum," he told me, "and you won't get very far like that. You need a shave. Your pants need pressing."

TOM McCARTHY.

"Well, I'm not exactly on the bum," I told him.

"If you're not on the bum," he said, "your an awful ways off your home beat to be in clothes like those. However, that's where you make your mistake. I know. I was on the bum for eight years."

He was a wiry, muscular little man, who had given me a ride in a new truck, just outside of Chamberlin. He needed a shave much worse than I did, was dressed in gray shirt and trousers, driving in shoeless feet. He explained that his feet "got hot," driving all day long.

He delivered new cars out of Chicago and Detroit to points all over the country.

"No, sir," he said, "you can look at me now, and tell me I don't know what I'm talkin' about. I need a shave. My clothes are almost as bad as your's are. But there's a difference. Now, I'm a workin' man."

He was willing to talk, and I was willing to listen.

"When I was on the bum," he told me, "I didn't carry any baggage. Didn't carry anything but a razor, but I always looked as though I'd just stepped out of a bandbox. That's the only way to get by.

"I've ridden freight and ridden the rods and, a lot of times, I've stepped off cleaner than the passengers. But you don't need to worry if you know your way around. You can always clean up. That's where a lot of them make their mistake. They don't take care of themselves and when they want to clean up they go about it the wrong way.

"You can go to a 'Y' if you want, and give them a little song and dance about looking for a job, and they'll let you use a shower. They may even put you up. If you want to just wash up and shave, go to a hotel.

"Don't go to any hotel. Go the best hotel! That's the advantage of keeping a press in your clothes. Walk right through the lobby and up to the desk. Ask them where the washroom is. A good idea in cases where they've got a restaurant off the lobby, is to enter the lobby through the restaurant. The man at the desk, or the house "dick" will think you've been eating in the restaurant.

• • • •

"I'VE CLEANED up in the best hotels of the country. Did it for eight years and only got called once. That was down in Phoenix, Ariz. But there are a lot of traveling men that can't boast that record.

"Yes, sir, it's all in the knowing how. Now you're a young fellow. You could put up a good front. You could make a go of it for a number of years. It wouldn't hurt you to knock around. In the end you'd be better for it. But watch who you pal up with in this game.

"I had a buddy who used to go out and do a little housebreaking when we'd hit a new town. I was strictly a door-to-door man, panhandle, and sob story. But this pal I'm tellin' you about, almost got me jugged. I had to talk plenty fast to convince those country 'bulls' I wasn't myself. They couldn't find my pal, and they were looking for me.

"Stay honest and the worst they can give you is 10 to 30 days for vagrancy and, if you play it right, you won't get those.

"I remember I was workin' Sacramento, making $4 or $5 a day panhandling. I didn't work only a couple of hours but I kept the mechanical whine out of my voice. I looked fresh. That's what gets 'em. There was this guy who used to pass me every day. Every day I'd hit him, and every day he'd give me nothin' but a wisecrack. He'd say, 'You still workin' this beat?' I'd tell him 'Sure and I'll get a handout from you yet.' It got to be sort of a game. Finally, I guess he got tired of it. He called a cop.

"The bull says, 'What's the matter, ain't you got no memory? That guy says you hit him five times for a handout.' I told the bull I didn't have much of a memory. The bull says, 'I guess I'll have to take you along,' and I told him that would be o. k., but could I buy some cigarettes before going down to the pen. We went into the cigar store, and I bought three dime cigars for the bull. He told me to get out of town and that was as near as I got to the jug.

"OH, I'VE BEEN in off and on, but not for long. Got thrown on a rock pile once, but showed them a big scar on my back and told them I couldn't work. I did have 30 stitches taken there when I was a kid, but it never bothers me. They had the doctor look at it, and he told them I might have a weak back, so I just read magazines until my time was up.

"Worst jail I was ever in, though, was down in El Paso. All we got was lousy coffee and Mexican stuff. Beans mostly. They had a bunch of Mexicans there and I couldn't understand a word they said. It was pretty tough listening to them jabber and sing for 10 days.

"A lot of the boys like a day in jail though. Some of these towns just pick them up and turn them loose in the morning. I had a buddy, who, when he'd get into town would head for the jail for the night. If the jail was too far from the railroad yards, he'd go into the depot and raise cain until they brought the patrol for him. It saved walkin'.

"That sounds like a story, but I can tell you a lot stranger. I was workin' a beat in Los Angeles, and the bull comes up to me and says, 'If you hit up another business man on this street I'll run you in. They complain. Try hittin' the ladies. They're more sympathetic, anyway.' I took his advice and did all right.

"That tip about being a gentleman helps all down the line. Many a time I've turned them around with that gag. I'd hit some guy for the price of a meal and he'd give me a 'Scram, bum!' Don't get tough. Don't wisecrack, or give any lip. Say, very polite like, 'Thank you, sir.' Five times out of ten, he'll go a few feet, get ashamed of himself and come back and give you something.

"If they say, 'Go to work!' ask them polite like, 'Do you know where I could find a job, mister?' That'll hold 'em, and if they have a job, you can always skip out.

• • • •

"BUT I WAS talking about panhandling. There's a funny thing about that. Different towns have different prices. Out on the Coast you used to be able to get the price of a meal, a quarter or more. New York is a dime town, though. All you get is dimes, dimes and more dimes.

"But if you know your way around you'll get by anyhow. I remember one little town on the Coast. There must have been 200 bums got off the freight and they spread into the town for food. I came up to a house, and said, 'Mam, can I do a little work for a meal.' She told me that I was the third one there that morning, but since I asked for work, she gave me some food, though she turned the other guys away.

"Yes, I've had soft pickin's and some of the best of it out there on the Coast. I used to work a beat in Los Angeles just two hours a day, and I'd pick up three and four dollars a day.

"What was my best day's take? Well the amount might surprise you, and it came close to being more. I picked up $18 in San Francisco on Christmas Eve, four years ago.

"How did I lose out from making more? Well it was this way. A big guy came along, and he'd had a few drinks. I hit him for a meal, and he laughed and looked me over. 'I'll give you $3,' he said, 'if you haven't got more than $5 in your pocket.' 'Honest, mister, I'm broke,' I told him. I told him to search me, never thinking he would, or that if he did he would find the money in my watch pocket.

"The big fellow laughed and searched me, and darned if he didn't find my $18.

"Why did I go off the bum? Well, I got sort of tired of it. Eight years, you know. I'd been all over the country, and was almost gettin' well known. I'd worked some parts too much. I had to get a new racket, so I tried this. Its not bad. I see the country and get paid for it."

Tokyo Army May Have Stirred Sparks To Force Budget.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

WAR FEVER is gripping the Orient, as its three major powers, China, Japan and Russia, are going through all the gestures of war making.

On the Amur, which separates Russia from the Japanese-protected Manchuria, the rivals are engaged in apparently meaningless but nevertheless sanguinary disputes over the ownership of tiny islands in the channel.

On Manchuria's eastern border, there are daily clashes between Soviet and Japanese patrols, raids across the uncertain frontier lines, reconnoitering flights by military planes of both nations.

Meanwhile, a thousand miles to the south, Japanese and Chinese troops are waging an almost continuous battle within earshot of Peiping. Hastily arranged truces are almost immediately broken by one party or another, while Nanking and Tokyo are making desperate efforts to pin responsibility for the new incidents upon each other.

War Clouds Timed To Influence Diet.

IT IS a long way from the Amur islets to Lukouchiao, and it is possible that the incidents are unconnected. But to trained observers here there is a strange significance in the appearance of war clouds on the Oriental horizon just as the war office in Tokyo is preparing to submit its record budgetary estimates for the treasury's approval.

The coincidence—if a coincidence it is—is not without precedent. It has been thus every year since the Japanese army embarked on its latest series of continental exploits in 1931.

In 1932, it was the American spy scare that led to the passage of a record war budget by a mildly anti-army Diet. The scare—which, for a moment, reached the proportions of a nation-wide anti-American hysteria—subsided as soon as the army received the desired appropriations.

The following year, Communist Russia's aggressive designs on independent Manchukuo supplied the annual tension. There were sanguinary border clashes and even more sanguinary press reports tween September, 1933, and March, 1934, until the badly frightened Diet voted the necessary funds to protect defenseless Japan from foreign attack.

In 1935 and 1936, the army was busy restoring peace and order in North China, and while in the latter year the budgetary calculations were unfortunately upset by the Tokyo military coup, more funds were voted for defense than ever before.

This year's incidents follow the same general pattern. Minor clashes follow each other in quick succession until their very number gives the impression of serious tension. General alarm, fed by sensational press reports and belligerent army statements, grips the Pacific area, beclouding the fast that none of the nations involved desires war.

Three Powers Gain By Warlike Tension.

YET, despite the indubitable anxiety to avoid war, each of the three major powers involved in this year's hostilities, verbal and otherwise, stands to profit from the tension.

To China, Japan's activities on the mainland have been for the past six years the most powerful stimulus to national unification. To Chinese psychology, still rooted deeply in the family and clan system, resistance to foreign aggression was perhaps the only possible banner round which the people could rally.

Arguing that national unity is essential to military preparedness, the Nanking administration has thus far been able, with a few lapses, to keep minor warlords in line. The new clashes in the north might very well be again utilized by the Central government to divert the growing dometsic unrest into other channels.

The only danger of such a course—a danger clearly realized by the government—is that the anti-Japanese movement may become uncontrollable or find expression in assassinations and bombings. This distinct possibility would speel disaster for both the present administration and China's national destinies.

To Soviet Russia the Amur tension provides a welcome lightning rod for the electricity generated by the recent army purge. If the shooting of Marshal Mikhail Tukhachevsky and seven lesser luminaries had caused any domestic uneasiness, this will quickly be dispelled by border disputes.

High government officials in Tokyo, in fact, accused Moscow of deliberately provoking the Amur clashes in order to demonstrate to the world that the Soviet army was not affected by the recent drastic purge. The judgment on these charges is left to the reader's discretion.

To Japan, finally, this year's tension—just as all the previous tensions—is a welcome aide in pushing the gigantic military appropriation through the Diet. In the current year, the army had to get along on U. S. $150,000,000; next year, according to reliable forecasts, it will seek $270,000,000, or roughly a third of the entire budget.

As the navy also intends to ask for a similar amount, parliamentary opposition was until today within the realm of possibility. But, obviously, no protest can be raised against the military demands when the nation is on a war-time footing, in preparation for a possible conflict with China. Thus, the current Sino-Japanese tension proved to be not without value to the Japanese army.

Involved Interests Obscure Clear Vision.

WITH SUCH involved interests, it is but natural that the causes of each incident are shrouded with uncertainty. Responsibiity can be assessed only by historians. What one can do now is to present the contentions of both sides.

The Amur, one of the world's great rivers, dissects northern Asia into Soviet Far East and Japanese-dominated Manchuria. The border line, decided decades ago between the Czarist government and the anti-Nationalist China, runs its uncertain course somewhere in the midchannel.

The site of the latest clash was a cluster of small islands below Blagoveschensk. Soviet Russia claimed ownership of the only navigable channel, which runs south of the island.

It seems to be certain that in an effort to stop navigation in the southern channel, the Soviet troops blocked it with logs and chains. Thus challenged, the Manchurian gunboats immediately decided to uphold their honor by forcing their way through.

Soviet Russia's next Step was to occupy the two bigger islands at each end of the channel. The landing party was protected by a number of Russian gunboats, one of which was shortly afterward sunk by Japanese shells.

There were claims and counter-claims, bitter recriminations, protests and ultimatums. Moscow finally agreed to withdraw its troops. But immediately the islands were occupied by Japanese troops. There the matter stands now—a powder box awaiting a spark.

The situation in North China is full of equally dangerous potentialities. It is difficult to make any predictions, for there are a thousand and one possibilities, each of which may lead to a recharting of the Oriental map.

North China today is exactly in the same state as Manchuria was in the late summer of 1931, just before the Sino-Japanese clash that led to the severance of the country from China.

On the one hand there is the Twenty-Ninth army, distinctly hostile to Japan and tired of being buffeted about by the Japanese. On the other, there is a vigorous Japanese military command, strongly believing in its mission to bring peace and order to North China and to protect the rapidly growing Japanese economic interests in the region.

Tientsin Garrison Supplied First Spark.

LIKE RIPE APPLES, the northern provinces are dangling from the Ghinese tree, waiting only for a vigorous push to fall down into Japan's lap. This push was supplied on July 8 by the Japanese garrison in Tientsin, with the blessings of the Japanese Kwantung army in Manchuria and the Tokyo government.

The ease with which the Japanese authorities succeeded in obtaining Chinese submission to their demands foreshadows a quick political severance of the northern provinces from China proper.

The most serious feature of the situation seems to be China's apparent readiness to answer Tokyo's challenge. Seven divisions of the government's troops are reported to have marched toward Peiping. Meanwhile, the Chinese forces on the spot are showing a remarkable disdain for the Japanese juggernaut and their own commanders, who fear Japan.

While there is no doubt that Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, China's "strong man," desires no war with Nippon, his hand may be forced by the aroused public opinion.

The slogan "Resist Japan!" was coined by the government itself, which hoped to utilize the nation's anti-Nipponism to secure national unity.

The preparedness campaign has now come to plague the government. Obviously suffering from overconfidence in China's armed might, the vocal sections of the people are demanding war on Japan.

Observers here can interpret Tokyo's formal demand for a showdown on North China as signifying her intention to secure the region's actual, if not in name, independance.

And foreign observers here even believe it possible that Henry Pu Yi, known otherwise as Emperor Kangte of Manchukuo, may yet return to the throne of his ancestors in the ancient capital of Peiping.

Amur Valley Contains Rich Deposits Of Gold

Discussing the recent border incidents involving Japan and the U. S. S. R. in northern Manchukuo, J. R. S., in the current issue of the Far Eastern Survey, writes, in part:

"The Amur Valley is the richest gold-producing area in Manchuria; the reserves are said to be second only to the Soviet Far East.

"Prior to the Manchurian Incident, the mines were mainly worked by the government. Government control was continued by the new state of Manchukuo. In 1934 the Manchuria Gold Mining Co. was formed, capitalized at 12,000,000 Manchukuoan yen subscribed by the Manchukuo government and the South Manchuria Railway Co. It took over the mines of the old regime. Recently the company drew up a five year plan of expansion whereby, with increased prospecting and new equipment, an output of 200,000,000 Manchukuoan yen of gold is planned for the period 1937-1941. The goal is an annual output of 100,000,000 Manchukuoan yen.

"If this figure is reached, involving a tenfold increase in production, Manchuria will become an important source of gold for Japan. It will also strengthen Manchukuo's financial position and its balance of international payments—an important point in view of the liberal financing required in the execution of the five-year plan of development.

"However, there appears to be no connection between these deposits and the present clashes on the Amur. To the latter, directly at least, must be ascribed purely political motives."

Dutch Courage

By Elmer T. Peterson

Central College In Iowa.

Pella, Iowa.

IN A DAY when the great sweep is toward a benevolent, paternalistic government assistance to all who need assistance, it is refreshing to see what is being done at Central College, Pella, Iowa.

Here in the middle of the Middle West, in a small town originally settled by sturdy Dutch pioneers, a strong current runs toward individual self-help, and even the greater current running toward paternalism is unable to quench it.

As usual, a big idea is the work of a personality, or rather two personalities going hand in hand. I. J. Lubbers, recently made president of Central College, started the big idea two or three years ago, and called in Simon Heemstra, a practical Standard Oil business man, to effectuate it. Both are of Hollander descent, and they fit nicely into the Pella picture. They are young, vigorous men with a vision that promises much. One would scarcely think of them as the "typical professor" type, but rather as business executives. And yet they are idealistic to a marked degree.

The big idea is to provide work in a college factory for young men and women who want an education. The factory is a going concern which has encountered the situation of a demand that far exceeds the supply. Right off the bat, it seems, these "professors" have attained a business tempo that many a hard-headed industrialist would envy.

• • • •

THE PRODUCT is called "Bildertoy," and consists simply of small pieces of wood that can be assembled into toy houses, stores and what-not. Waste material from a near-by factory is utilized.

With very little publicity, this project has somehow worked into the consciousness of thousands of young people, from New England to Hawaii, and hundreds of applications are pouring in each month for the privilege of working and studying at Central College. Obviously, and to the keen regret of President Lubbers and his faculty, only a fraction of the applicants can be accommodated.

This idea is not monopolized by Central College. It has been used in a modified form by Berea, Antioch, Carroll and perhaps other institutions. But the Central College project seems to have taken a form that makes it especially appealing.

The project contemplates the production of other items besides "Bildertoy." It does not expect to depend on a single formula. If the project goes ahead along the expected lines, it will develop into a large and comprehensive plant, furnishing diversified work. Unlike some of the other colleges employing this general type of project, stress is not laid upon the vocational training obtained by the students, though, of course, such vocational training is of utmost value, and is geared so that it articulates with the cultural and scientific subjects of the college curriculum.

CENTRAL COLLEGE is still small, having only about 275 students. Nearly half of these students are now earning a part of the cost of their education as employes of the "Student Industries," as this department is called.

The plant is carefully organized and the Student Industries is built vitally into the college as a whole. The amount of work given any student is determined by his need of financial aid. A student carrying a full college course is allowed to contract for work to a certain specified maximum. It may take a student five years to get his college education. The course is made elastic, so that it may be accommodated to the financial resources of each individual.

The process of making the factory an auxiliary organism of the college is extended to the business administration. In the business offices of the plant, including sales promotion, production and accounting, students are given training in actual business practice, and of course the students who major in business administration have the first call. When they graduate they will have passed through a process that is thoroughly practical and will be no strangers to the actual problems of business life.

• • • •

THE DUTCH PEOPLE are not plungers. They look before they leap. They have no illusions about this project. They do not expect this institution to have a mushroom growth, nor do they want it. The physical facilities of the college are limited. Like all small denominational colleges, Central has to operate on a small budget, with limited buildings and faculty. It is not expected that expansion can go farther than 500 students within the prospect of the immediate future.

In accepting applicants the faculty uses scientific tests, to determine who are best fitted for the courses and the work. The human factors of ambition and needs are carefully weighed.

Proceeding in a conservative manner, the Central College management expects to enlarge its plant by securing additional funds for physical and instructional expansion. It is not urgently asking. It is rather pointing to the obvious advantages and telling the people that if they like this idea, they can join in the project.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Mother and the Battleships.

(In Italy the wife of a workingman will christen the newest dreadnaught, the policy of naming a society woman or wife of a prominent man having been abandoned."—News item.)

I.

Get up, children! Wash your faces
And to breakfast right away!
Help your mother with the dishes!
There's no time to fool or play;
Yes, the sun has hardly risen
But the hours swiftly slip
And your mother must get going—
She's to launch a battleship!

II.

Dad! Get up and no more snoring!
If you want your breakfast hot
You will have to come directly
Or go hungry, like as not;
Though the hour is unseemly
Cut the moanings and the wails;
Mother's got to launch a dreadnaught
And you know what that entails!

III.

Come now, kiddies, make it snappy!
Not a minute can you waste;
Never mind your shaving, daddy—
You must make the greatest haste;
Other mornings you may dally
And just while the time away
But Ma's got to launch a warship—
And it seems today's the day.

IV.

Now to school, my little darlings!
Off to work, oh, popper dear!
Mother'll see you in the evening—
(And not much before, I fear).
She must rush the routine housework,
Dress and gallop thru the door
To the waterfront to christen
A new super man o' war.

V.

See her prink before the mirror—
Watch her powder up her nose!
Note her don her smartest bonnet
And her finest Sunday clothes!
Take it easy, please, oh mother
Why this frenzied, frantic gait?
"I've a christening," she answers,
"And those battleships won't wait!"

VI.

Home she comes again that evening
Looking weary, wan and old
To the children and poor daddy
Who are eating something cold;
Theres a chill about the household
But there is no taunt or quip;
What is home without a mother
Who has launched a battleship?

Delay Elates Foes Of Holy Land Partition

By the Associated Press.

London, July 22.—Opponents of the partition of Palestine today drew encouragement from Parliament's decision that Britain must tread slowly.

Enemies of the British royal commission's plan for a "surgical operation" to remove the empire's major difficulties in the Holy Land said Parliament's vote early today to defer Britain's definite commitment to the scheme increased hopes of revising or blocking it.

The partition plan, proposing that Palestine be divided into a Jewish state, an Arab state and a British mandate, will go now to the League of Nations. This will give opportunity for further study of the scheme in London.

Attacked by Labor.

The standing vote to defer action came early today after a heated debate in which Laborites attacked the partition.

William C. A. Ormsby-Gore, colonial secretary, called for outright approval of the royal commission's report, holding the present mandate —marked by frequent clashes between Jew and Arab—was "no longer workable." Laborites replied the plan would give Italy a foothold in Palestine and even suggested that France or the United States be given the mandate.

The debate revealed the 1917 Balfour declaration, which promised the Jews a national home in Palestine, actually was drafted by Lord Milner, then minister for war. Lord Balfour, then foreign secretary, had submitted a different statement. Milner died in 1925, Balfour in 1930.

Called a Hornet's Nest.

A proposal by Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, that the United States be given the Palestine mandate was not taken seriously.

"For one thing the United States knows better than to put its hand in a hornet's nest," one official said.

The Evening Standard, which opposed the plan, said the proposal was "visibly moribund."

"Without a friend among Jews or Arabs, riddled by parliamentary criticism, it stands little chance of going through in anything like its original form," the paper said.

Jerusalem dispatches reported both Jewish and Arab leaders were relieved at the decision and said they expressed hope time would be found to work out a "suitable compromise."

Dispatches from Damascus reported the government of Syria, Palestine's neighbor, in which Arab influence is dominant, threw its support to Arab opposition against partition.

Jersey Nazi Camp Inquiry by House Believed Unlikely

Andover, N. J., July 22 (AP).—High up in these Sussex County hills adults went about their daily routine and youngsters frolicked today, while their German-American bund camp came in for Congressional attention at Washington.

Some of the lawmakers appeared cool toward the resolution of Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, to authorize an investigation into alleged "un-American activities." Representative Mary T. Norton, of Jersey City, said she referred to Chairman Dickstein (Democrat), New York, of the Immigration Committee demands for an investigation, made by Veterans of Foreign Wars from her district.

However, Chairman John O'Connor, of New York, said there was little likelihood the Rules Committee would report to the House the Dies resolution unless unusual pressure was brought to bear.

5 Here Are Appointed To Valley Forge Group

Five Washington resident have been appointed to the Valley Forge committee of the University of Pennsylvania bicentennial organization. They are the Rev. A. H. The committee has been formed to raise funds for a new unit of the university to be established at Valley Forge.

AmericanPoet

By William Lyons Phelps.

Stephen Benet.

The Bible says, "Let us now praise famous men."

But why wait till they are dead? This is the birthday of our American poet, Stephen Benet, who was born in Bethlehem, Pa., in 1898.

His father was a colonel in the United States Army, and when Stephen was a child, the family moved to Augusta, Ga., where the colonel was the superintendent of the United States Arsenal. Born in the North and raised in the South, he was not only preternaturally but prenatally qualified to write an epic of the Civil War.

• • • •

When he entered Yale at the age of 17 he had just seen through the press his first volume of poems, published at Boston; during his college course the Yale University Press published his second volume, appropriately named "Young Adventure."

In 1926 he was awarded the Guggenheim Memorial Fellowship for research abroad and accordingly, with wife and children, he went to France and there wrote "John Brown's Body," which, published in 1928, won the Pulitzer Prize and made several hundred thousand readers forget the depression.

• • • •

"John Brown's Body" is an epic poem; in its conception and in its execution it shows historical scholarship, philosophical depth and range, a sympathy with suffering and with heroism as broad as humanity, and, what is most important, a creative power and consummate art that have made it a permanent addition to American literature.

Since the appearance of his famous epic, Mr. Benet has produced a volume of short poems, which contain the finest lyrics he has ever written. And I believe he is at present engaged on the composition of a long poem, which we await with great expectations.

Work of Marconi To Be Continued As He Planned It

Rome, July 22 (AP).—Guglielmo Marconi's work went forward today according to his own plans while Roman throngs paid their last respects to the dead inventor.

In five laboratories scientific associates of Marconi, who died Tuesday at the age of 63, carried on research according to outlines he laid down shortly before his death.

Marchese Luigi Solari, president of the Marconi company, revealed that only Monday the inventor of wireless discussed adapting naturally produced waves—such as the sun's radiation—to transmission of messages.

Today his body lay in state in the Church of St. Mary of the Angels. In Bologna officials said the whole city would be prepared tomorrow for the inventor's return in death to his birthplace. The body will lie in the Marconi family tomb there until the government chooses a last resting place, which is to be a national shrine.

Easy Tax Paying Aim of Treasury

The Treasury is considering two methods of simplifying the job of paying taxes: Revising income tax forms and creating a new revenue division to advise taxpayers.

Officials said yesterday a special committee of internal revenue experts is working on a new form for use in reporting 1937 incomes. It will be designed to eliminate detailed and itemized statements not essential to the determination of tax liability.

Officials said it also may be possible to issue a uniform tax return to all persons whose income consists chiefly of salaries and wages, regardless of the amount of income. At present, all persons with net incomes over $5,000 must file lengthy, detailed returns.

The committee also is planning to simplify and clarify the instructions for making out tax returns.

The proposed new revenue division would give taxpayers advisory opinions regarding their tax liability.

Senate Kills U. S. Employes' Marriage Ban

The Senate passed without debate and under unanimous consent yesterday the House bill to repeal Section 213, or the "marriage clause," of the 1932 economy act.

Adopting an unusual procedure, Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, author of a companion Senate bill, called up the House measure only a short while after it had been reported unanimously by the Senate Civil Service Committee.

Ordinarily bills are allowed to lie over a day after being reported before they are acted on by the Senate.

Senator McKellar, in asking unanimous consent, explained he was aware of no objection in the Senate to the repeal and that he believed the law should be repealed at once.

Goes to White House.

Now only the signature of President Roosevelt is necessary before the law, famed in current history and fiction, is repealed.

Inaugurated as a measure of spreading employment, Section 213 directed department heads, when making personnel reductions for reasons of economy, to dismiss husbands or wives, when both were employed by the Government, in preference to single persons.

Representative Ramspeck, chairman of the Civil Service Committee, led the fight for repeal in the House. His long-drawn-out battle in committee, before the Rules Committee and in the House contrasts sharply with the ease with which Senator McKellar put the bill through the Senate.

Upset in House.

It was only because of an attempt to substitute a bill to "put teeth into" the marriage clause that the measure came out of the House in a form of straight-out repeal.

Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, author of section 213, succeeded in replacing the Ramspeck bill with his amendment, broadening the application of the "marriage clause," while the House was in committee of the whole.

When a roll-call vote was taken, however, the Cochran amendment was stricken out and its elimination also took with it the commitee amendment with the new rider. Thus only the Celler bill for outright repeal remained.

2 of Trio Held In Ellipse Death Admit Slugging

Youths Confess Stealing Watch, $12; Murder Inquiry Forecast.

Police last night were holding three youths, two of whom confessed that they slugged Anathanasius Econom, 45-year-old WPA writer who was found dead on the Ellipse behind the White House a week ago tonight.

The youths, two of them 17 and the other 16, were arrested by Detective Sergts. Joseph Shimon and Harry Britton. The two who confessed said that, after attacking Econom, they robbed him of $12 and a watch.

Sergt. Shimon seized one on Ninth street northwest Wednesday afternoon. After the arrest he received information that led to the capture of the other two. They were taken from their homes at 3 a. m. yesterday.

One signed a statement confessing to striking the writer. He said:

"I hit him in the jaw with a right. He fell down. I took his wallet. It had $12 in it and we all got $4 apiece."

Meanwhile, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, who certified that Econom died naturally of an heart attack and multiple other ailments, said last night there is a possibility the case may be reopened for a murder investigation.

Dr. MacDonald said there is a definite question whether Econom was struck the night he died. He stated the dead man's brain has been sent to a pathologist for an examination and that it will be several days before a report is received.

Shimon and Britton said yesterday they arrested the boys in connection with the park robbery of Maurice Moore, of Chicago, who was severely beaten and robbed last week.

Another confession stated:

"I met . . . at Ninth and D streets northwest Saturday night. We walked to Lafayette square. After we got there we split up and walked around. I saw one walking with a man and I followed him.

"The man asked him for a cigarette. He handed him the cigarette and then hit him on the jaw. He went down and I grabbed his watch."

The third youth, however, denied he had seen anyone strike the dead man. He said he saw one youth hand Econom a cigarette and saw the latter fall, but that he saw no blow struck.

Witnesses said they heard a thud and saw the injured man collapse.

U. S. Pacifism Selfish, Says G. U. Professor

Works Only for America, Culbertson Tells Institute in Maine.

Orono, Me., July 22 (AP).—W. S. Culbertson, Georgetown University professor and former Ambassador to Chile, charged today American Pacifism often was selfish and "unwilling to do anything for anybody's peace except our own."

Declaring "we live in a world organized for war," Culbertson, in a speech prepared for the University of Maine Institute of World Affairs, said America did not reveal a constructive approach to the peace problem.

"We run from responsibility," he asserted. "Our peace movement is usually negative; it is supported by the keep-us-out-of-war sentiment; it is grounded in the belief that we can live at peace in a world at war, and in the conceit that we are a more peaceful people than other peoples who lack our geographical advantage."

Culbertson said preferential tariffs, such as those in force among nations of the British Commonwealth, "cannot be justified either as sound commercial policy or as good international politics."

He indorsed Secretary Hull's trade agreements program.

Regarding trade agreements Culbertson said "we need not have fewer professions of good neighborliness; such sentiments are useful . . . But we need more insistence upon our rights—insistence that discriminations be removed and that we have a more equitable share of world trade."

Culbertson served as technical adviser on economic questions during the 1921 conference on limitation of armament and later became chairman of the Federal Tariff Commission.

Named Minister to Rumania in 1925, he was sent to Chile as Ambassador three years later and served until his resignation in 1933. He aided in conciliating the quarrel between Chile and Peru over Tacna-Arica and was decorated by both nations.

Bequests totaling more than $300,000 were contained in the will of Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace, widow of the late Ambassador to France during the Administration of President Woodrow Wilson, filed in District Court yesterday. The document did not estimate the estate's value.

They were the Episcopal Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital; St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, and the Washington Home for Incurables. Four grandchildren, Patricia, Ruth, Hugh C. and Melville C. Wallace, jr., were left $10,00 each and heirlooms and mementoes of their grandfather.

A like amount was given Jean Francis, a sister, who also receives a life income from a $100.00 trust fund. Among other provisions of the will were bequests giving $4,000 to St. John's Church to endow the pew occupied by Chief Justice Fuller during his incumbency on the Supreme Court bench; Christ Church, Takoma Park, Md., $5,000, and Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., $25,000 and her father's library.

Bob Burns Says:

I knew a man down home who owned a shoe factory and made a lot of money, but he never made his son work a day in his life and always gave him all the spending money he wanted.

Finally durin' the big financial crash the father lost his shoe factory and his money, too, and had to go back to half soling shoes at 80 cents a pair. One day the boy walked into his father's cobbler shop and says, "Dad give me $4 I've got a date tonight."

The old man says, "Son, do you know I have'ta half sole five pairs of shoes to get $4?" The sons says, Well, I'll wait—go ahead and half sole 'em but make it snappy!"

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

Partying

Members of the Interior are still talking about the grand time they had merrymaking at the Potomac Boat Club the other night, sponsored by the Interior Department Recreation Association.

They danced patriotically to the tune of "The Star-Spangled Banner"—in two-four time, incidentally—Frank Bird, of Resettlement, and his saxophone; George Miller, of Labor, with a trumpet; Otto knocking it off at the piano, and Don Morse, of Postoffice Department, beating the drum.

They swarmed around the mahogany where Reclamation's Joe Menehan and S. M. "Tuxedo Sam" Barrett dispensed liquid refreshment, and Mrs. Menehan handed over the sandwiches.

And after the orchestra went home, they listened to H. D. Romer, National Park Service, improvise at the piano.

Among the guests were Alicia Brophy and Kathryn Firth, of Reclamation; T. A. Leahan, of Park Service; M. C. (Congressman) Sedberry and Rodney (Col.) Knowles, of Reclamation, who hail from North Carolina, and J. Conway, of Resettlement—the latter a veritable Lord Chesterfield in his attention to the fair sex.

But versatile Fred Berberick, of Reclamation, should have taken the grand prize of something or other for his delightful impersonations. They say now he will rank "tops" in character parts in the dramatic society of I. D. R. A.

Among N. F. F. E. officials were Harry G. Nolda, Matilda Lindsay and John P. Carroll, of Customs Service, Boston. A. M. Reising, Secretary's office, Interior, was in charge of arrangements.

All in all, the party was a huge success—so much so that another gathering for merrymaking has been planned and the date set, August 6.

Speakers

Three Government employes, stationed at Washington, will participate in the program of Massachusetts Farm and Home Week at Massachusetts State College, Amherst, for four days next week, beginning Tuesday.

The Civil Service Commission turns to the youngsters with an offer: Applications will be accepted, not later than August 3, for the positions of junior aircraft modelmaker ($1,440 a year) and under aircraft modelmaker (2,600 a year), in the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, Langley Field. Completion of specified courses in an aeronautical school and certain experience are required. Applicants must have reached their sixteenth but not their twenty-third birthday. The age limits will not be waived in any case, the commission states.

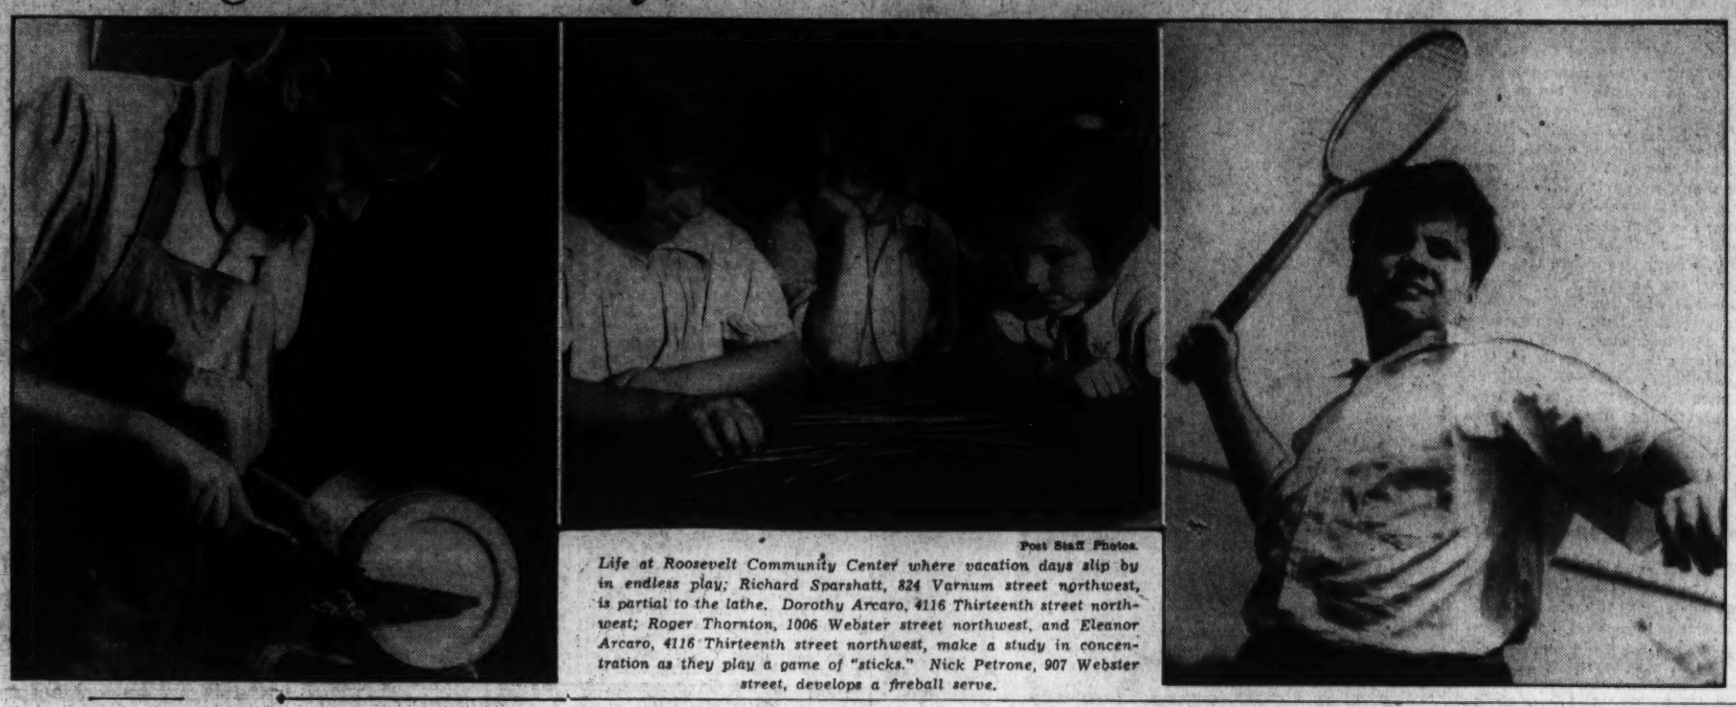
Soft Ball Wins in Popularity Among 3,000 at Roosevelt Center; Fencing Ousts Archery; New Games Invented as Old Ones Die



Post Staff Photos.

Recreation styles in Washington this summer, as mirrored in selections of approximately 3,000 persons who seek their fun at Roosevelt Community Center each week, can be summed up something like this:

Softball games double the number of hardball games and are far more popular than ever before. Ping pong takes the lead inside, with shueboards running second. Contract bridge is on the wane. Fencing has supplanted archery. "Pick up sticks" is played by all ages and sizes. Only small children are still interested in monopoly and jigsaw puzzles. Every adult woman wants to learn how to tap.

This center is the largest operated by the community department of District public school system and during last year had an attendance of 96,000 men, women and children. Its facilities include almost everything except a swimming pool and a fishing stream; so the hobbies selected there reflect general trends in the Capital city.

When all the known games grow stale or there is need for something to interest a special group, Roosevelt Community Center just pitches in and "invents" a new recreation. Three brand-new games are in vogue there this summer. They are croquet golf, shuffle golf and pitch to the barrel. They were thought up by Joseph Ward, one of the recreational leaders.

Croquet golf—if you want to try it sometime—is played with croquet mallets, tennis balls and sewer holes. It is played on an open paved court, with the open-work iron tops of the sewer holes removed. Shuffle golf is a variation of shuffleboard, and pitch to the barrel is just what it says.

In addition to sports and games, Roosevelt Community Center is headquarters for dramatic, music and art groups. The senior dramatic club is now rehearsing "The Importance of Being Earnest," and the art students are sketching from life. A harmonica club is the latest musical addition.

During winter months the center is a meeting place for numerous Government employe groups, the P-T. A., citizens' associations, business and civic groups. A group of carrier pigeon fanciers has held regular sessions there so long that Mrs. A. L. Irving, the secretary, is not surprised any more when a long-distance pigeon comes down to rest for a while in her office.

Various drill teams use the concrete courts for "rehearsal practice," and sometimes three or four orchestras are going at once. Add all this activity to that going on naturally at Roosevelt High School and McFarland Junior High School—for the center's offices are scattered in both buildings—and you have some idea what a busy place the Roosevelt Community Center really is. Especially if you remember the crowded tennis courts and the boys' hobby shop.

In the hobby shop this summer boys are making automobiles, boats, telescope stands, drawing boards, waste baskets and anything else they think about. E. L. Cooney is in charge.

All summer activities at the center are free, even the lumber used in the hobby shop. During the winter there is a charge for numerous craft classes and for use of the gymnasium on specified nights.

July and August are the biggest recreation months, for many of the boys and girls put in full days at play and there are many contests with groups from other centers and playgrounds. An interrelated program was developed this year under the direction of Lewis Barrett, in order that the several communities might be matched against each other.

Miss Mary Etta Callahan is chairman of girls' activities at Roosevelt Center. R. J. Lund is director of all physical activities, assisted by R. W. Erwin.

U. S. Offered A Dollar for Airport Road

Arlington County Group Claims Old Highway Neglected.

Action Put Off Pending End of Dispute Over Field.

Headed by Representative Howard W. Smith, a delegation from Arlington County proposed to a subcommittee of the House Military Committee yesterday that the War Department sell Military road to the county for $1.

Representative Smith said the War Department is not taking care of the road and that it has become all but impassable.

Samuel Solomon, manager of the Washington-Hoover Airport, which is crossed by Military road, told the sub-committee that he offered to take the road over and build a new 18-foot macadam highway, at a cost of $25,000. However, he said, county officials insisted on a 20-foot concrete highway at a cost of $50,000.

Representative R. Ewing Thomason, of Texas, chairman of the subcommittee, suggested that action be deferred until reports are received from the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Commerce. The first-named department is concerned because it owns a large experimental farm, west of the airport, which is served by Military road. The Department of Commerce is concerned because of its interest in the airport situation in Washington.

Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, a member of the District Airport Commission, expects to introduce a bill today for the construction of a new municipal airport at Camp Springs, Md.

A sub-committee of the Naval Affairs Committee will hold a hearing this morning at which naval officers will voice their objections to the Camp Springs site.

On Tuesday in a letter to Chairman Carl Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations said that the ignition of planes using the new airport would interfere with radio reception at the Navy's new Cheltenham, Md., receiving station and that the projected 300-foot towers of the station would menace air navigation.

Representative Jack Nichols, Democrat, of Oklahoma, secretary of the airport commission, declared yesterday that the citizens of the District were being offered two airports as "free gifts." One of these, he said, would be constructed at Camp Springs, Md., with Federal funds and the other would be the improved Washington Airport which would come into being with the help of private capital as soon as the authorization to remove Military Road and fill in the lagoon was made by Congress.

"I can't see why the citizens of the District don't get behind these two proposals," Mr. Nichols said. Arlington County, he added should accept the contribution offered by the airport owners of $25,000, which would be used to bear part of the cost of constructing a new road skirting the present airport. "They will then have their cake and eat it too," he declared, adding "and so will the people of the District."

Representative Nichols is preparing a bill which will give the airport company authorization to unments which will make Washingdertake the necessary improveton Airport usable "more than 90 per cent of the time."

Roosevelt Predicts Television In Homes Sooner Than Expected

President Congratulates NBC Upon Opening of New Studios in Trans-Lux Building.

President Roosevelt thinks that "sooner than many of us realize" television will be established in homes throughout the United States.

His prediction was embodied in a letter to Lenox Lohr, president of the National Broadcasting Co., on the occasion of the dedication last night of the handsome new quarters of N. B. C. in the Trans-Lux Building, Fourteenth street near New York avenue northwest.

The letter, enlarged many times, was read by hundreds of well-wishers, including Cabinet officers, diplomats and members of Congress, who inspected the new studios.

The President's letter:

"The opening of the new studios for WRC and WMAL seems to me to symbolize the onward march of radio. And so, on this occasion, I am glad to send congratulations to you and your associates upon this progressive step.

Progress Is Watchword.

"Although the ether is a comparatively new means of communication and lends itself nationally in many useful ways, we find ourselves continuously amazed at the things which have been accomplished and the development of future potentialities.

"The watchword of science must be progress. It is not within the province of reactionaries to put obstacles in the way of orderly development nor to mark boundaries beyond which radio may not go. I believe that sooner than many of us realize television will be established in homes throughout this country. Indeed it may not be long before radio will make it possible for us to visualize at the breakfast table the front pages of daily newspapers or news reports, no matter how remote we may be from the place of their publication and distribution.

"In the spirit of progress, I greet you and all others whose efforts are directed to the advancement of radio; to the promotion of its way to ever increasing usefulness."

Guides who steered last night's throngs through the new N. B. C. studio here pointed to two large glass-covered apertures in the largest of the seven studios which, they explained, would be used when television arrives.

Farley, Wheeler Speak.

Among those who spoke over the air last night to celebrate the opening of the new N. B. C. quarters were Postmaster General James A. Farley, who broadcast from New York, and Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, leader in the fight against President Roosevelt's court program, who faced the microphone here.

"For a long time," said Farley, "I have been thoroughly convinced that one of the greatest benefits provided by radio is the Nation-wide communication and discussion of public questions that have been made possible by this modern instrumentality. As a result our people are now kept completely and accurately informed at all times on national matters, a situation which has brought about keener interest in public affairs than ever before existed in this country."

Senator Wheeler said:

"Impartial and only impartial use of the radio for discussions of controversies aids in the making of intelligent decisions by the American public and for the increasing of the efficiency of the democratic form of government. That is one of the contributions of the radio to our Nation, and that is one of its duties. And may I add that duty can only be performed by the maintaining of the free and uncensored use of radio facilities."

Others who spoke were Commissioner Eugene Sykes, of the Federal Communications Commission; Melvin C. Hazen, District Commissioner, and President Lohr, of N. B. C.

Senate Votes For $1,450,000 Cancer Center

Measure Would Establish Institute in or Near District.

The Senate passed and sent to the House yesterday a bill authorizing expenditure of $750,000 for establishment of a National Cancer Institute and a $700,000 annual grant for purchase of radium and operation of the institute.

The bill, similar to that introduced in the House Tuesday by Representative A. L. Bulwinkle after a conference with President Roosevelt, makes the institute a division of the Public Health Service.

Its buildings would be located in or near the District. The $700,000 grant would begin next year, allowing a year for the institute to be erected and equipped. For the first five years, $200,000 of this amount would go to purchase radium. Afterward the grant would be $500,000 yearly.

The 50 grams of radium thus purchased would be loaned to States, hospitals and institutions unable to make their own purchases.

The bill creates the National Advisory Council, to consist of six members to be appointed by Dr. Thomas Parran, the surgeon general.

In the institute would be co-ordinated the work being done in cancer research throughout the United Staes. New research would be fostered and training given in diagnosis and treatment.

The bill authorizes the Government to receive gifts "made unconditionally by will or otherwise for study or research, or for additions to the institute.

The measure was introduced by Senator Copeland and omits the provisions made in a former bill that the Government also build a 100-bed hospital for cancer patients.

Rockville Engineer Succumbs to Heart Attack as He Swims

Worthington Talbott, 55, of Rockville, Md., died yesterday afternoon while swimming on an outing of the Rockville Chamber of Commerce at Bay Ridge, Md. Death by heart attack was the verdict of the acting coroner, Joseph Armstrong, of Annapolis.

Mr. Talbott was found floating face down in shallow water by a group of boys. The Annapolis rescue squad administered adrenalin and worked over him for more than two hours. He was pronounced dead by Dr. Morris F. Klawans, of Annapolis.

Mr. Talbott, a lifelong resident, of Rockville and graduate of Cornell University School of Engineering, worked with the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission at Rockville in the past year.

Recently he has made his home with Wallis E. Ricketts, 218 West Montgomery avenue, Rockville. His brother was the late Otho Talbott, prominent lawyer of Rockville. Nearest surviving relatives are his sister-in-law, Mrs. Otho Talbott, and an aunt, Mrs. Irving Brooke.

Seal Would Renew Fight on Abattoir

Seeking to have the Senate District Committee resume hearings on the "anti-nuisance-industry" bill introduced by Chairman William H. King three months ago, Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal will confer today with Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the special sub-committee which conducted hearings on the measure last May.

Seal said yesterday he will ask for two more days to present evidence in support of the King bill, whose enactment would bar construction of the Adolf Goebel Co. abattoir at Benning and Anacostia roads northeast.

Failure to obtain reopening of the hearings will doom the campaign to prevent erection of the slaughterhouse. The corporation counsel has indicated if efforts to forestall construction prove fruitless, he will attempt to prevent operation of the plant.

Woman Hits Thief With FriedChicken And $400 Is Saved

A colored footpad abandoned an attempt to steal $400 when he was hit on the head with a fried chicken last night.

Mae Telford, who owns the Telford Buffeteria in the 4700 block of Fourteenth street northwest, was on her way home. In one hand she carried her pocketbook with the day's receipts—$400. In the other she carried a paper bag containing a fried chicken.

When a colored man near her home 1209 Delafield place northwest, tried to snatch her pocketbook, the woman walloped him over the head with the chicken and he fled.

D. C. Seeks Funds For Channel Work

The District Commissioners will ask Congress to include $389,000 in the third deficiency bill to pay the District's share of the $1,650,000 Washington Channel water front program, it was learned yesterday from Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan.

Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of the Army Engineer Corps, insisted that the District put up its share before funds are allocated for the eight-year project.

The work that affects Washington is not planned until the third year, but Federal officials believe that the District, like all other municipalities, must put up its share of the total before the Government begins work.

All D. C. Building Lifts Function on Same Day

All six elevators at the District building were operating satisfactorily yesterday, an event—or coincidence—well worth recording for posterity.

The District Building elevators are 20 years old and rare indeed is the day when all six are in good condition at the same time.

Cable Explosion Tosses Manhole Cover High in Air

Explosion of a high tension electric feeder cable near Sherman and Florida avenues northwest last night blew a manhole cover 20 feet in the air and startled residents in a three-block area.

A splice blew out in a 13,000-volt cable carrying electricity from the Potomac Electric Power Co. plant on Benning road to the Harvard street substation. Although lights in many sections of the city dimmed momentarily, service was not affected. Service trucks repaired the break.

Maryland Democrats To Gather Tomorrow

Radcliffe, both of Maryland; State Attorney General Herbert O'Conor, Mayor Howard Jackson, of Baltimore, and Lansdale Sasscer, president of the State Senate.

E. R. Walton, Jr., Talks At Cosmopolitan Club

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

The Week's Most Diversified Drama Was Disclosed In the Charity Boxing Bouts Last Wednesday Night

All Elements of the Dramatic Had Place in Variety Club-Post Carnival of Leather-Pushing; Former "Our Gangster" Here on Visit; "Going Native" Auditions for Tonight Canceled; Theater Notes.

THE most diversified drama of the week was staged at Griffith Stadium on Wednesday night, when the Variety Club, under the sponsorship of The Washington Post, put on its charity boxing show for the benefit of the District's underprivileged children.

BELL.

There was, first of all, the inspiring sight of a huge crowd banked about the ring and in the grandstands and boxes. Then there was all that kept the spectators on the edge of their chairs a great deal of the time. It was, of course, the action, color and flash of a series of bouts in these "physical contact" exhibitions of prowess and courage, victory and defeat, that every element of drama was unfolded.

There was comedy when Mr. "Prince Albert" and Mr. "Battling Zuzu," two Senegambian sockers, "tore" into each other with considerable futility on both sides. There was drama of the most compelling sort when World Middleweight Champion Freddie Steele and Charles "Hobo" Williams thudded their way almost through eight gruelling rounds in the main event. On Champion Steele's side was a superb demonstration of the perfection to which mental and physical co-ordination may be developed; on "Hobo" Williams—and he proved himself to be anything but a "tramp" Wednesday night—the spectacle of an "underdog" summoning every atom of the courage reposing in a great heart to give the champion a tougher battle than one suspects that magnificent fighting machine ever had anticipated. This, ladies and gentlemen, was a fight. In the minds of many, the ultimate outcome may have been a foregone conclusion, but the 10,000 in attendance were not sparing in their admiration of the lad who went down before the top man of his class. The "Hobo" put up as game and as aggressive a scrap as Washington fight fans have seen in many a long day and honestly won the plaudits that were thundered upon him when the lethal gloves of his opponent had written a period to his record of never having been knocked off his feet.

Then there were, too, major and minor tragedies inevitable to an evening of fisticuffing. The major found expression in the tears shed in his corner when "Hobo" Williams, not realizing that he had added inestimably to his prestige in the view of Washington fight fans, broke down and wept like a child that he had not made a better showing. And he was fighting the champ!

Among the minor tragedies were the quick effacement of Buck Everett at the powerful hands of young Eddie Hogan, Jack Dempsey's protege, who dropped his antagonist with a short left to the button in the first round of a scheduled eight-rounder; the discovery by Harry Gentile that every time he dropped his hands and stuck out his tongue one of Joey Archibald's mitts would smack him right in the kisser—an item that contributed materially to his subsequent technical knockout; the erasure of Mickey Flannagan's hope for the "duke" in the second round of a purported six, when Walter Woods tagged him with one that completely ruined his evening—and so on.

In other words, ladies and gentlemen, the showmen of Washington—with the sponsorship of this journal—put on a show; a show more replete with thrills and the unexpected than any of the pictures they display on their screens or the plays they exhibit on their stages. And for their trouble, and all of the hard work involved, they now are able to contemplate a net return that experts estimate will run to $3,000 or $4,000.

The bookmen are active again. A day or two ago there came to hand a gift copy of "The Road Back," the screen version of which opened at RKO-Keith's last night with a distinguished and flamboyant premiere, and yesterday, from Bennet A. Cerf, of Random House, a copy of "The Great Goldwyn," by Alva Johnston. Although brief portions of the latter have been snatched now and again from the serialization of the life of the former glove salesman turned picture producer, in the satevepost, I am ashamed to say that Erich Maria Remarque's sequel to his "All Quiet on the Western Front" never has been read by this column. It will be a pleasure, now, to read both books—and many thanks to their donors.

From a gentleman who wishes his name withheld from the public prints comes the following: "Dear Mr. Bell:—A letter to tell you, if you are interested, that Jackie Condon is in town for the summer. Mr. Condon was in the original 'Our Gang' comedies. He was the small blond with very fuzzy hair. Recently, before leaving Hollywood, he was interviewed for the role of Tom Sawyer. He is now 19, with black curly hair, and his ambition is a comeback. He is visiting with his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick W. Condon, at the Colonial Village Apartments, Clarendon, Va."

It seems hardly possible that even a member of the original "Our Gang" group developed on the Hal Roach lot could be 19 years old. Many will be able to recall this youngster now grown to young manhood and many, in so doing, will be convinced in the matter of that axiom—if that is what it is—that "tempus fugits." Good luck, Mr. Condon, and may that comeback come true.

By beginning early and working late—7:30 p. m. to long after midnight—Gene Ford, director of the "Going Native" revue to be staged at Loew's Capitol Theater next month, has been able to audition more than 300 aspirants for places in the cast and chorus of this annual production which has pointed the way to professional success for so many Washingtonians who have gone on to fame and, one hopes, their fair share of fortune. In view of the unexpectedly rapid progress that was made Wednesday night and last night, it is announced that tonight's auditions have been definitely canceled. Those selected to participate in this year's production will be announced the first of next week. Rehearsals will be called shortly thereafter.

A match between the Washington table tennis champion, Elias Schuman, 1900 Fourteenth street, and the United States champions, Ruth Hughes Aarons and Viktor Barna, headlining this week's stage bill at the Earle, is in prospect. Aarons and Barna, who have given exhibitions at Radio City, in the Rainbow Room and other theaters and night clubs, make a practice of inviting anyone in the audience to step up on the stage and bat a few fast ones over the net. Mr. Schuman promises to be in the audience tonight at the 9 o'clock performance.

Signs of the Times.

Violating a vow not to do this again for a while, I still cannot resist the temptation to call attention to one more double-feature marquee sign on a Western theater:

"MAN BETRAYED"
"LADY, BE CAREFUL"

From Automat to "Easy Living"

These two smiling young people met first in an automat, with cataclysmic results to the coin-in-slot eatery. They met next in the imperial suite of the swankiest hotel in New York. All this occurs in "Easy Living," opening today on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. The two smiling young people are Ray Milland and Jean Arthur. Edward Arnold and Mary Nash also are prominent in this cyclonic film farce.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, July 22.—Idol Chatter: It is hard to believe that Jeanette MacDonald's now gorgeous pins once earned her the school nickname of "Broomstick-legs." The jewels Madeleine Carroll wears to swank affairs must be worth a king's ransom. Charles Butterworth's talent for befuddled comedy was discovered when he made a supposedly serious speech at a political rally. One-word description of Mae West: Sexaudacious. Those hats Betty Furness wears off-screen would make even Queen Mary laugh.

JEANETTE McDONALD.

Buck Jones will not have hot romance in his pictures because "the kids wouldn't like it." Common sight in Brentwood: Luise Rainer shopping for groceries and bewailing the high cost of living. Those cut-to-the waist fronts the bolder celebs are wearing on evening gowns this season are not new; Phyllis Haver introduced them in 1927. Collectors' note: Kay Francis never sniffs at an antique snuff box. Study in contrast: Dick Foran tried for grand opera, and wound up in horse opera.

Cary Grant used to be a professional stilt-walker, but his feet are firmly on the ground now. Glenda Farrell says she likes her men like pianos—grand and upright. When Errol Flynn enters the Warner Brothers cafe, every female present opens her compact. Peas from the same pod: Jack Oakie and Paul Whiteman. Leo Carillo should have been a drum major; his passion for leading parades is irrepressible.

Browsing around Paramount, I noticed Herbert Marshall driving in state from his dressing room to the stage—and I was reminded of the days when only Marlene Dietrich and Mae West were permitted to bring their cars on the lot. Bing Crosby happened to see a box-office rating one day on which his name appeared far above that of either lady, and next morning the crooner drove up to the automobile gate with the flat announcement, "I'm coming in!" "Sorry, Mr. Crosby," the gateman replied. "My orders allow only the West and Dietrich cars inside."

"Okay," said Bing. "You tell the front office that I've gone home and that I won't be back until that order reads West, Dietrich and Crosby." A phone call from the big boss beat him to the house and the Crosby car has been parked on the lot ever since.

I have heard a lot about fair weather friends in Hollywood, so it is refreshing to tell a story about the other kind. An old-time stage actress, Gladys Earlcott, has been eking out a rather meager living here and having a tough time making both ends meet. Years ago she was a friend of Mrs. Basil Rathbone and when the Rathbones learned, recently, of her plight, they invited her to their home for a week-end. While she was there, they had her apartment redecorated and refurnished, and they also loaded her pantry with a plentiful supply of staples. It seems that those silver-linings in clouds are sometimes man-made.

You never can tell where temperament will break out next in this goofy town. I have seen so many former nobodies suddenly develop phobias, fixations, fancies and follies when they became somebodies that I am inured to the shock—but when Fred Waring, the orchestra leader, banned all visitors from the set where his music-makers are appearing in "Varsity Show," because he "can't work if people are watching him," poor old Fidler was sort of stunned.

Waring's Pennsylvanians have been strutting their stuff on theater stages and night clubs for more than ten years!

Hard Worker.

William Seiter, director of the musical, "The Life of the Party," has had only four months vacation in the 22 years he has been with motion pictures. He began his career in Keystone Comedies.

Ray Noble Makes Debut With Fred

Ray Noble, often called "the Paul Whiteman of England" and also widely known in the United States, will abandon his orchestra duties temporarily to make his debut as a film actor in "Damsel in Distress," first solo starring vehicle for Fred Astaire.

How to Hum.

Bruce Cabot is taking humming lessons. Reason: He can't sing, but the script of "Black Lightning" calls for him to be cheerful in a prison death house, and Director Edward Cahn ordered him to learn to hum a tune. An experienced "hummer" from the M-G-M music department is teaching Cabot to hum "La Golondrina" and the student is coming along nicely.

New Contracts to Three RKO People

Lucille Ball, actress, and Harold Kusell and Bert Granet, writers, have received new contracts from S. J. Briskin, production chief at RKO Radio.

Cancels Vacation.

Eleanor Powell will have to cancel her mountain vacation in order to start rehearsing dance steps for "Rosalie," in which she is co-starred with Nelson Eddy.

The star had planned to go to Yosemite for a month, but instead will have to be satisfied with a week at the local beaches.

'Road Back' Is Given Premire At RKO-Keith's

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE ROAD BACK." Universal picturization of Erich Maria Remarque's sequel to "All Quiet on the Western Front," adapted to the screen by R. C. Sherriff and Charles Cromwell. "Slim" John King, Richard Cromwell. "Slim" Summerville, Andy Devine, and Barbara Read, with Louise Fazenda, Noah Berry, Jr., Maurice Murphy, John Emery, Etienne Girardot, Lionel Atwill, Frank Reicher, Spring Byington, Arthur Hohl, William B. Davidson, Samuel S. Hinds, Robert Warwick and Jean Rouverol. Directed by James Whale. Reviewed Thursday night at RKO-Keith's.

In its vivid depiction of the effects of war on the young manhood of any nation, the difficulty they encounter in the attempt to orient themselves to the ways of peace after four years of bloodshed and slaughter and the incomprehensible antagonisms they encounter at the hands of those who recruited them from their school desks, and sent them away to the shambles of the front line trenches, this is a deeply thoughtful and significant picture. Its serious preachment, if that is what it may be called, is all on the side of everlasting world amity.

But there are detractions and distractions from this major intent of the story that obtrude themselves too frequently to support the premise with proper emphasis and power. Much of the comedy has been dragged in by the heels, in a manner of speaking, and is hardly what one expects from hardened soldiers who have come home from hell firm in the conviction that what they have been through should never be allowed to happen again. The schoolroom scene seems to me the greatest offender in this regard. The still-young veterans, many of them wearing iron crosses for valor on the field of battle, are marched into their former classroom, seated at desks with children and there have restored to them the trinkets of which they were deprived by way of discipline years before—penknives, water guns, fish hooks, and the like.

The scene is wholly out of keeping with the picture's obvious purpose of pointing the predicament in which a group of heroic young men found themselves through no fault and no choice of their own. There are numerous other "comedy" scenes still remaining in the footage of "The Road Back" that as seriously transgress the demands of a sound and convincing exposition of a matter that more than once has shaken the world to its foundations, and may do so again.

Is Not Grim Enough.

If "The Road Back" is to be looked upon as a comedy-drama, all well and good—except that comedy and the horrors of No Man's Land do not readily mix. The complaint to be lodged against "The Road Back" is not that it is too grim, but that it is not grim enough the best to fulfill its supposed intention.

The action begins in the trenches the night before the signing of the Armistice. The next morning many are needlessly slain because the Armistice did not become effective until 11 a. m., and a few martinets determined to keep the war going until the last minute of fighting time. Eventually the fragment of a command that has survived find themselves back home. The tremendous weight of what they have been through rests on their minds with the persistence of a perpetual nightmare.

Revolution breaks out and they see their former comrades of the trenches shot down in cold blood because they dare ask for food, shelter and occupation. One of them marries—to supply another interlude of extraneous "comedy"—another believes he has come home to wed the girl to whom he was engaged before he left for the front, only to find that she is enamored of the slacker munitions maker who got rich while he was facing death. He kills his rival with a shot through the heart, is brought to trial and convicted. It is at the trial that the basic intent of the book finds its most eloquent and most forceful expression. There is sounded here the note that should dominate the entire picture, thanks to the spirited testimony on behalf of their friend by other members of his command who point out to the court the problems with which they are faced.

Is Capably Played.

While the cast boasts no great "box-office names," it nevertheless is such as to lend something of verisimilitude to a drama that should be more penetrating than it is. John King, Richard Cromwell, Andy Devine, "Slim" Summerville and Maurice Murphy, as the accused, are the mouthpieces of millions of returned soldiers in this brief closing episode of the story. The romantic movements of the narrative are guided largely by Barbara Read and Jean Rouverol, the one a girl of honest purpose; the other a flighty young thing in quest only of the false glitter of a "good time," so long as it costs enough.

Other members of the cast who contribute valuably to the play's fundamental theme are Frank Reicher and Spring Byington, as the parents of the son who returns to them completely transformed in viewpoint and demeanor; Lionel Atwill, as a wily prosecuting attorney; Samuel S. Hinds, defense attorney; Robert Warwick, the presiding judge at Albert's trial, and John Emery, as Van Hagen, the officer whose veins ran iron instead of warm, human blood.

With the production's magnitude and realism, and the expertness of its photography, there can be no quibbling. "The Road Back" is patently a picture to which Universal gave its all in the matter of material investiture.

Preceding last night's premiere showing, all of the trimmings of a real Hollywood premiere were staged in front of the theater and in the lobby to greet the brilliant official and civilian audience in attendance in such numbers as to overflow the capactiy of the RKO-Keith Theater.

The feature is supplement by the Pathe News and an amusing cartoon comedy, "I Want to Be an Actress".

Substitute Act on Earle Stage

They are Enrica and Novello, two of the most graceful exponents of the poetry of motion. The Condos Brothers, from "Wake Up and Live," also have been added to the bill.

ENTERPRISE: Sidney Kingsley, the Pulitzer Prize playwright, sat with Katharine Cornell the other night. Miss Cornell hinted that she would be interested in a modern play, and Kingsley hinted that he'd like to write one for her . . . Miss Cornell then discussed her forthcoming tour. "And when you're in China," Kingsley dreamed, "I'll call you to ask how much my royalties are." . . . "And I'll tell you 100 million yen," Miss Cornell replied, just as dreamily . . . "How much would that be?" Kingsley asked . . . "Your royalties of 5 per cent of the gross," the star replied, less dreamily . . . "Then the deal," replied the come-to-earth playwright, "is off!"

SUCCESS: Sherman Billingsley, owner of the Stork Club, discovered an unusual customer at his place one night. His name is B. Neal Harris. Thirty years ago in Enid, Okla., Mr. Harris had sold a then new soft drink extract to Billingsley's father, who owned the confectionery shop in that village . . . "That just proves," Billingsley philosophized, "that a person can't stick to one place or one job and succeed. Now if I had stayed there, maybe I would own that confectionery shop now . . . "I'm still with the soft drink people," Harris sighed and offered his card. It read: "B. Neal Harris—Vice President."

DEFEAT: Twelve weeks ago the owners of Minsky's Gaiety Theater, at Broadway and Forty-sixth street, started a campaign for the return of their theater license, which had been canceled in the clean-up by Commissioner Paul Moss . . . After a three-month battle they emerged victorious, although they had lost the right to use the words "Minsky" and "Burlesque." . . . They had a gala opening last week, ran six days, lost $2,500 and Sunday night closed the doors forever.

SWANK: Louis B. Mayer, head of M-G-M, sailed on the Rex for Europe Saturday. For him was reserved the most elegant suite aboard that ship . . . On the eve of his departure he gave specific instructions to his subordinates with regard to the baggage to be brought aboard . . . One of the packages was wrapped elegantly in a Waldorf-Astoria box. Before going to the Waldorf to secure the box, Mr. Mayer's employes had scoured the entire Lower East Side for the contents he desired so much—three loaves of Ghetto bread and 24 seeded rolls.

AMITY: Jack Murray, co-author of "Room Service," decided to spend some of his share of the $255,000 paid for the movie rights. He rented a home in New Hope, Pa., came to New York, hired a houseman and drove him back to New Hope. The servant was most obsequious on the drive out. When they stopped for lunch, Murray couldn't induce him to sit down. "I stand up while master dines," he explained. "I know my place." . . . Murray finally made long explanations—that the home was not baronial and that he desired a big-happy-family spirit . . . The new employe finally nodded and agreed to enter in the desired family spirit. He was fired the next day—for having helped himself to a quart of Scotch, a quart of milk and 22 cans of precious imported beer.

FAME: Werner Janssen, the conductor, has taken ads in the Hollywood trade papers, quoting from the critics who have reviewed his concerts—and all attesting to his leadership in the field. For some strange reason Mr. Janssen included a quote from a Philadelphia reviewer, who said: "Werner Janssen has an engaging combination of qualities which should make him a White Hope for a great orchestra when the champion himself makes a move to withdraw from the ring." . . . Mr. Janssen might not realize it, but this is a gread ad—for Stokowski.

MEMORY: "Snoony" Blair visited England recently and was invited by a producer to attend the premiere of his show. "It's 'No, No, Nanette,'" he informed . . . "But that's such an old show," Miss Blair stated . . . "This is a revival," the producer replied. "We presented it here 12 years ago, but we're putting it on again." . . . "Why?" asked Miss Blair. "Did you forget something?"

ROMANCE: Leslie Fenton, husband of Ann Dvorak, was a star in the silent films, but the advent of the talkies changed all that. When Miss Dvorak, after her performance in "Scarface," appeared to be headed for stardom, Fenton induced her to quit and travel with him around the world. They saw the Orient, the capitals of Europe and for many months reveled in a 50-francs-a-week pension in Paris . . . Then he brought her back to Hollywood, where they're very happy, living on a farm which pays for their support. "I know what Hollywood can do to a person who is a star," Fenton explained to her. "Now be a star—now that you've really had the chance to see Life, and live it."

U. S. Urged to Cut Debt $1,000,000,000 a Year

New York, July 22 (A.P.).—An average reduction of $1,000,000,000 annually for the next ten years in the national debt of $36,000,000,000 was recommended tonight by the Committee on Government Credit of the Twentieth Century Fund.

The present session of Congress should levy new taxes, the committee asserted, if there is any doubt existing revenues will be insufficient to assure a balanced budget in 1938.

Hazel Enjoined From Milk Sale At Low Price

Head of Dairy in Fairfax Says Economy Basis of 12-Cent Quart.

W. A. Hazel, head of Hazel's Dairy in Fairfax County, Va., will be served today with a temporary injunction restraining the dairy from selling milk at 12 cents a quart, 2 cents below the minimum prescribed by the Virginia Milk Commission. The commission obtained the injunction yesterday in Richmond Law and Equity Court but delayed serving it because of a death in Hazel's family.

Hazel announced last night he would abide by the injunction. He will appear in court to show cause why the order should be dissolved but believes he will be unsuccessful. In that case he will drop the fight.

Claims Efficiency Basis.

The head of the 6-year-old dairy explained that he and his two sons, R. E. Hazel and T. I. Hazel, who are in business with him, have derived sufficient income despite their low price sale.

At the same time, according to the Associated Press, the milk commission made public a letter signed by Chairman J. S. Agnew, of Burkeville. Agnew's letter was in answer to one the dairy had circulated among its patrons, explaining that it supplied "the highest quality grade A milk" and that "through various economies and low overhead and operating costs we have been able for more than five years to benefit by selling milk at 12 cents a quart."

"Interests" Blamed.

"A concerted effort has been made by certain interests," the dairy's letter continued, "to raise and control the price of milk in Arlington and nearby Fairfax counties."

According to Agnew, the commission records show that at a public hearing held on February 20, 1936, Hazel "testified that he was paying producers 20 cents per gallon for milk testing 4 per cent, and further that he only bought milk from producers who had not obtained permits from the Washington Health Department. Also, that he had to have his own price, as this was the only way he could meet competition."

Washburn Climbs Highest Unscaled Peak on Continent

Word was received by the National Geographic Society last night that Bradford Washburn had scaled Mount Lucania, highest unclimbed peak in North America, a 17,150 foot giant of the St. Elias Range, Yukon, Canada.

In a telegram from Valdez, Alaska, to Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the society, Washburn said:

"Robert Bates and I have succeeded in climbing both Mount Lucania, highest unclimbed peak in North America, and Mount Steele, the two original thwarted objectives of the National Geographic Society Yukon Expedition of 1935. We have taken mapping photographs from the summits of both peaks and have obtained a detailed photographic record of both climbs."

Police Hunt Two In Md. Jailbreak

Prince Frederick, Md., July 22 (A.P.).—Two youths who escaped from Calvert County Jail while awaiting trial on a theft charge were sought tonight by police.

Wilbur Boyd, 15, and Pete Raleigh, 17, of Washington, were gone from their cell when the jailer took them breakfast this morning. Investigation showed they apparently had loosened some recently repaired bars in a widow to make their escape last night.

They had been arrested at North Beach Monday night on the charge they stole meat, groceries and clothing from an automobile. They were scheduled for a hearing Saturday before Magistrate W. W. Duke. Two other youths, Joseph Pedro, 15, of Bladensburg, and William O'Neale, of Washington, held in connection with the case, said Boyd and Raleigh asked them to go with them, but they refused.

Billed as the "largest independent circus in the world," the show's top performers include the Hanneford family of bareback riders, the Flying Arbaughs, Ray Goody, tight wire artist; Frank Shepherd, Erma Ward and Max Gruber.

Mix appears through the two-and-one-half hour program in exhibitions of riding on Tony, the horse that won fame in the movies. Night and afternoon performances are scheduled from Monday through Wednesday.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Habitual Lying of Husband Who Otherwise Possesses Many Good Qualities Is About to Wreck Home.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married five years to a man several years older than myself. We have two lovely children. He claims to love me and I once loved him but his habit of continually lying to me has just about wrecked our relationship. I realize you can't expect perfection in a man and my husband doesn't drink or smoke and he hasn't been unfaithful; but he won't be honest with me. I have to pretend emotion when he makes love to me. Otherwise, the result is anger and quarrels. I can't help the way I feel toward him; but he thinks I am deliberately trying to hurt him. He doesn't realize the damage his lying has done.

* * * *

I never know when he is telling the truth. For instance, he went on a trip with a friend of his. When he returned, I asked how the friend's wife and children were. He said he hadn't seen them; that he hadn't gone to the house. Later, when we were visiting their home, we were introduced to a neighbor. The neighbor said to my husband: "Oh, yes. I remember you. I met you when you were here to take that trip with ohn." On the way home I asked my husband why he had lied. He insisted he hadn't. Rather than start an argument, I dropped the subject.

* * * *

Some days later this couple called and my husband brought up the subject with them. He had the man tell me point by point how they got together at his house; when they came back, etc.; thus making me look like a suspicious, jealous wife. My husband takes two attitudes about his deception: either he says I make it necessary for him to lie (which I don't) or else he says: "What are you going to do about it?" after he has been found out.

* * * *

Another instance: I had always thought he had to be at work by 4 o'clock on Sunday afternoons. He had told me so. One Sunday afternoon when a friend of his was there, I happened to say: "It's nearly 4 o'clock. You'd better hurry." The friend looked mystified. My husband said to him: "They've made some changes at the office and I have to be there at 4 o'clock now." I said, "But I thought you always had to be there at 4 o'clock." He said I must have been imagining things. But I could prove by a dozen friends that for months I had been under the impression he reported for work at 4 o'clock.

* * * *

I could go on and on, reciting innumerable instances of such petty lies. I never know what to say to our friends, because anything I say may show him up in a lie, or make me look like a fool or an object of pity. For the children's sake, I would like to save our marriage. But true happiness cannot exist for us unless he stops lying and embarrassing me. I am young; only 23. Do you think there is any hope? ANXIOUS.

DEAR ANXIOUS: Has it occurred to you that you may be largely responsible for your husband's habitual "white lying?" Since he has no other bad habits, and apparently isn't regarded as a liar by his friends and business associates, it seems likely there may be some element in your relationship not conductive to frankness between you. It would seem to me, without further knowledge of the case, that you may be suffering from a bad attack of "pernicious husband suspicion," an ailment too common to wives and one that leads finally to disdupted homes and unhappiness.

* * * *

It is well when a person tells you an untruth, and you are certain it is intended to be one and not just a careless, thoughtless answer, to discover why he or she felt the truth could not be told to you. For there is always a reason for lying. Few persons lie just for the fun of it, although it is a habit which can fasten on one and thus become almost automatic.

* * * *

Usually there are two reasons for lying: fear of some consequences, or to avoid unpleasantness. This holds true of children as well as of adults. As Wordsworth says, "the boy is father to the man." hence your husband may have formed the habit in childhood of telling lies out of fear or to keep things pleasant about him. If this is so, it is a factor in his character that he should face frankly and strive to overcome, and you could be of great assistance to him in this effort if you cultivated a feeling of sympathy for his fault instead of thinking of it in terms of how it affects you.

* * * *

Therefore, in handling this problem, you should first figure out why your husband feels he cannot tell the truth to you even about so slight a matter as the incident you cite in regard to entering his friend's house and meeting his wife and children. There would seem to be no reason in the world why a lie should have been told about so natural an event as calling on a man's wife and children when about to go on a trip with him.

* * * *

Search back through your own memory. Have you ever displayed the slightest jealousy in regard to other women whom your husband may meet socially either with you or when he has been alone? If so, he may have told you that he had not met his friend's wife on the trip to avoid recrimination of some kind or other. That, of course, would not be a proper attitude for him to take but it would explain his untruth. Some men would regard such an evasion as merely a "white lie" and not serious. In fact, it is a part of a defense psychology men are apt to develop toward oversuspicious wives. The wives have only themselves to blame if a lack of frankness springs up between them and their husbands through this cause.

* * * *

Did it ever occur to you that your husband might have been telling the truth after all, and that the neighbor's memory, not his, was at fault as to the circumstances under which they had met previously? It might have been better to have given your husband the benefit of the doubt when it came to a question of his word or that of the neighbor's. People are so apt to make mistakes as to time and place of meeting others. Such circumstantial evidence is of little real value unless it is investigated thoroughly.

* * * *

Evidently your husband was deeply hurt by your attitude or he would not have taken the trouble to talk it over with his friend before you. As to the time at which he was supposed to report for work, that incident is not, to my mind, very serious. Perhaps you just fancied the friend looked mystified. Your husband's explanation could have referred to the beginning of his new office hours at any time the change had been made.

* * * *

People who live in glass houses should never throw stones. Now, sit down and examine your own conscience. Have you ever told an untruth to your husband? Any white lies? Any prevarications or evasions in order to keep the family life serene?

* * * *

What you need in your relationship with your husband is more trust in him. According to your letter he has many good points outside of this so-called habit of lying. And you have not made out a very good case against him in this regard. The best way to clear all this is to have a truly frank talk with him. Tell him how this habit distresses you, what it is doing to your love for him and how it is wrecking your trust in him. Get him to promise you to tell you the exact truth, no matter what the result may be. Then your ship of matrimony may enter smoother waters. M. H.

A Restrained Appetite and the 'Daily Dozen,' Best Means to Feminine Grace, Says Dancer

Margit Tarasoff Also Advises Cheerfulness and Deodorants.

By Malvina Lindsay.

MRS. MARGIT TARASOFF disposed of the "How to be charming?" question in one sentence. "Keeping smiling," she said, "and use plenty of ——" (here she named a widely known deodorant).

"You may laugh all you please at the Pollyanna idea and the advertisements that discuss the thing 'your best friend won't tell you,'" continued the ballet mistress of the Dancing Masters of America the two-week normal school that are conducting at the Hotel Mayflower. "But two of the most important things for a woman to remember are her smile and her deodorants."

Mrs. Tarasoff had just come from a ballet class, where for hour she had smilingly poised and oscillated her lithe, sun-tanned body in demonstrations before a large class that her husband, Ivan Tarasoff, master of the ballet, conducted. The regime had been arduous work, yet not for a moment had her face become strained, tense or earnest.

Stresses Cheerfulness.

"We dancers must work so hard that our only salvation is to be happy in what we do," she explained. "The only way to make work easy is to enjoy it. And so I think that is also the only way to make life easy. A woman who has cheerfulness and personal daintiness makes life easier both for herself and those about her."

On the physical side of feminine beauty, Mrs. Tarasoff—she has been dancing since she was 8 years old—naturally would put grace of body first. For the average woman she simplifies that attainment into two succient formulas:

"Don't overeast."

"Never forget your 'daily dozen.'"

On her own body there is not a flabby spot. There is not a suggestion of a sagging muscle in the places about the waist, hips, under the arms, where women of her age (42) usually begin to find them. Her walk is a glide so effortless your are scarcely aware she is moving.

"I eat anything I want," she said. "But I never overeat. That is the secret of all dieting, never overeat. I have no certain diet though, of course, I lean heavily toward salads and fruit. I do not eat meat on a hot day."

Cigarettes and cocktails?

"Never!" she exclaimed. "Dancers cannot afford to smoke. It interferes with their breathing. Alcohol makes fat and over heats the body."

Regular Exercise.

Besides her dancing regime every day as an instructor in the school her husband and herself conduct in New York, Mrs. Tarasoff faithfully does her "daily dozen" for 15 minutes every morning by the radio.

"Any woman can do that," she said. "Why even if these exercises are only done for five minutes a day they are bound to improve the figure. Don't tell me there is any woman who doesn't have five minutes a day to make herself better looking! And the whole point is—make the regime regular. Don't skip a day a day hoping to make up for it the next."

Training For Babies.

Mrs. Tarasoff took from her bureau a photograph of two erect, straight-legged little girls, in play suits. "My daughters, Nadia, 15, and Margit, 11," she explained. "They have done their exercises every day since they were able to walk. Every mother should start her children on daily exercises as soon as possible.

Massage For Babies.

"When my babies were born I wanted them above all to be graceful. I rubbed and massaged their bodies with olive oil, especially their joints. Later I taught them exercises. When they were 8 years old—I do not believe in teaching children to dance earlier—their regular dancing lessons were begun."

Mrs. Tarasoff is not dogmatic about what the "daily dozen" exercises shall be. She is not even insistent that there be an even "dozen."

"I do the usual ones," she said, "touching the floor with my hands, putting my arms above my head and stretching from side to side—oh, anything that brings all the muscles into play and gives them a good stretching. My favorite? Well if I had to stick to one, perhaps I should choose this:"

She took a stand with feet slightly apart, hands on the hips. "Now bend down as far as possible not bending the knees, then over to the side, stretching all the muscles at the waistline, then back, then at the other side, making the circle. Do this ten times each way first from the right then from the left. This twists the center of the body and loosens up the circulation."

How to Walk.

For straightening the legs, Mrs. Tarasoff recommends kicking from the waist as high as possible without bending the knees. The back kick is particularly effective and should be done rapidly.

"Women need to limber up their legs and use them properly," she said. "So many women walk badly. The reason it that they walk from the knees down instead of swinging their legs from the hips. To walk gracefully you should first assume the right posture, stretching the body as high and straight as possible then swinging out freely from the waist without bending the knees.

"Another thing, too many women put their heels down first when they walk. That's why it seems as if the building is shaking when they cross the floor. When the toe is placed down first, the movement is light and graceful."

Born in Norway, Mrs. Tarasoff met her husband, a former member of the Imperial Russian Ballet, when he came to Oslo, following the outbreak of the World War, to be director of the National Theater ballet in which she was dancing. Tarasoff married his pupil and together they toured the world in various dance groups until they established their own school.

Underwood & Underwood.

Cheerfulness is the cornerstone of feminine charm, also a great aid in making work seem easy, maintains Margit Tarasoff, ballet mistress of the normal class of the Dancing Masters of America, now in session here.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 22.

I EARNESTLY HOPE that you are not weary of my New York dog stories. I am constantly interested and amazed at this town's canine adventures.

ALICE HUGHES.

Many others feel the same way.

The most astonishing dog story of the summer concerns Miss Gloria Reuch, a 35-year-old teacher, and her hairy little friends. The other day Miss Gloria appeared at the apartment of Mrs. Alverda Marion to look at two rooms advertised for rent. The teacher had a Scottie under each arm. She liked the rooms, and Mrs. Marion said it would be quite all right about the dogs. "But I have several others," said Miss Reuch. "Never mind," said the landlady. "I love dogs, too."

So Miss Gloria left the pair and the next day, drove up in a cab with no less than ten others of the same breed. Naturally, this was a few too many for dog-loving Mrs. Marion, and within two days she had taken her Scottie trouble to court. The two women told their stories to Magistrate Burke, who saw eye to eye with the suffering landlady and gave Miss Reuch four days to move out with her army of Caledonian darlings. He further suggested strongly that she take her gang to the country and board them.

Right on top of this strange saga comes an equally fantastic tale. One of the chief joys of Mrs. William H. Robinson, wife of one of our judges, is a French bulldog named Jean. During the horrible hot spell from which we have just emerged Jean showed signs of acute suffering in the Robinsons' Long Island home. So his doting mistress took him to an air-conditioned room in the ultra-smart St. Regis Hotel, where they spent three comfortable days, at a cost of $42, while the judge pegged along in the Long Island heat. When the weather broke wife and dog came home. Fish stories! Beat our dog stories!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—As I hope you realize, this is no blessed event, but I must mention two approaching little strangers who interest people here a great deal. One is awaited in the household of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Duchin, he the band leader, and she the social notable, Marjorie Oelrichs, a happy couple who have mixed the musical and social worlds with great success. The other newcomer is on the way to the California home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fonda, the movie actor and the former very pretty Francis Seymour Brokaw, one of the lovely girls who used to lunch at the Colony and sup at El Morocco before she moved into the movie set. They will be two little children of two worlds . . .

One of the nicest parties of the midsummer was the Bastille Day affair given by Lily Pons at her summer home in Silvermine, Conn. She had a host of neighbors and fellow opera stars in to celebrate the great French holiday. For while the cutie from Cannes love America, she is still a good Frenchwoman. Now the tiny one is preparing to go to Hollywood to make her annual movie, an ordeal which no doubt will again pull her weight from 105 down to 100, if you can call that weight.

* * * *

In a few years, when you buy that new mink coat, the skins may have come not from the wilds but from a quiet upstate farm. Two recent prep school graduates, George Trow and David Coggeshall, who grew up together and amused themselves setting traps, have actually started a mink ranch near the town of Pleasantville.

Already the boys have 25 mink, each of which, when deceased, is worth $30 in the market. It's a ticklish business, as mink, when frightened, devour their young, and a few days ago the boys lost five during a heavy thunderstorm. The lads are ambitious. Maybe silver fox next? Perhaps ermine, they say.

Casual Manners Ruled Correct At House Party

Hostess Is Not Rude to Leave Guests Much to Themselves.

By Margaret Wallace.

HOUSE PARTY manners are very important at this season of the year. One young girl who has recently been a guest at a house party has been much disturbed by the "casualness of her hostess."

She writes: "I arrived at the country station near the estate where I was invited to spend a week-end, at the time designated by my hostess. I was met by the chauffeur and no member of the family. When we arrived at the house the chauffeur took my bags to my room at once and the maid escorted me there. She explained that my hostess had gone for a ride and that cocktails were to be served before dinner on the terrace. This was in the early afternoon. I did not see my hostess or any member of the family until I arrived on the terrace, dressed for dinner, for cocktails. I would not have dressed, but the maid came and asked me which dress I wanted to wear. I think this hostess was very rude. When I returned to my room that night I found a note saying "Luncheon at 1 o'clock at the home of Mrs. White. The motor will be at the door at 12:30." The next morning I was the only one down for breakfast. While I played tennis with some of the guests and went for a swim in the pool I did not see the hostess or host until we all met to get in the automobiles to go to the luncheon. It was so the entire week-end."

The only thing we have to say is that we wish we had been invited to such a well-arranged country house week-end. The maid and the chauffeur were acting under instructions and were making the guest comfortable. Most guests when they arrive at a country home on a hot day after a train journey are glad of the little respite. At most homes of the type where it is possible to give large country house parties it is usual for the hostess to allow the guests to breakfast as they will, either in their rooms or in the dining room. It is not considered necessary for the hostess to appear. There are some homes where the breakfast hour of the house party is an event of the day. In that case the guests would doubtless find little reminders in their rooms that breakfast will be at such an hour. Or well trained servants guide the guests in this regard.

Many hostesses, even those who preside over large establishments, consider it a duty of the hostess to be on hand to greet arriving guests. Under any circumstances the hostess must be very cordial in greeting her guests, whether she meet them at the front door or in the drawing room before dinner.

Good Budgets Mean Success

MAKE your dream house come true by budgeting!

With a budget you can eat better, dress better, put more money into big purchases like a car or a house—because planned spending stops up the leaks.

Should you or shouldn't you buy that "bargain-table" white hat you might wear four or five times? "It's not in the budget," you can say cheerfully. In this friendly way a budget holds down expenses for food, clothing, recreation, and challenges you to make every cent you spend return the greatest value.

Budgeting takes the strain out om home buying, too. Successful budgeteers say the value of your house should be no more than 2½ times your yearly income. That is, on an income of $1,500 a year, budget to meet the interest on the mortgage, payment on the principal, insurance, taxes and upkeep of a $3,750 house.

A budget need not be complicated. It's simply a plan for getting what you want most. Your budget may be quite unlike the budget of the Joneses next door—because you have different needs and tastes.

Our 40-page booklet, "How to Budget Your Income," gives details on outlining your own personal spending plan. Ruled pages for your budget accounting.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "How to Budget Your Income," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Corset Is Best Way to Achieve Figure-Control

Purchase Is No Ordeal if Measurements Are Taken Properly.

IF YOUR figure is not what it shoud be, a proper foundation garment is the best thing to improve it. Do not treat the buying of a corset as an ordeal. You will find it an interesting and enlightening experience if you take the time to be measured and fitted properly. Accurate measurements should include the waist, hips, bust line and length. Never permit your measurements to be taken over a counter or without removing your clothing.

After measuring and studying your figure, your corsetiere will suggest a corset best suited to you. Do not be surprised if she advises a change. If you have been wearing a girdle and brassiere, she may suggest changing to an all-in-one, particularly if you are short through the waist. On the other hand, she may advise a girdle and brassiere if you are accustomed to the other type.

After you have made your selection, try on your garment entirely hooked or laced, with garters fastened. The slightest garter adjustment often makes a great difference in how well your corset fits.

If you are being fitted to an all-in-one, be sure it is long enough—but not too long—between the under bust and waistline. Always sit down in your new garment—to find out whether its bones will stick into you. For most figures a corset should be long enough to extend under the body when you sit down. If you need control through the thighs, you may require a still longer corset.

Crabs, With Shells Both Hard and Soft, Find Their Place in Tasty Summer Recipes

Tartar Sauce or Chopped Nuts Good With Shellfish.

Shrimp and Lobsters Also Find Spots on New Menus.

By Rebekah Blake.

YEAR BY year, as they become available to more persons, there is less chance for shrimp, crabs and lobsters to live a life of isolation within their own shells.

It takes a good deal of courage to attack a soft-shell crab for the first time, but when you finally taste the first claw you will become a regular crab eater. You will welcome summer, because it brings crabs, in the hard and soft shell varieties, to the market.

When the crab's shell is hard the meat may be taken out after it has been cooked, picked and packed for shipping. If it is not put to use in this way the crab will shed its shell and is then so tender that it need be cooked only a few minutes in butter or deep fat. A tartar sauce is often used with crabs, or you may brown chopped almonds or Brazil nuts in the butter in which the crabs were sauteed. Lemon juice may be added.

In many markets you may buy sea food ready cooked, but if you prepare it at home there is a special process that should be followed. Always have the water (enough to cover) boiling and salted before you put live fish in. For lobster use 1-3 cup salt (rock salt penetrates shell better) to each quart water. Put lobsters in (one at a time, tail first). Boil 20 minutes. Pull top and bottom shells apart, remove spongy, inedible portion near point end of shell, remove intestinal vein and take out meat from body and claws.

Give your shrimp less time (only 10 minutes) in boiling salted water (2 teaspoons salt to each quart water) and drain them as soon as they are cooked. Then peel off the thin shell and pick out (with a pointed paring knife) the dark cord that runs through the center of the shrimp on the outside.

Fried Soft-Shell Crab.

First pull off the little tail or apron at the back under the shell and remove all the spongy portion under the top of the shell. Then wash the crabs, plunge them into lightly salted, boiling water and boil 20 minutes. Next, drain and dry them thoroughly. Sprinkle each crab with salt and pepper. Then dip them in fine, stale bread crumbs, then in egg, beaten up with 1 tablespoon water, and again in crumbs. Then fry them in deep fat hot enough to brown an inch cube of bread in 60 seconds, turning several times till a nice brown. Turn on unglazed paper and serve with tartar sauce.

Lobster Thermidor.

Take 2 boiled lobsters, about 2½ pounds each, for four servings. Remove claws and split each lobster straight through the shell lengthwise. Remove all meat, cutting it into medium-size pieces. Then make a sauce as follows: Melt 2 tablespoons butter and blend in 1 tablespoon flour mixed with ½ teaspoon dry English mustard, ¼ teaspoon grated onion, ¼ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, few grains cayenne pepper. Then turn in 2-3 cup cream and stir until slightly thickened. Next add the lobster to sauce and turn the mixture into the four pieces of shell, placed in a baking pan. Last, sprinkle the lobster mixture with 2 tablespoons grated cheese and bake about 10 minutes at 350 F.

Crab Roll.

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup butter
1 egg

FILLING.

1¾ cups flaked crab
¼ cup milk
2 teaspoons chopped onion
1½ tablespoons chopped parsley
¼ cup chopped sweet pickle
½ teaspoon salt

Fresh sea food is in good season and reasonably priced. When serving crab, if you do not have crab shells for deviled crabs and you like the stuffing, make a crab roll by rolling the meat mixture in a dough crust.

SAUCE.

½ pound American cheese
½ cup milk

Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in the butter. Beat the egg, add the milk, then mix this lightly into the flour mixture. Roll out to a rectangular shape about ¼ inch thick.

Lightly mix the finely flaked crab with the milk, chopped onion, parsley, pickles and salt. Spread it all over the dough, then roll up like a jelly roll. Bake on a buttered sheet in a moderately hot oven, 425 F., for 40 minutes, or until well baked and lightly browned. Slice and serve with cheese sauce.

Cheese Sauce.

Slowly melt the American cheese in the top of a double boiler. Add the milk gradually, stirring constantly until the sauce is smooth.

Deviled Crab.

Make a sauce as follows: Melt 2 tablespoons butter and blend in 2 tablespoons flour (mixed with ¼ teaspoon dry English mustard). Next, slowly stir in 1 cup chicken stock or milk and cook till thickened. Then add ½ teaspoon grated onion, ¼ teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne pepper, ½ cup minced mushrooms (omit these if you like) and 1½ cups crab meat (flaked). Cook gently several minutes. Then add 1 teaspoon minced parsley and put the mixture into crab shells or flat individual baking dishes. Top with ½ cup fine, stale bread crumbs (first mixed with 2 tablespoons melted butter). Put shells on baking pan and bake at 375 F. until brown.

'Cuban Cooler' Augments Summer Porch Suppers

Cuban cooler is the euphonious name of a new drink. For your next porch supper make it this way: Blend eight cups canned pineapple juice and two cups canned Florida grapefruit juice with one cup raspberry syrup. Chill thoroughly. To serve, pour over block of ice in punch bowl or large pitcher. Add ginger ale, and garnish with thin slices of orange and a few maraschino cherries. Serves 25.

Damp Towel Stops Dust During Beating Process

To prevent dust from settling on nearby furniture while beating upholstered furniture or mattresses, dampen an old bath towel, wring it dry and spread it over the part of the surface you wish to beat. Then beat right over the towel; the dust will be removed yet will not settle on other furniture.

COOKING HINTS

Fruit and berry pies with lattice-style tops require less baking time than the regular two-crust pies.

filling for green peppers or tomatoes. The latter need to be cooked only 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

To remove tarnish from silver which has been stored for a long time, soak it for two hours in water left from cooking potatoes. (This removes much of the tarnish.) The articles may then be rubbed with a soft brush and silver polish.

Substitute mineral oil for other oils called for in mayonnaise or French dressings to be served to persons following diets. Mineral oil is tasteless. It has an advantage over other oils that it is not absorbed by the system.

One tablespoonful of lemon juice added to each two cups of berries (fresh or canned) greatly improves their flavor. Vinegar may be used in place of the lemon juice in making blueberry pies or puddings.

The cocktail hour calls for cheeses with a tang, while those that have a milder flavor may be served during the tea hour.

Ice Cream Wins Favor of Chinese

Shanghai, China, (AP).—"Barbarian food." That's what ice cream was here only 10 years ago. Now, the Chinese have a word for it.

Most of China has hot summers and part of the country is semi-tropical, but the Chinese always have served tea hot no matter what the temperature, and Chinese chow is served steaming.

When Americans began to sell ice cream, the Chinese were afraid to taste it. Then a few students, returning from American schools brought back freezers and to the surprise of their families ate the frozen stuff and lived. Gradually the conservative members of their families were won over although most of them melted ice cream before eating it. Now ice cream is sold all over the country.

They say I'm twice as attractive since I lost 15 lbs.

It's a crime to be fat when the WATE-OFF WAY makes it possible to take off 10 to 15 lbs. or more—safely-easily

Only the fat woman knows how distressing overweight can be. Only she can fully realize how many of life's most pleasurable activities are lost to her—the problems that confront her—the sacrifices she makes—the handicaps she constantly suffers—

- These bulging curves and embarrassing lumps and layers of fat—
- The double or triple chin and fat back and shoulders which make any woman look "fat and forty", even though she is in her early 20's or 30's—
- The heavy upper arms—the "spare tire" effect around the waist—the excess layers of fat on hips and thighs which make her appear ungainly and awkward—
- The excessive perspiration that is a constant source of embarrassment to self and distress to others—
- The difficulty of wearing attractive clothes which are designed only for the slender, stylish figure—
- The inability to participate in many delightful outdoor activities because the overweight woman dare not appear in a bathing suit or other informal sports apparel—
- The self-consciousness at parties and other affairs because the overweight woman is so keenly conscious of the fact that she is conspicuous.

All these problems, embarrassments and sacrifices are part of the daily life of every excessively overweight woman—to say nothing of the harmful effects to health of such overweight—the strain on the heart and other vital organs, etc.

If YOU are overweight and handicapped in any of the ways here discussed, there's no reason why you should continue to tolerate the condition. For, it is now possible to take off unhealthy, surplus fat in a safe, simple, easy way that is guaranteed absolutely free from any possibility of harm to your health.

Such a way is offered you in the new, improved WATE-OFF WAY. You may know about WATE-OFF. You may have seen it advertised in times past in such fine publications as Pictorial Review, Physical Culture Magazine, Modern Living and others, at $2.45, at which price it was purchased by thousands of eager, overweight women and men the country over. Now, in its new improved form, WATE-OFF costs you only $1.19—less than half its former price—and, in addition, with your first purchase of WATE-OFF Tablets you receive a membership in the WATE-OFF Weight Reducing Club with all the benefits such membership offers, starting with a free copy of the big copyrighted WATE-OFF Book offering you perfect guidance in the matter of eating, a special individualized program for your reducing that is suited to your requirements, according to your present weight, your activities and the amount of weight you desire to lose. After that you are entitled to receive all bulletins on weight-reducing which we may put out from time to time, and you are privileged to ask any questions having to do with reducing.

If you are tired of the handicaps imposed on you by excessive weight—if you are fed up with the unkind comments of relatives and friends—if you are distressed by the burdens placed on you by your own protesting overweight body—if you realize the disadvantages and handicaps from which you suffer and the danger to health and life that confronts every person who is excessively overweight—you will lose no time in getting yourself started on the WATE-OFF WAY to safe, scientific reducing. You will go to your druggist today—this very hour if possible—purchase your first box of the WATE-OFF Tablets—enroll yourself in the WATE-OFF Weight Reducing Club—get your big free book of information and guidance for weight reducing—and be everlastingly glad that we brought the WATE-OFF WAY to your attention.

Soviet Aviators Rescue Society From Doldrums

Transpolar Airmen Who Set Long Distance Record Arrive Tomorrow for Embassy Fetes.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Intrepid Soviet fliers, whose exploits have set the world agog this summer, can also be credited with keeping Capital social events from falling into their traditional seasonal slump.

Last month, when it began to look as though the doldrums of the dog days had set in ahead of time, the first three transpolar fliers arrived in the city and were feted at one of the biggest affairs given this year. And now the Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet Embassy and Mme. Oumansky are planning to entertain at a reception at the embassy Tuesday evening in honor of Michael M. Gromov, Andrei B. Yumashev and Sergei Danilin, who recently established a new world's record for a long distance nonstop flight.

At the reception the fliers will tell for the first time the story of their 62-hour transpolar dash from Moscow to San Jacinto, Calif.

The three heroes of the air will arrive in Washington from the Pacific Coast at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning by plane and will be guests at the embassy here for several days. Monday and Tuesday they will make official calls and do a bit of sightseeing. Mr. Oumansky, who flew to the coast to welcome them and invite them to the embassy, returned to the Capital early this week.

Mexican Ambassador's Family Off to Canada

WHILE THE MEXICAN AMBASSADOR is on a business trip to Mexico City, members of his family won't be sitting home, hands folded, awaiting his return. Either today or early tomorrow two slim, sleek automobiles will roll away from the embassy on Sixteenth street bearing eight persons bound for a brief vacation trip to points north.

Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Ambassador, accompanied by her daughter, Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, and her three sons—Pancho, Luis and Memo—will make her first visit to Niagara Falls and Canada. Other members of the party will be Senora de Fuentes, wife of the first secretary of the embassy, her son, Carlitos, and Senora de Castilla Najera's niece, Senorita Lupe Davila.

One automobile will be driven by a chauffeur, and the other will have young Pancho Castillo Najera at the wheel. Proceeding at a lively clip to Niagara Falls, the party will go on to Toronto and Quebec for short sojourns in each city. According to present plans, the entourage will return to the Capital.

Messersmiths Coming to Capital Today

ARRIVING IN NEW YORK YESTERDAY, the newly appointed Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George S. Messersmith are scheduled to come to the Capital today. The 53-year-old Pennsylvanian, who started out to be an educator and drifted into the foreign service by way of a consular post at Fort Erie, Canada, has an extensive circle of friends here. If the Capital must give up the Wilbur Carrs, the Messersmiths seem to be the best selection possible.

Mrs. Messersmith, the former Marion Lee Mustard, of Lewes, Del., has visited here frequently with her husband when he was on leave of absence from his numerous foreign posts. Mr. Messersmith, who has served as the United States Ambassador to Austria since 1934, has long been considered one of the ablest officers of the American foreign service.

His predecessor, Wilbur L. Carr, the newly appointed United States Minister to Czechoslovakia, was guest of honor at a luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower with the Minister of Czechoslovakia, Vladimir Hurban as host. Guests included Julius C. Holmes, John D. Hickerson, Davis Williams and Jay Pierrepont Moffat, all of the State Department, and Dr. Josef Nemecek and Otakar Kabelac, of the legation staff.

Washington Has Proverbial Hollywood Premier

SPEAKING OF DIPLOMATS, they turned out en masse, along with a crowd of Senators, Cabinet members and Army and Naval officials at last night's opening performance of "The Road Back" at Keith's Theater.

With floodlights turned full force on official and social notables, a 25-piece band, dressed in Marine uniforms played for an hour before the performance started. Eight Marines in full-dress uniforms stood in the foyer and outside to escort the celebrities from their automobiles to the microphone, where greetings were broadcast to the radio audience. A profusion of flowers in the lobby . . . a police guard to prevent traffic snarls . . . as brilliant an assemblage as can ever be mustered in Washington in midsummer—all these stacked up into a premier that would do credit to Hollywood.

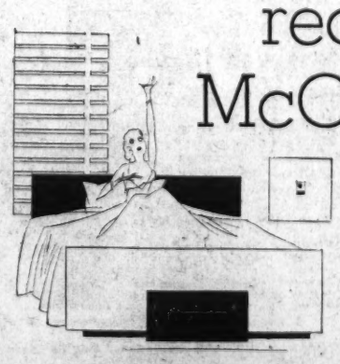
"I've found the real McCoy--



"Some furniture is funny. You know what I mean. Something pseudo about it. You suspect the designer was trying to duplicate from a poor memory something originally good. But Mazor Masterpieces are the Real McCoy. Furniture that is brilliant in its own right, original in conception, superb in craftsmanship. 'Mazor Masterpiece' on the tag is like 'sterling' on silver. Senate Postmistress Is Nominated for President Of Professional Women's National Federation

Declares Small Town Clubs Backbone of Movement.

Miss White Candidate to Succeed Miss Charl Williams.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Business and Professional Women's clubs in small towns are the backbone of the national federation, in the opinion of Miss Earlene White, postmaster of the United States Senate, who was nominated without opposition by the club federation yesterday to succeed Miss Charl Ormond Williams, also of Washington, as national president. Delegates to the federation's biennial convention in Atlantic City, N. J., will elect officers today.

Miss White was present at the organization meeting of the national federation in St. Louis, Mo., in 1919, and has been responsible for starting many of the local clubs in Mississippi and Arkansas, States in which she lived before coming to Washington. She has been closely in touch with the federation's progress throughout the country, having served for six years as recording secretary and for the past two as first vice president. Previous to that she was president of the Mississippi State Federation. It was by the present head of the Mississippi clubs, Mrs. Lucia McRaven Thompson, that her name was presented to the nominating committee at this convention.

Our Town's Business Federation Theme

The city clubs are larger, but these in the small towns touch the life of the community so closely as to be a power in its affairs, Miss White believes. "Our Town's Business" is to be the theme of the federation program for the coming year.

"Business and professional women should know their communities," says Miss White. "They should appreciate what has been done and is being done which is right; admit what is wrong and be willing to take measures to correct it. The club membership in the average small town includes possibly the secretary to the bank president; the clerk in the mayor's office, the women from the principal business houses, the newspapers, the schools and other public institutions, and it is obvious that they hold the key to what is going on in that community.

Clubs Placed In Strong Position

"With accurate information as to economic, health and political conditions in their own cities, the member clubs give a broad view and strong position to the national federation. The federation in turn, through a survey of the progress over the entire country, offers to the individual club an interpretation of the whole picture and lends lends its strength and influence in meeting problems which arise locally but are of a nature which concern businesswomen in general.

"The membership of the federation, 65,000, covers every State in the Union, the District of Columbia, Hawaii and Alaska. We point with pride to our cities, but a minority of our clubs is there. It is in the small towns we have the bulk of our membership. In the little places, where everyone knows everybody else, the opinion of the business woman is sought and her influence is felt. The privilege of interpreting the national federation program to the country lies within the province of the small-town club."

Other Candidates Are Nominated

The nominating committee composed of members from each State, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Patricia Solander, of Osawatomie, Kans., former Kansas State Senator, presented Miss White's name to the convention.

Two candidates nominated for first vice presidents were Mrs. Rosa Cunningham, Des Moines, Iowa, and Miss Kathryn Starbuck, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.; for second vice president, Miss Amy Lewellen, Pullman, Wash., and Dr. Minnie L. Maffett, Dallas, Tex.; third vice president, Mrs. Myra Blakeslee, East Orange, N. J., and Mrs. Carolyn Weber, Los Angeles; recording secretary, Miss Celia Howard, Chicago, and Mrs. Verna DeOrmand, Tulsa, Okla., and treasurer, Miss Isabel Claridge, Wheeling, W. Va.

Next year a data committee will obtain advance information on the candidates and will lay their qualifications before the nominating committee, which includes in its members, Miss Elizabeth Haney, of Washington, and Dr. Grace H. Beardsley, of Goucher College, Baltimore.

To Renew Fight For Child Labor Bill

The national federation voted to renew its fight for the child-labor amendment, adherence of the United States to the World Court, and jury service for women.

A telegram was sent to United States Senator K. D. McKellar, of Tennessee, asking him to bring about "expeditious passage" of a repealer of the law which prohibits both man and wife being employed by the Federal Government. The House of Representatives has already passed a repeal measure.

The women resolved to seek laws permitting the State Department to "lessen the tension between nations" by negotiating trade treaties with other countries and to break down the barriers in all courts which do not now permit women to serve on juries.

Campaigns for ratification of the proposed child-labor amendment to the Federal Constitution will be conducted in all States that have voted negatively.

Miss Beatrice McConnell, Children's Bureau Division Head, Will Discuss Labor Conference at Luncheon Here Tomorrow

Miss Beatrice McConnell, director of the industrial division of the Children's Bureau, arrives in the Capital today on her return from Geneva, where she had been an adviser to the United States Government at the twenty-third session of the International Labor Conference, held by the International Labor Organization. Tomorrow she will be guest of honor and speaker at a luncheon given at the University Women's Clubhouse by a group of her friends and others interested in the subjects which came before the conference.

Miss McConnell will discuss the revision of the conventions passed at the first International Labor Conference here in 1919, in which 14 years was set as the minimum age for child labor Under the revisions it has been raised to 15 years.

Other matters before the conference which she will discuss will be advance planning and coordination of public works programs by different countries; the draft convention, providing for a maximum 40-hour week in the textile industry, which is the result of the work of the Technical Textile Conference here in April, and the convention regarding the prevention of accidents in the building industry.

Miss McConnell will be introduced by Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau. The luncheon, which will be at 1:15 and will be attended by about 35 professional women and members of the League of Women Voters and the American Association of University Women, is being arranged by Miss Dorothy Sells, of the International Labor Organization, a former member of the Bryn Mawr faculty and author of several books on labor subjects.

Miss McConnell, before coming to Washington, was for ten years director of the bureau of women and children of the Pennsylvania State Department of Labor and Industry. She also is legislative chairman for the Pennsylvania and Delaware division of the A. A. U. W.

Betty Rudd Joins 'Y. W.' In New York

Chevy Chase Girl Began Service Here in 1932.

MISS BETTY RUDD, who since 1932 has been secretary in the administration office of the Y. W. C. A., leaves September 1 to take the directorship of the business and industrial department of the White Plains (N. Y.) Association.

In preparation for her new post she will attend the Eastern Region Business Girls' Conference at Wells College, Aurora, N. Y., opening tomorrow and continuing through July 31. Three members of the local Blue Triangle Club of young business women—Miss Della Furzer, Miss Alberta Mahone and the president, Miss Sara Motley, also will attend the conference, accompanied by Miss Mary Ann Putnam, of the business and professional women's staff of the Y. W. C. A.

Following the conference Miss Rudd will visit friends in Buffalo, returning home by way of Boston, and taking the boat to Baltimore The other delegates plan a trip through the Thousand Islands, Montreal, Quebec and St. Anne de Beaupre, returning through the New England States.

Miss Rudd will work at White Plains with Miss Mary Gwynn, who is executive director of the association there. Miss Gwynn from 1931 to 1936 was program director of Kamp Kahlert, summer camp maintained by the Washing- "Y. W.," and has many friends in the Capital. Previous to directing the vacation program here she had been in Belgium, and this summer she is conducting her own camp for both boys and girls at Brevard, N. C.

Miss Rudd is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross J. Rudd, of Chevy Chase, and is graduate of George Washington University and the Temple School of Business here, having carried on her activity at the Y. W. C. A. while she finished her college training. She has done publicity, statistical and clerical work in the administration office and has served as secretary to Miss Hettie P. Anderson, executive of the association. When she leaves, her duties will be taken over by Miss Catherine Jones and Miss Louise Danforth.

In White Plains she will be entering another department of the work, planning the program for girls employed in homes, for laundry workers and nationality groups. There will also be a club for girls employed in the 5 and 10 cent stores, of which she will have charge.

It will not be the first time Miss Rudd has been a resident of New York State. She was born in Vermont, attended the grade schools in New York City, went through high school in Columbus, Ohio, spent the summer of 1930 with her mother in Europe, and since then has been pursuing her studies and her work in Washington.

Meetings Planned To Develop Clubs' Art Activities

Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison, chairman of fine arts for the General Federation of Women's Clubs and also for the D. C. Federation, has under way plans for joint meetings of the art department of the clubs in the federation this season through which their art programs may be expanded. The sessions probably will be held at the Roosevelt Hotel, where the federation regularly meets.

The penny art fund, the federation's project for encouraging recognition of the work of Washington artists, was started seven years ago when Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, now district president, was fine arts chairman. "Winter in Rock Creek Park," a handsome oil by Mrs. Miles C. Trowbridge, a member of the Entre Nous Club, was this years' prize picture. It was awarded to the Political Study Club.

Last year a picture by Miss Clara Saunders, local artist and a member of the Women's City Club, was awarded to the W. C. T. U., winning organization in the federation. The fund is raised by contributions of a penny by each member of every club and that having the largest sum is given the picture.

Mrs. Trowbridge last season won first prize at the Maryland State exhibition.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

MRS EDGAR B. MERITT, new president of the Political Study Club and national chairman of radio for the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is sandwiching pieces of her vacation in between club plans and radio broadcasts.

She returned the first of the week from Herring Bay, where she spent a few days, remaining with friends after attending the party given by Mrs. H. L. Breuninger at her summer home there for the Sunshine and Community Society. Wednesday she spoke on the consumers program over the radio at 1:30 and last night represented Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation, who is now in British Columbia, in a broadcast from the new studios in the Trans-Lux Building.—No, she didn't talk about clubs at all, as you know in case you listened in—but about watermelons, discussing the subject with Morse Salisbury, chief of the radio service of the Department of Agriculture.

Today she expects to leave for Ocean City, Md., for a short stay and will then return to the Capital to complete plans both for the radio and Study Club season. The first part of July, she was at her cottage at Round Hill, in the Blue Ridge Mountains, where she finds refuge even from the telephone, whenever she wants rest and quiet.

Mrs. Meritt is one of the most prominent and active club women in the District. Several years ago, in 1930, she accomplished the surprising feat of managing two important posts (one of which is considered a two-person job by most people). She was grand matron of the Order of the Eastern Star and president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs both in the same year.

THERE ARE TEARS in the eyes of the girls returning from their two weeks at The Cedars—regret at having to leave—according to Mrs. Joseph N. Saunders, chairman of the junior American citizens committee of the D. C. Daughters of the American Revolution. It is through the efforts of Mrs. Saunders and the co-operation of the D. A. R. chapters in the District that 43 girls and 23 boys have had wonderful outings this summer—two weeks of healthy, happy life in camp.

The girls, 37 of them, were at The Cedars, returning Monday of this week, when five more went for their two weeks' stay. One girl will be sent to Kamp Kahlert next week. The boys were at Camp Reeder. Of course, they didn't cry when they started home—boys don't—but there were plenty of them who looked back wistfully as they drove away and said: "Aw, gee, I wish I could stay all summer."

Mrs. Saunders and some of the State officers went down to see the girls last Saturday. They drove down in time for lunch and stayed part of the afternoon. In the party were Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State president of the D. C. D. A. R.; Mrs. Katherine Strong, recording secretary; Mrs. Earl Fuller, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Temple Hill, chaplain; Mrs. Samuel B. Woodbridge, librarian; Mrs. Elmer E. Curry, registrar; Miss Elizabeth Barnes, former chairman of the Junior American Citizens Committee for the District and now national vice chairman of the same work; and members of the D. C. committee including Mrs. Henri I. Mackie, Mrs. Arthur A. Birnie and Miss Mary Lee Goddard. Mr. Fuller also was in the party, driving one of the cars.

Field workers feed shocks of golden grain into a separator in a Midwestern area which is enjoying a banner year following a devastating drought last year. Barren acres (left) were 1936's disheartening prospects when a burning sun killed crops and winds swept the soil. The wheat crop is estimated at $1,000,000,000, the best in years. The entire U. NATS' FAILURE TO WIN MAY COST HARRIS HIS JOB

* X WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, JULY 23, 1937 19

This Morning

Meet Nanjo Singh! He Wrestles.

By Shirley Povich.

St. Louis, July 22.—Nanjo Singh—don't tell me you never heard of Nanjo!—is in America on a mission. He will bring back to the proud Sikhs in the jungle province of Punjab, on the other side of the world, an American wrestling title or he will return to India in shame.

POVICH.

He was the best wrestler in the stable of the Maharajah of Indore, Nanjo says, and the Rajah sent him to America to win the championship. "The skill and glory of India's wrestlers must never be questioned," were the Rajah's parting words.

And so Nanjo is in St. Louis trying to catch up with Everett Marshall, who owns one of the numerous American titles. He had one shot at Marshall, a month ago, and lost. That was in Kansas City, where the referee said Nanjo was too rough and disqualified him.

* * * *

They've promised him another chance and Nanjo says he will beat Marshall. "I am what you say too strong for him," says Nanjo. "This time I will crush him. And then I will go back to the Maharajah with my clippings and my championship and I will be a great man in Punjab."

* * * *

There will be a parade for Nanjo when and if he returns to Punjab with the championship. He says he will send the Rajah a cable and great preparations will be made for his coming. He will ride one of the Rajah's elephants—a white one—and there will be great feasts and the Rajah, who will be proud of Nanjo, will give him much money and much land and many servants. The Rajah is generous.

* * * *

"My father wrestled for the Rajah," says Nanjo, "and my grandfather wrestled for the Rajah's father. My son will wrestle for the Rajah's son and the Rajah's son will be proud of the new Nanjo. He will be proud like the Rajah is proud of Gama."

And who might Gama be?

* * * *

"Gama? You do not know Gama? You do not know that he was the greatest of all India's wrestlers? That the Rajah always bet much money on Gama. Poof! He bet fifty thousand dollars, a hundred thousand sometimes, and Gama always wins. Other Rajahs have plenty of money, too, and they bet on their wrestlers to beat Gama and Gama always wins."

* * * *

Then Gama must have been the chap who beat Zbyszko that time in India when, lured by the tales of the greatness of India's wrestlers, the then champion of the world accepted the Maharajah's invitation to wrestle the Punjab champion.

* * * *

"It was like nothing for Gama to beat Zbyszko. One minute they wrestled, that's all—one minute. Gama grabbed Zbyszko and, with his foot, he tripped him up. Then he jumped down on him and it was finished. Zbyszko was not strong enough for Gama. Gama was the champion."

* * * *

In America, Nanjo says, they do not wrestle nicely. "They punch and they use too many tricks. In India we do not have those ropes. We wrestle on the ground. And the people there, they behave. They do not punch the wrestlers when the wrestlers are not looking. But here, I learn some good tricks, too. I will be a champion like Gama, perhaps".

* * * *

Twelve wrestlers were with Nanjo in the Maharajah of Indore's stable. For the Rajah's wrestlers there were servants, plenty of servants, and quarters in the palace. They could ride the Rajah's elephants and spear the Rajah's game. They wrestled only for the Rajah when one of the Rajah's brother Rajahs of an adjoining province got the silly idea that his wrestlers could beat the Rajah's wrestlers.

* * * *

"Then we had a big tournament, a grand tournament. And the Rajah would bet much money and Nanjo would always win for the Rajah. And there would be feasts then, and hunting and much joy, and the Rajah would give us much money.

* * * *

"But we do not wrestle in Punjab like they wrestle in America—every night. Sometimes, usually, we wrestle once a month. When the Rajah goes away, to England or to France, for two, three months, then we do not wrestle at all. But we practice and the Rajah lets us ride and hunt and live in the palace. That is life!"

West Leads Attack With Three Hits

DiMaggio Goes Hitless; Gehrig Connects for 16th Home Run.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 22.—A couple of "murderers' rows" went to work on each other today, and the Browns surprised by outclubbing the New York Yankees for a 13-to-4 victory, ending the Yanks' six-game winning streak.

A total of 28 hits of assorted shapes and sizes were clouted all over the lot, the Browns getting 15 and the Yanks 13. The Yankees wasted a lot of theirs, particularly when both Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig, the Nos. 1 and 2 executioners, failed with the bags loaded on different occasions.

While DiMaggio went hitless for the day, ending his consecutive-game hitting streak after 22 straight contests, Gehrig made up somewhat for his lapse by connecting for his sixteenth homer of the year, one of four circuit clouts smashed out during the proceedings. Rookie Tom Henrich, of the Yanks, and Sam West and Rollie Hemsley hit the others.

West, Hemsley and Henrich were the big guns. West clouted a double and a single as well as his homer. Hemsley had two singles and Henrich piled up a total of four hits.

The Yankees' "off-day" pitcher, Bump Hadley, started, but went out in the second after being tagged for four runs in the first. Frank Makasky, his successor, was mauled for six runs in that frame, and Johnny Murphy gave up four more in the third, which ended the ball game, so far as the ultimate result was concerned.

Jack Knott staggered through eight innings for the Browns, and was replaced in the ninth by Julio Bonetti. Sunny Jim Bottomley, the Browns' new manager, was taking no chances with the Yankees, and despite a 12-run lead, yanked Knott for a pinch hitter in the eighth.

Bees Shut Out Cardinals, 2-0; Sweep Series

Boston, July 22 (AP).—The Boston Bees pulled to within three games of a first division berth today when Deacon Danny MacFayden pitched them to a 2-to-0 victory that swept the four games series with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"It was the Boston veteran's second shutout in as many starts and the ninth the Bees have gained at home this season. He held the distracted Frankie Frisch's sluggers 6 hits while his mates were pounding Si Johnson, who worked each of the four games the Cards won in their last 11 road starts, for 10 safeties.

Ailing Wilmer

Allison Wins In Brookline Net Tourney

Goes to Semifinals; Hunt Reaches Semifinals! to Meet Harmon.

Brookline, Mass., July 22 (AP).—The twisted ligaments in Wilmer Allison's aging right tennis arm appeared only a slight handicap today when he cut loose with much of his old-time fire and gained a semi-finals bracket in the Longwood Bowl tournament by blasting out young Vernon Marcum, of St. Petersburg, Fla., 6—1, 6—3.

Allison, who is striving to retire the historic Brookline Cup by gaming the required third victory, displayed such improvement over his previous performances here that most of the galleryites were convinced he would realize his ambition. The veteran Texan will oppose Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, who had great difficulty eliminating Alfred Jarvis, of Tenafly, N. J., 7—5, 1—6, 6—3, in the upper half semi-final tomorrow.

Harmon Victor.

Bobby Harmon, of Oakland, Calif., seeded second to Allison, dropped only one second-set game while sweeping through Paul Guibord, of Melrose. The Californian youngster will engage his doubles partner, Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, in the other second last rounder.

Hunt, who has been beaten by Harman in their two previous singles engagements, was pressed to the limit before Norbert Burgess of Chicago, surrendered to him by a 5—7, 6—4, 9—7 margin. Burgess had him at match point in the thirteenth game of the final set, but Hunt rallied by storming the net and putting down a barrage of angle shots that kept his rival flat-footed as he pulled up to 7-all and then reeled off the next two games.

Mrs. Sarah Palrey Fabyan, the Brookline internationalist, aided Mrs. Virginia Rise Johnson, of Boston, in the difficult task of eliminating the last of the Californian threats as he led the way into the women's division semifinals.

Highly Geared.

Mrs. Fabyan's game was highly geared when she overcame Mrs. Bonnie Miller Blank, of Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—4, but Mrs. Johnson caused the most startling upset of the day when she eliminated the second seeded Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., 4—5, 6—4, 6—2. The Boston player had difficulty handling Miss Wheeler's more forceful strokes during the first set, but as the match wore on her greater speed of foot enabled her to get into volleying position to snuff out rallies.

In the other women's semifinals, Mrs. John Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., lasted just long enough to nip Norma Taubele, New York's red-haired southpaw champion, —6, 6—3, 7—5, and Helen Pederson, of Stamford, Conn., gained the last semifinals berth by overwhelming Hope Knowles, Philadelphia, 6—2, 6—2.

Mrs. Fabyan, who has seldom played her best tennis at this stage of the season, will oppose Mrs. Van Ryn in one of tomorrow's semifinals. and Mrs. Johnson will match strokes with the Connecticut girl.

Lucas Bats, Hurls Bucs To Victory

Veteran Hurler Holds Foe to 4 Hits, Knocks In Three Runs.

Brooklyn, July 22 (AP).—Red Lucas baffled the Dodgers with four hits today and pitched the Pittsburgh Pirates to an easy 10-to-1 victory over the Brooklyns for their only win of the series.

He also played a major part in the Bucs' 14-hit attack, driving in three runs with a pair of singles.

A homer by Jimmy Bucher in the fourth was the blow that prevented Lucas from a shutout, as he fanned two and did not walk a man in winning his sixth victory of the season.

Al Todd connected for a homer and a single, driving in three runs, and Lloyd Waner hit three singles in the attack the Pirates fired on Roy Henshaw, Waite Hoyt and Max Butcher. Henshaw, belted out as the Bucs scored four runs in the sixth, was charged with the setback.

Steve (Crusher) Casey, latest importation and title claimant from Ireland, pinned Cliff Olsen with a drop-kick in 24¾ minutes of the feature wrestling bout last night at Griffith Stadium and earned a chance to meet Bronko Nagurski, another champion, in a bout here in the near future. Casey was the aggressor throughout and administered Olsen a terrific beating before the finish.

Rumor Has Ruel As Browns' Pilot

Chicago, July 22 (AP).—Harold (Muddy) Ruel, Chicago White Sox coach and a veteran of 23 years in American League baseball, was reported today to be under consideration as manager of the St. Louis Browns.

Ruel, native and resident of St. Louis, declined to say whether he had been sounded out by the Brownie management to take over the job from which Rogers Hornsby was discharged yesterday, but said he "might be interested in a manager's position." Jim Bottomley, veteran first baseman and coach of the Browns, has been moved into Hornsby's place, at least for the balance of the season.

$10,000 Up As Chicago Open Begins

Ryder Cup Stars Lead Pro Delegation; Haas Paces Amateurs.

Babe Didrikson, the "Masked Marvel" and 440 others, a large number of whom will come closer to winning the $3,000 grand prize than either the Babe or the mysterious one, will start combing two Medinah Country Club courses for shares of the season's biggest medal play purse.

Officials of the Chicago District Gold Association, the tournament sponsor, hope the huge field will be able to complete the scheduled opening 18 holes before nightfall, but won't bet on it.

The professional attacking force includes almost every standout in competition, with Harry Cooper, who never has failed to lead the pack home in official competition at Medinah, the favorite.

The ranking contenders will be the same old group of pro raiders who follow the money trail—National Open Champion Ralph Guldahl, Horton Smith, Henry Picard, Johnny Revolta, Sam Snead and Gene Sarazen. Ryder Cuppers; Tommy Armour, the home pro, Hard Luck Dick Metz, the Mangrum Boys, Ray and Lloyd, and Frank Walsh, among others.

Among the amateurs who will compete for a cup and four merchandise prizes, Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans, national intercollegiate champion and holder of the Canadian and Southern amateur titles; Paul Leslie, Western amateur champion and runnerup to his Louisiana State teammate, Haas, in the intercollegiate, and Melvin (Chick) Harbert, of Battle Creek, Mich., rank as the standouts.

Harbert, who passed up the Michigan Amatur tournament to try his luck in major competition, won the Michigan Open two weeks ago with an amazing total of 268 strokes, 20 under par, over the Arbor Hills course at Jackson.

The prize money shares will be worth at least railroad fare to anyone finishing in the first 30. The second slice will be $1,00, with the rest divided as follows: Third, $800; fourth, $600; fifth, $500; sixth, $450; seventh, $400; eighth, $350; ninth, $300; tenth, $250; eleventh, $200; twelfth, $150; three at $125; five each at $100, $75 and $50.

Friday's and Saturday's 18-hole rounds will reduce the treasure-seeking group to the 50 low-scoring professionals and ties, and the 25 low amateurs and ties for Sunday's 36-hole finishing test.

3d Cavalry Wins In Polo Tourney

Baltimore, July 22.—The Third Cavalry of Fort Myer, Va., last year's champion, scored its first victory of the Southeastern tournament by defeating the Quantico Marines this afternoon at the Maryland Polo Club by a score of 9 to 8.

The largest week-day crowd in the history of the local club saw the teams clash in a well-played match. The Marines enjoyed a two-goal handicap and kept on the heels of the Cavalrymen throughout the six chukkers.

Four times during the hectic struggle the score was tied. The winner had a better balanced team, but encountered considerable difficulty in trying to stop Maj. C. A. Wilkinson, five-goal man of the Marines. Maj. Wilkinson scored four of his team's goals.

9th-Inning Homer Wins For Giants

Wally Berger Clouts Telling Blow; One Game Back.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 22.—Wally Berger, that "clutch man," came through again today when the chips were down. He hit a homer with one out in the ninth inning to break up a ball game and give the Giants a 6-to-5 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

His round-trip shot, twelfth of the season, wound up the proceedings that were sent into a deadlock when Ival Goodman belted a four-bagger with a mate on base in the seventh to tie the count.

Since the league-leading Chicago Cubs were defeated, the victory boosted the Giants to within a game of the pace.

Each team used three pitchers, with Dick Coffman, who took over in the seventh, receiving credit for the victory, and Peaches Davis, who served up the high hard one to Berger, charged with the setback.

Burgess Whitehead, with three singles, and Goodman, with two singles as well as his homer, led the respective attacks.

Buddy Myer May Succeed As Manager

Washington Popularity One Factor in Bucky's Favor.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, July 22.—As the Nats reel through the West, defeat-groggy from their worst slump in recent years, the security of Bucky Harris' job as manager is a recurrent and lively topic of conversation.

Speculation concerning Harris' future with the Washington Club has been intensified during the past two days by the release of Rogers Hornsby as manager of the Browns. The open season on managers is believed to be at hand.

Harris, who is operating under a contract that ends this season, is, of course, on the spot. The Nats' recently ended ten1game losing streak and their utter failure to become a factor in the pennant race at any time this season naturally threaten his job.

Griffith Silent.

Clark Griffith, back in Washington, has given no hint of his position in the matter, but it is known that Griffith regarded his 1937 team with high hopes and expected it to be in the thick of the pennant fight.

But in Harris' favor of a renewal of his contract at the end of the season is the fact that Washington fans have not blamed him for the Nats' slump, preferring rather to agree that the Nats simply did not have a good ball team.

Only once this season has Harris been booed in Washington and on that occasion, he was the innocent victim of stupid base running by Buddy Myer. Harris' popularity in Washington may be the factor that will cause Griffith to renew his contract.

Anyway, Griffith has never fired a manager in midseason. His managerial decisions are always made at the end of the campaign, and until then, Harris' fate will not be known.

Has Harmony.

The decision, of course, lies with Griffith, but Harris has a powerful ally in the Washington players, who are thoroughly in support of him. No sign of discord, friction or discontent has ever been noted between manager and players ever since Harris resumed managing the club in 1935.

If Harris is to have a successor, then that man undoubtedly will come from the ranks of the players. It has been Griffith's habit to promote his athletes even as he first promoted Harris to the management in 1924 and promoted Joe Cronin to the job in 1933.

In some circles, Buddy Myer's name has been mentioned as Harris' successor, but Myer has never revealed any ambition to be a manager.

Their one-game winning streak still in tact as a result of an off day this afternoon, the Nats took a postman's holiday and hied themselves to Sportsman's Park, where they watched the Yankees and the Browns.

Harris' team faces five games with the Browns in three days, starting tomorrow. Monte Weaver will get the opening game assignment and Harris will gamble on Saturday with Ken Chase and Ed Linke in a double-header. Jimmy DeShong and Wes Ferrell will pitch the twin bill Sunday, after which the Nats return home for a long stand at Griffith Stadium.

Meet Nanjo Singh! He Wrestles.

By Shirley Povich.

St. Louis, July 22.—Nanjo Singh—don't tell me you never heard of Nanjo!—is in America on a mission. He will bring back to the proud Sikhs in the jungle province of Punjab, on the other side of the world, an American wrestling title or he will return to India in shame.

POVICH.

He was the best wrestler in the stable of the Maharajah of Indore, Nanjo says, and the Rajah sent him to America to win the championship. "The skill and glory of India's wrestlers must never be questioned," were the Rajah's parting words.

And so Nanjo is in St. Louis trying to catch up with Everett Marshall, who owns one of the numerous American titles. He had one shot at Marshall, a month ago, and lost. That was in Kansas City, where the referee said Nanjo was too rough and disqualified him.

* * * *

They've promised him another chance and Nanjo says he will beat Marshall. "I am what you say too strong for him," says Nanjo. "This time I will crush him. And then I will go back to the Maharajah with my clippings and my championship and I will be a great man in Punjab."

* * * *

There will be a parade for Nanjo when and if he returns to Punjab with the championship. He says he will send the Rajah a cable and great preparations will be made for his coming. He will ride one of the Rajah's elephants—a white one—and there will be great feasts and the Rajah, who will be proud of Nanjo, will give him much money and much land and many servants. The Rajah is generous.

* * * *

"My father wrestled for the Rajah," says Nanjo, "and my grandfather wrestled for the Rajah's father. My son will wrestle for the Rajah's son and the Rajah's son will be proud of the new Nanjo. He will be proud like the Rajah is proud of Gama."

And who might Gama be?

* * * *

"Gama? You do not know Gama? You do not know that he was the greatest of all India's wrestlers? That the Rajah laways bet much money on Gama. Poof! He bet fifty thousand dollars, a hundred thousand sometimes, and Gama always wins. Other Rajahs have plenty of money, too, and they bet on their wrestlers to beat Gama and Gama always wins."

* * * *

Then Gama must have been the chap who beat Zbyszko that time in India when, lured by the tales of the greatness of India's wrestlers, the then champion of the world accepted the Maharajah's invitation to wrestle the Punjab champion.

* * * *

"It was like nothing for Gama to beat Zbyszko. One minute they wrestled, that's all—one minute. Gama grabbed Zbyszko and, with his foot, he tripped him up. Then he jumped down on him and it was finished. Zbyszko was not strong enough for Gama. Gama was the champion."

* * * *

In America, Nanjo says, they do not wrestle nicely. "They punch and they use too many tricks. In India we do not haye those ropes. We wrestle on the ground. And the people there, they behave. They do not punch the wrestlers when the wrestlers are not looking. But here, I learn some good tricks, too. I will be a champion like Gama, perhaps".

* * * *

Twelve wrestlers were with Nanjo in the Maharajah of Indore's stable. For the Rajah's wrestlers there were servants, plenty of servants, and quarters in the palace. They could ride the Rajah's elephants and spear the Rajah's game. They wrestled only for the Rajah when one of the Rajah's brother Rajahs of an adjoining province got the silly idea that his wrestlers could beat the Rajah's wrestlers.

* * * *

"Then we had a big tournament, a grand tournament. And the Rajah would bet much money and Nanjo would always win for the Rajah. And there would be feasts then, and hunting and much joy, and the Rajah would give us much money.

* * * *

"But we do not wrestle in Punjab like they wrestle in America—every night. Sometimes, usually, we wrestle once a month. When the Rajah goes away, to England or to France, for two, three months, then we do not wrestle at all. But we practice and the Rajah lets us ride and hunt and live in the palace. That is life!"

West Leads Attack With Three Hits

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 22.—A couple of "murderers' rows" went to work on each other today, and the Browns surprised by outclubbing the New York Yankees for a 13-to-4 victory, ending the Yanks' six-game winning streak.

A total of 28 hits of assorted shapes and sizes were clouted all over the lot, the Browns getting 15 and the Yanks 13. The Yankees wasted a lot of theirs, particularly when both Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig, the Nos. 1 and 2 executioners, failed with the bags loaded on different occasions.

While DiMaggio went hitless for the day, ending his consecutive-game hitting streak after 22 straight contests, Gehrig made up somewhat for his lapse by connecting for his sixteenth homer of the year, one of four circuit clouts smashed out during the proceedings. Rookie Tom Henrich, of the Yanks, and Sam West and Rollie Hemsley hit the others.

West, Hemsley and Henrich were the big guns. West clouted a double and a single as well as his homer. Hemsley had two singles and Henrich piled up a total of four hits.

The Yankees' "off-day" pitcher, Bump Hadley, started, but went out in the second after being tagged for four runs in the first. Frank Makasky, his successor, was mauled for six runs in that frame, and Johnny Murphy gave up four more in the third, which ended the ball game, so far as the ultimate result was concerned.

Jack Knott staggered through eight innings for the Browns, and was replaced in the ninth by Julio Bonetti. Sunny Jim Bottomley, the Browns' new manager, was taking no chances with the Yankees, and despite a 12-run lead, yanked Knott for a pinch hitter in the eighth.

Bees Shut Out Cardinals, 2-0; Sweep Series

Boston, July 22 (AP).—The Boston Bees pulled to within three games of a first division berth today when Deacon Danny MacFayden pitched them to a 2-to-0 victory that swept the four games series with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"It was the Boston veteran's second shutout in as many starts and the ninth the Bees have gained at home this season. He held the distracted Frankie Frisch's sluggers 6 hits while his mates were pounding Si Johnson, who worked each of the four games the Cards won in their last 11 road starts, for 10 safeties.

Ailing Wilmer

Allison Wins In Brookline Net Tourney

Goes to Semifinals; Hunt Reaches Semifinals! to Meet Harmon.

Brookline, Mass., July 22 (AP).—The twisted ligaments in Wilmer Allison's aging right tennis arm appeared only a slight handicap today when he cut loose with much of his old-time fire and gained a semi-finals bracket in the Longwood Bowl tournament by blasting out young Vernon Marcum, of St. Petersburg, Fla., 6—1, 6—3.

Allison, who is striving to retire the historic Brookline Cup by gaming the required third victory, displayed such improvement over his previous performances here that most of the galleryites were convinced he would realize his ambition. The veteran Texan will oppose Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, who had great difficulty eliminating Alfred Jarvis, of Tenafly, N. J., 7—5, 1—6, 6—8, in the upper half semi-final tomorrow.

Harmon Victor.

Bobby Harmon, of Oakland, Calif., seeded second to Allison, dropped only one second-set game while sweeping through Paul Guibord, of Melrose. The Californian youngster will engage his doubles partner, Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, in the other second last rounder.

Hunt, who has been beaten by Harman in their two previous singles engagements, was pressed to the limit before Norbert Burgess of Chicago, surrendered to him by a 5—7, 6—4, 9—7 margin. Burgess had him at match point in the thirteenth game of the final set, but Hunt rallied by storming the net and putting down a barrage of angle shots that kept his rival flat-footed as he pulled up to 7-all and then reeled off the next two games.

Mrs. Sarah Palrey Fabyan, the Brookline internationalist, aided Mrs. Virginia Rise Johnson, of Boston, in the difficult task of eliminating the last of the Californian threats as he led the way into the women's division semifinals.

Highly Geared.

Mrs. Fabyan's game was highly geared when she overcame Mrs. Bonnie Miller Blank, of Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—4, but Mrs. Johnson caused the most startling upset of the day when she eliminated the second seeded Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., 4—5, 6—4, 6—2. The Boston player had difficulty handling Miss Wheeler's more forceful strokes during the first set, but as the match wore on her greater speed of foot enabled her to get into volleying position to snuff out rallies.

In the other women's semifinals, Mrs. John Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., lasted just long enough to nip Norma Taubele, New York's red-haired southpaw champion, —6, 6—3, 7—5, and Helen Pederson, of Stamford, Conn., gained the last semifinals berth by overwhelming Hope Knowles, Philadelphia, 6—2, 6—2.

Mrs. Fabyan, who has seldom played her best tennis at this stage of the season, will oppose Mrs. Van Ryn in one of tomorrow's semifinals, and Mrs. Johnson will match strokes with the Connecticut girl.

Lucas Bats, Hurls Bucs To Victory

Veteran Hurler Holds Foe to 4 Hits, Knocks In Three Runs.

Brooklyn, July 22 (AP).—Red Lucas baffled the Dodgers with four hits today and pitched the Pittsburgh Pirates to an easy 10-to-1 victory over the Brooklyns for their only win of the series.

He also played a major part in the Bucs' 14-hit attack, driving in three runs with a pair of singles.

A homer by Jimmy Bucher in the fourth was the blow that prevented Lucas from a shutout, as he fanned two and did not walk a man in winning his sixth victory of the season.

Al Todd connected for a homer and a single, driving in three runs, and Lloyd Waner hit three singles in the attack the Pirates fired on Roy Henshaw, Waite Hoyt and Max Butcher. Henshaw, belted out as the Bucs scored four runs in the sixth, was charged with the setback.

Steve Casey Easily Pins Cliff Olsen

Steve (Crusher) Casey, latest importation and title claimant from Ireland, pinned Cliff Olsen with a drop-kick in 24¾ minutes of the feature wrestling bout last night at Griffith Stadium and earned a chance to meet Bronko Nagurski, another champion, in a bout here in the near future. Casey was the aggressor throughout and administered Olsen a terrific beating before the finish.

In other matches Bill Sledge threw Wally Dusek, cousin of the "terrible" Dusek brothers, in 17½ minutes with a kangaroo kick. Jack Hader, a bad man, threw Jack Donovan in 13½ minutes with a body press, Hank Barber and Jack Kennedy worked to a 30-minute draw and George Kondyles flipped George Harbin in 12½ minutes with a series of body presses.

Rumor Has Ruel As Browns' Pilot

Chicago, July 22 (AP).—Harold (Muddy) Ruel, Chicago White Sox coach and a veteran of 23 years in American League baseball, was reported today to be under consideration as manager of the St. Louis Browns.

Ruel, native and resident of St. Louis, declined to say whether he had been sounded out by the Brownie management to take over the job from which Rogers Hornsby was discharged yesterday, but said he "might be interested in a manager's position." Jim Bottomley, veteran first baseman and coach of the Browns, has been moved into Hornsby's place, at least for the balance of the season.

$10,000 Up As Chicago Open Begins

Babe Didrikson, the "Masked Marvel" and 440 others, a large number of whom will come closer to winning the $3,000 grand prize than either the Babe or the mysterious one, will start combing two Medinah Country Club courses for shares of the season's biggest medal play purse.

Officials of the Chicago District Gold Association, the tournament sponsor, hope the huge field will be able to complete the scheduled opening 18 holes before nightfall, but won't bet on it.

The professional attacking force includes almost every standout in competition, with Harry Cooper, who never has failed to lead the pack home in official competition at Medinah, the favorite.

The ranking contenders will be the same old group of pro raiders who follow the money trail—National Open Champion Ralph Guldahl, Horton Smith, Henry Picard, Johnny Revolta, Sam Snead and Gene Sarazen, Ryder Cuppers; Tommy Armour, the home pro, Hard Luck Dick Metz, the Mangrum Boys, Ray and Lloyd, and Frank Walsh, among others.

Among the amateurs who will compete for a cup and four merchandise prizes, Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans, national intercollegiate champion and holder of the Canadian and Southern amateur titles; Paul Leslie, Western amateur champion and runnerup to his Louisiana State teammate, Haas, in the intercollegiate, and Melvin (Chick) Harbert, of Battle Creek, Mich., rank as the standouts.

Harbert, who passed up the Michigan Amatur tournament to try his luck in major competition, won the Michigan Open two weeks ago with an amazing total of 268 strokes, 20 under par, over the Arbor Hills course at Jackson.

The prize money shares will be worth at least railroad fare to anyone finishing in the first 30. The second slice will be $1,00, with the rest divided as follows: Third, $800; fourth, $600; fifth, $500; sixth, $450; seventh, $400; eighth, $350; ninth, $300; tenth, $250; eleventh, $200; twelfth, $150; three at $125; five each at $100, $75 and $50.

Friday's and Saturday's 18-hole rounds will reduce the treasure-seeking group to the 50 low-scoring professionals and ties, and the 25 low amateurs and ties for Sunday's 36-hole finishing test.

3d Cavalry Wins In Polo Tourney

Baltimore, July 22.—The Third Cavalry of Fort Myer, Va., last year's champion, scored its first victory of the Southeastern tournament by defeating the Quantico Marines this afternoon at the Maryland Polo Club by a score of 9 to 8.

The largest week-day crowd in the history of the local club saw the teams clash in a well-played match. The Marines enjoyed a two-goal handicap and kept on the heels of the Cavalrymen throughout the six chukkers.

Four times during the hectic struggle the score was tied. The winner had a better balanced team, but encountered considerable difficulty in trying to stop Maj. C. A. Wilkinson, five-goal man of the Marines. Maj. Wilkinson scored four of his team's goals.

9th-Inning Homer Wins For Giants

Wally Berger Clouts Telling Blow; One Game Back.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 22.—Wally Berger, that "clutch man," came through again today when the chips were down. He hit a homer with one out in the ninth inning to break up a ball game and give the Giants a 6-to-5 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

His round-trip shot, twelfth of the season, wound up the proceedings that were sent into a deadlock when Ival Goodman belted a four-bagger with a mate on base in the seventh to tie the count.

Since the league-leading Chicago Cubs were defeated, the victory boosted the Giants to within a game of the pace.

Each team used three pitchers, with Dick Coffman, who took over in the seventh, receiving credit for the victory, and Peaches Davis, who served up the high hard one to Berger, charged with the setback.

Burgess Whitehead, with three singles, and Goodman, with two singles as well as his homer, led the respective attacks.

Chevy Chase Nine Defeats Tremonts

In a game marked by ragged play by both teams, the Chevy Chase Red Sox defeated the Tremonts, 4-1, to clinch the first-half championship of the Roosevelt Community Center Baseball League. The game was played at the Roosevelt Stadium Wednesday morning and was the deciding game in a two-out-of-three play-off. Wells, who also pitched the shutout game Monday, muffled the Tremonts' bats, permitting only three hits.

Buddy Myer May Succeed As Manager

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, July 22.—As the Nats reel through the West, defeat-groggy from their worst slump in recent years, the security of Bucky Harris' job as manager is a recurrent and lively topic of conversation.

Speculation concerning Harris' future with the Washington Club has been intensified during the past two days by the release of Rogers Hornsby as manager of the Browns. The open season on managers is believed to be at hand.

Harris, who is operating under a contract that ends this season, is, of course, on the spot. The Nats' recently ended ten1game losing streak and their utter failure to become a factor in the pennant race at any time this season naturally threaten his job.

Griffith Silent.

Clark Griffith, back in Washington, has given no hint of his position in the matter, but it is known that Griffith regarded his 1937 team with high hopes and expected it to be in the thick of the pennant fight.

But in Harris' favor of a renewal of his contract at the end of the season is the fact that Washington fans have not blamed him for the Nats' slump, preferring rather to agree that the Nats simply did not have a good ball team.

Only once this season has Harris been booed in Washington and on that occasion, he was the innocent victim of stupid base running by Buddy Myer. Harris' popularity in Washington may be the factor that will cause Griffith to renew his contract.

Anyway, Griffith has never fired a manager in midseason. His managerial decisions are always made at the end of the campaign, and until then, Harris' fate will not be known.

Has Harmony.

The decision, of course, lies with Griffith, but Harris has a powerful ally in the Washington players, who are thoroughly in support of him. No sign of discord, friction or discontent has ever been noted between manager and players ever since Harris resumed managing the club in 1935.

If Harris is to have a successor, then that man undoubtedly will come from the ranks of the players. It has been Griffith's habit to promote his athletes even as he first promoted Harris to the management in 1924 and promoted Joe Cronin to the job in 1933.

In some circles, Buddy Myer's name has been mentioned as Harris' successor, but Myer has never revealed any ambition to be a manager.

Their one-game winning streak still in tact as a result of an off day this afternoon, the Nats took a postman's holiday and hied themselves to Sportsman's Park, where they watched the Yankees and the Browns.

Harris' team faces five games with the Browns in three days, starting tomorrow. Monte Weaver will get the opening game assignment and Harris will gamble on Saturday with Ken Chase and Ed Linke in a double-header. Jimmy DeShong and Wes Ferrell will pitch the twin bill Sunday, after which the Nats return home for a long stand at Griffith Stadium.

Favorites Win, Reach Net Finals

By Bob Garrison.

By virtue of straight-set semi-final victories over two newcomers to the annual classic, Hazel (Jimmy) Bishopp, representing Takoma Playground, and Lucille McDowell, Burroughs champion, who form a compiete antithesis of tennis performance, will meet tomorrow for the fourteenth Playground Department Girls championship at the Chevy Chase Playground.

The winners of yesterday's matches are scheduled to meet tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock on the Chevy Chase courts for the title won last year by Willie O'Steen, who did not defend it this year.

Bishopp, possessor of the stature of a potential national net great, whose game consists of a masculine service aided by a powerful forehand, was hard put to win her match from petite Mary Gray, of Twin Oaks. Bishopp, after being extended in the first set, finally tired her game opponent to win, 9—7, 6—2.

-Bishopp Is Flashy.

Bishopp was relying on her strength and form to carry her to her victory, Lucille McDowell, last year's losing finalist, ping-pinged her way into the final round by eliminating blond Helen Miller, of Chevy Chase, who soon became exhausted by the husky Borroughs champion's machine-gun returns, which resembled that kind of fire by continuity rather than speed, 6—0, 6—0.

Taking a 2—1 lead, Mary Gray, Central High student, gave the sparse gathering reason to murmur "upset" as she forced her rangy opponent into one corner with baseline drives and then passed her in the other corner several times. She held a 5—3 lead in the same set, but Hazel, whose face bore no trace of an emotion throughout the match, found her service and, after breaking through her opponent's in the ninth game, served a love game to tie it at 5-all.

Rolling now, Bishop quickly broke through again in the eleventh game to take a 6-to-5 lead. But her small, dark-haired opponent was not through. Although Bishopp was now at her best, Gray won the next two games by scoring sensational placements on passing shots down the sidelines, to lead, 7—6.

Bishopp, however, was not to be stopped, and after standing at set point twice in the twelfth game, and failing to get it, she was forced to win three straight games to end the set, 9—7.

Gray Tires Fast.

In the second set, after she had taken a 1-love lead, Mary Gray tired rapidly, being unable to aim her shots accurately. She quickly fell behind by losing four straight games, 4—1. She managed to break Bishopp's service in the sixth game, when Bishopp double-faulted away the game, but it was all over when Bishopp ran through the next two games to win, 6—2.

McDowell, whose game tends to drive an opponent into despair, incessantly kept the ball in play until Miss Miller erred, to win easily. Miss Miller was able to garner only 12 points in the first set, and fared little better in the second, getting but 13 from her heady foe.

FALSE POINT, first away and saving ground throughout, opened a good lead swinging for the stretch, but had to be kept to pressure in closing stages to stave off bid of THISTLE FLOWER. The latter held a slight lead going to turn and responded to drive to be wearing down winner after going wide entering stretch. BLINI closed with good courage after being shuffled back at turn. AUTUMN QUEST was in the thick of contention throughout and hung on willingly.

DUNCANNON, sent to front in opening furlong, shook off challenges of DISOWN and tired slightly nearing end. HARD CHASE, hard ridden throughout, closed willingly. EMVEE, shuffled back at break, made up some ground. DISOWN tired after pressing pace.

Phillies' Big Eighth Belts Chicago Cubs

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 22.—The Phillies punctured Clyde Shoun's tight pitching in the eighth inning today with a seven-run barrage that carried Chicago to defeat, 7 to 4, and dashed the Cubs' hopes of strengthening their National League lead.

Two bases on balls and hits by Norris and Martin produced two runs and started a rally that Larry French, who replaced Shoun at that point, could not check. Three more walks, a hit by Scharein and an error brought the other runs.

It was a pitching duel between Shoun and Passeau for five innings. Then, in the sixth, Jurges and Cavarretta, with doubles, gave the Cubs a run, and Collins, in the seventh, added another with a circuit drive. Safeties by Herman and Jurge, following him, made it 3 to 0.

Detroit, July 22 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers took the series from Boston, two games to one, with a 19-hit assault on four pitchers today for a 17-to-4 victory in the final game.

Southpaw Jake Wade limited the Red Sox to six hits, but walked ten men. Jimmie Foxx, Boston first baseman, hit his fifth home run of the series and twenty-third of the season with Pinky Higgins on base in the sixth inning, after Wade had fanned Foxx with the bases loaded in the fourth.

Dismissal of Browns' Pilot Still Mystery

St. Louis President Says Hornsby Knows Reason, But Rajah Denies It.

St. Louis, July 22 (AP).—The specific reason for the dismissal of Rogers Hornsby as manager of the St. Louis Browns was just as obscure tonight as it was when Donald L. Barnes, president of the American League team, announced yesterday the "Rajah" had been relieved of his duties.

After 24 hours of thought, Hornsby declared he knew of no reason for the sudden termination of his services. Barnes, pressed for additional details, reiterated his original statement the ouster was for "cause," adding only that developments within the last two weeks were responsible. He said Hornsby was fully aware of the reason.

The Post-Dispatch reported it asked the one-time National League batting star the direct question if he thought his dismissal was due to his "well-known fondness for betting on the horse races." It quoted Hornsby as replying:

"Aw, they always bring that up. That's their theme song, so let 'em sing it if they want to."

Wife Blames Owners.

His wife, expressing the opinion Hornsby was dismissed because of the Browns' poor showing, blamed the team's owners for having failed to provide him with adequate playing material.

"After all," she said, "Rogers can't play all of the positions himself."

In addition to speculating over the "inside story" of Hornsby's dismissal, fans were indulging in the great game of placing him in a new job and finding a successor to "Sunny Jim" Bottomley, whom the Browns named acting manager.

Concerning a new job, Hornsby said, "there'll be a lot of phony stories now, but I have nothing in mind and have heard nothing from anybody." He was reported, however, to have contacted Cardinal officials without success.

As for another manager, William O. De Witt, vice president of the Browns, said Bottomley would have charge of the team for the balance of the season and there was no one else under consideration for next year.

Fisherman Gets 105-Pound Marlin

Marlin are running off Ocean City, Md., reported Jesse Sprouse, a bass fisherman, yesterday, and exhibited a 105-pound beauty to prove it, at the fish market where he works on Water street.

Catching 105 pounds of leaping, fighting marlin was "some experience," he said, "but I'd rather get one bass than five marlin any day."

Sprouse struggled with the ocean monster 3½ hours before he landed him aboard a trawler. "When he hit, he took 800 feet of line before he slowed down. I only had 900 feet. He jumped 20 feet out of the water several times. I didn't know whether to be scared or tickled." Sprouse shook his head, still surprised.

"But my hobby is still bass fishing," he declared. "It was the most wonderful vacation I ever had, the first time I ever fished in salt water. Our party caught two marlin. But next time I fish, I'll drive back into the mountains for bass, and I don't care if I catch any or not. I like bass."

The fisherman who caught a marlins—something others try for years without success—and who works in a fish market, wound up his fish story with this: "I never ate fish in my life."

TroskyHomers Help Indians Down A's, 5-1

Big First Baseman Hits 22d and 23d; Wyatt Allows Only 4 Hits.

Cleveland, July 22 (AP).—John Whitlow Wyatt, aided by Hal Trosky's twenty-second and twenty-third home runs of the season, hurled a 4-hit, 5-to-1 triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics today in his first start for the Cleveland Indians.

The silent Georgian limited the Mackmen to only one damaging blow—a sixth-inning home run by Wally Moses, the outfielder's third in as many games against the Tribe—and connected for singles in his two official trips to the plate.

Meanwhile, Trosky's two powerful wallops over the centerfield gate were joined by a home run by Earl Averill as Cleveland took the last three games of the four-game series. All four-baggers were with bases empty.

Post Notes on Fishin' . . . . By Bill Ackerman

ACKERMAN

A report from Capt. E. A. White at Yorktown shows the catch of a few fish around Gloucester Point. This is the first news in nearly a month of blues being caught anywhere in the bay section, on which there has been a bonafide report. This is nothing to get het up about because they appear to be stragglers.

So if you must try them, as so many anglers insist on doing each year just about this time probably in the hope that they will be the first to get in them, the recommendation is the Virginia shore, with the hope that you might be lucky enough to hang on to a cabio or two. It only takes one of these fellows to make any fishing trip worthwhile.

At Ocean City, Md., where the blues have been shoaled close under the shore for many days, it looks as though they are moving on, for size and catches are getting smaller; but to take their place there are bonito and dolphin, either one of which will stand toe to toe with the blues in putting up a type of battle that makes you believe you have been some place before it is over.

There is something about tying on to one of these irradiant beauties of the gulf stream that imparts a thrill that few fish are able to give to their captors. Whether it comes from the radically different rough and tumble fight, or whether it is the glorious changing quickfading riot of colors that supply it, is hard to say. Anyway, it is real fishing and if you have never caught one—try it.

There is hardly any area in the upper bay but what weakfish have been found shoaled up and on top. Shadyside, Deale, the Choptank, Solomons—a few hours of fun at the most, and they are gone. From reports this past week it looks as though instead of one shoal working up the bay, there are many of them, and if this is true, it augurs well for a fine season and good fishing when they start feeding on the banks and bars such as the "Hilltop" in the mouth of Eastern Bay, or from one end of Holland Point bar to the other. This latter place, for those who have never fished it, is one of the finest feeding grounds in the whole upper part of the Chesapeake. It extends from a point close to the red beacon off Fairhaven straight out past Holland Point and the black can to a point just beyond the edge of the steamboat channel. Then there is that long stretch of hard shelving bottom between Drum Point and Cove Point in the Patuxent. Feeding ground that is hard to beat. It should produce some fine catches from now on.

Hardheads are to be caught at almost every point—of good size and in number that is purely the prerogative of the individual angler. From just before dark until an hour or two after sunrise seems to return the best catches.

Capt. Joe Lore's and Capt. Harry Woodburn's boats at Solomons have been coming in regularly with catches on which none could register the slightest kick, from one to two hundred and all of them with a sprinkling of weakfish. All the boats at Colonial Beach are getting them, in addition to quite a few rock. The Gooses, well for that, take the trip of Ollie Atlas and his party on Wednesday night. Fishing with Capt. Fairbanks from Plum Point, they returned with almost 200 large ones.

* * * *

Charlie Andrews, captain of one of Bob Lee's boats at Shadyside, during the past week caught them in water so deep, 170 feet just below Bloody Point Lighthouse, that they would rupture from the abrupt change of pressure as they were brought to the top. Little fun because there is no fight in fish caught under such circumstances and a fact that this party found out for themselves—after they had caught 55. They did find real fishing, however, by way of a shoal of weaks and one of rock, both of which were productive.

The rock fish are still going strong at West River, only now, instead of extending across the bay in the deep water, the shoal has divided, one part remaining in the area around Bloody Point (should you care to hear stories of real rock fish, talk to the keeper of the light), while the other part is raising every evening from Thomas' Light to the black can off Cedarhurst, a stretch of close to 6 miles.

* * * *

The boats are catching them chumming, trolling with weighted spoons and feathers and at times even though the fish are not on top, with unweighted spoons and feathers. When you go take your entire collection, for at times they strike better on one lure than they do on others. The best seems to be the yellow Florida feathers that Sid Atlas repainted red, although on some of the other shoals the original yellow seems to work out best. Anyway you take it, this year, this lure is your "fish finder." The June Bug with a blood worm doesn't seem to approach it.

Ceferino Garcia K.O.'s BobbyPacho

Garcia weighed 145¾, and Pacho 147.

Pate's Davis Cuppers Putt For Practice

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, Eng., July 22.—Walter L. Pate, a little apprehensive lest his tennis timber get too fine an edge—especially Don Budge—sent his lads through putting practice tonight on a neighboring green.

But Budge, invincible even there, sank putts from all corners to garner everybody's pennies. The racquet ramblers haven't seen a hotel menu in weeks—"and won't until the fuss is all over," Pate said emphatically. "I'm no hard taskmaster about food, but I'm keeping it simple and well-spaced. We want that silver before polishing off any pastries."

Meanwhile the Englishmen are dividing training with real golf. Bunny Austin and Charles Tuckey went around Walton Heath in 82s.

After today's strenuous practice drill Pate declined to state definitely whether Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant or Frankie Parker would be named as the second singles player.

Indications were that Parker would be chosen to second Budge in the assault on the cup. He played a three-set secret match with Grant this morning and then was tested against Budge later in the day. The drill also included a brief doubles brush between Budge and Gene Mako, the cup pair, and Grant and Parker.

In Dual Bouts.

The Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A. and the Colored Boy's Club will stage a dual meet tonight in the main gymnasium at the Boy's Club. Admission is free.

Corn Swamped Under Deluge Of Deliveries

5-Cent Drop Accompanied by 4-Cent Decline in Wheat.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 22.—A simple notice that 653,000 bushels of corn would be delivered on July futures contracts tomorrow caught the grain trade napping today, and the immediate effect was to break corn prices more than five cents a bushel with wheat dropping as much as four cents in sympathy.

Grain traders were surprised at the size of the delivery notices. Belief was general that such a quantity was not available for July tender. The break came shortly before the close, and at one time July corn was down 5⅜ cents a bushel, touching $1.11⅜ before rallying to close at $1.12@$1.12⅜. Earlier this contract had touched $1.18 a bushel.

Rallying somewhat in the final minutes of trading, Chicago corn futures closed ⅜ to 5 cents under yesterday's finish; July, $1.12@$1.12⅜; September, $1.02@$1.02¼; December, 76⅛@76¼; wheat, 3⅜@4 cents down; July, $1.18¼; September, $1.18⅜@$1.18⅝; December, $1.20½@$1.20¾; oats, ¾@1⅛ off; September, 33¾, and rye showing ¼@2⅜ drop; September, 84½. The outcome in provisions was unchanged to 15 cents lower.

Boston, July 22 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture)—The undertone of the wool market showed a decided improvement today. Interest of buyers broadened and scattered sales of small to moderate volume were more frequent than last week and earlier in the current week. Improvement was not generally reflected in prices, but quotations displayed a firming tendency.

Gold and Reserves Drop During Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported last evening that member bank excess reserves declined $90,000,000, during the week ended July 21 to $870,000,000. The decline followed a four-week increase in this supply of lendable money aggregating $210,000,000.

The amount of excess reserves is an important factor governing interest rates and other credit conditions. The reserve board has expressed the view that $800,000,000 of such funds is ample for the maintenance of "easy-money" conditions.

The board reported a $19,000,000 decline in gold stocks for the week to $12,404,000,000. The Treasury earlier had announced gold stocks dropped off $41,000,000 on July 20, but part of this loss may have been made up by acquisitions on July 21.

The drop in gold holdings was the first since last October. It resulted from operation of the Chinese-American monetary agreement, under which the Treasury sells gold to China.

The reserve board said its holdings of Government securities remained unchanged during the week ended July 21 at $2,526,000,000. This was $96,000,000 over the same week a year ago.

National Steel Expansion Aim Is Fifth Place

$25,000,000 Program to Lift Company From Sixth in Output.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 22.—Chairman Ernest T. Weir, of the National Steel Corporation said today that completion of the subsidiary Great Lakes Steel Corporation's $25,000,000 expansion program would raise National Steel from sixth to fifth position among the Nation's steel producers.

The enlarged Great Lakes Steel plant at Detroit will be in operation before the end of the year, Weir said, raising the corporation's annual steel ingot capacity to 3,400,000 tons. Expansion work has been under way for several months. National Steel was organized in 1929 with a capacity of 1,200,000 tons.

Weir said that the growth of the corporation was "accomplished during the greatest depression ever experienced in the United States." The company, he said, comprised of Weirton Steel, Great Lakes Steel, Hanna Iron Ore Co. and Hanna Furnace Corporation, had multiplied its original capacity three times, had earned a profit in every month since its organization and never failed to pay a dividend.

The American Iron and Steel Institute listed the "Big Five" steel companies in 1936 as follows:

United States Steel, 25,772,400 tons; Bethlehem, 9,360,000; Republic, 6,483,000; Jones & Laughlin, 3,660,000, and Youngstown Sheet and Tube, 3,120,000.

Curb Prices Yield After Early Gains

New York, July 22 (AP).—Curb stocks eased off in late transactions today, canceling a substantial part of gains registered earlier in the session. Utilities, quiet at the opening, showed strength at midday and closed with an assortment of plus and minus signs. Electric Bond & Share finished at 19¼, up ⅝; Niagara Hudson, 13¼, up ⅛; United Gas, 9⅝, up ⅛. Closing lower were American Gas & Electric at 36 off ¼, and Standard Power & Light, 3½, off ¼.

Among industrials finishing on the upside were Berkey & Gay and Pan American Airways. Aluminum Co. of America, American Cyanamid B, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, St. Regis Paper and United Wall Paper were lower.

Brokers' Loans Drop $5,000,000 for Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $1,142,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $5,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $970,000,000.

The Market

Stocks Hold Firm in Moderate Trading With Revival in Steel and Chrysler.

New York, July 22.—Stocks moved up fractionally in a turnover of around a million shares with a poverty of excitement. Bonds were firm. September wheat dropped 4 cents to 118⅜ cents a bushel, and the seesaw in grain trading brought some restraint in stocks. Railroad and equipment stocks were better than usual. Most of the commodities were steady.

Stock prices held together well nearly all day. Opening sales were firm and the tendency to sell off a little which appeared yesterday was replaced in most groups by a desire to buy. Steel and Chrysler, the recent leaders of the industrial sections, got under way again. Steel did not top its recent high price, but came within a point of it. Chrysler reached a new price. The market had numerous stocks able to rise 1 to 3 points. Among them were Youngstown, Sloss Sheffield, Westinghouse, Foster Wheeler, Allied Chemical and American Locomotive. Case jumped 5 or 6. A number of preferred issues hardened up to 6 points.

On the other hand, there was a spattering of weak issues. In that category were Chesapeake Corporation, Sheaffer Pen, Dow Chemical, and Gold & Stock, mostly issues suffering from thin markets. Farm implements, mail orders and the commodity stocks advanced.

Another day passed without news of a fresh gold "loan" to some country, in exchange for silver, coffee, or just hope. Meanwhile some idea of the amount of the Chinese swap of silver for gold was gained from the daily report of the Treasury showing a drop in the inactive gold fund, from which the gold given China was taken.

Chinese Silver.

Apparently the amount of silver acquired by the Treasury from China in the deal which brought a $41,800,000 decline in the inactive gold fund was something in excess of 90,000,000 ounces, or about one-quarter of all the silver imported into this country in 1936. At the recent rate at which silver has been coming in, the amount of the Chinese purchase was equal to eight to ten months' imports. The Chinese metal apparently has been in San Francisco bank vaults for a long time, held there secure against the Japanese and in the knowledge that the United States Treasury would buy it eventually, if not now. To balance its books the Treasury took the silver into its bank balance in the Federal Reserve banks, which in consequence rose about $38,000,000 on June 20, when the deal was cleared. The $38,000,000 reflected the acquisition of $41,000,000 of silver, less Treasury expenditure for that date.

The Chinese deal is an earnest of the Treasury's good faith in playing the role of Sisyphus, as required under the impossible silver purchase act. Last year the Treasury caught up with its requirements to the extent of about 300,000,000 ounces after buying an aggregate amount of 1,200,000,000 ounces. Based upon the increase in gold stocks since last December, it would appear that the Treasury should have bought 650,000,000 ounces so far during 1937, but apparently it has been able to get something like 200,000,000. In other words, the few hundred million ounces net gain made last year apparently have been more than wiped out this year and the Treasury is as far away from its goal as it ever was.

French Francs.

In the foreign exchange market francs sold as low as the equivalent of 3.69½ cents in London before this market opened, but the low here seems to have been 3.71⅝, but other currencies moved against the dollar. When the French control authorities intervened there was a quick recovery, probably induced by short covering. The guilder continued to attract much attention, the Dutch control jacking up guilders another 5 pounds to a new high against dollars by selling the latter liberally. Sterling was steady to firm most of the day, though a little less buoyant than it has been recently and London gold, while it fell to a new low in terms of sterling, remained slightly above the New York parity level. Banks here consequently were not interested in buying it.

As stated, the rise in guilders is said to be a controlled affair rather than, as might be supposed from surface indications, a movement of Dutch capital from our markets. Information from banks and brokerage houses, as well as from other well-informed quarters, does not bear that out. Foreign dealings in this market have been slight recently, but more buying than selling is said to have taken place. Incidentally, since Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said that not the entire drop of $41,000,000 in the inactive gold fund was for the account of China, but that part of it was gold loss under the three-party exchange control agreement, it may be that the Dutch central bank bought dollars to hold down guilders and turned the dollars into gold.

Commodities.

London market observers claim confidence in commodities now has been fully restored and that the trend of the markets is once more upward with increasing speculation. Interest in commodities here is most keen in wheat, but other markets are growing firmer and trading is increasing among the shares of companies most directly affected by commodity prices. Leather and sugar stocks were more active today, and buying of farm implements increased. Case was a leader, rising half a dozen points to a new high price. Some of the rubber stocks rose 1 to 2 points.

Rockefeller Seat Goes to Grandson

New York, July 22 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange membership of the late John D. Rockefeller was posted for transfer today to Laurence S. Rockefeller, his grandson. The seat was purchased in 1883, and was held primarily to save commissions in security dealings. Rockefeller never took an active interest in stock exchange affairs.

Laurence S. Rockefeller, who is the son of John D. Rockefeller, jr., has no present plans, it is said, for establishing a connection with a Wall Street firm. At present he is assisting his father in handling of the Rockefeller philanthropic interests.

Realty Loans Here Continue Steady Gains

Rise in Commercial Loans Also Reported by Local Banks.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

An increasing demand for real estate loans is reported in the local banking field. The upturn has been noticeable since March and appears to be gaining in volume, some quarters reporting an advance of 15 per cent since the close of that month. An increase and continuing demand for commercial loans in the last quarter are also reported, although the percentage of gain in this classification is not so great.

The advancing demand in both kinds of loans is gratifying to banking houses, as there has been the necessity for greater use of credit for employment of surplus funds. A noteworthy factor in the mounting demand is the continued lowness of interest rates. Continu building and a general upward movement in business are fundamental factors in the need for financing through loans. And the outlook appears that funds will be in greater demand in the fall.

Industry's Half Year.

The first six months of the current year were characterized nationally by an industrial activity greater than in any other half year except that of 1929, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States reports. Activity during the present half year reached its peak, however, in March, holding in the aggregate to this level during the following months, in spite of unfavorable factors such as labor trouble and adverse legislative proposals. Had these not been existent there would have been a steady advance in April, May and June, is the opinion.

The present is a time when industrial activity in its entirety may pause for a period, or may, as last year and the previous one, hesitate briefly, and then strengthen gradually into November. Conditions are now favorable to the latter course, the survey reports.

Investors' Syndicate.

Investors Syndicate has completed its forty-third year and announces that its resources have passed the $100,000,000 mark. Local representatives of the company, whose headquarters are in Minneapolis, report that payments made by contract holders on their investment contracts and certificates for the first six months of 1937 totaled $13,715,542, a gain of 15 per cent over the corresponding period a year ago.

R. H. Macy & Co. Plans Common Stock Offer

New York, July 22 (AP).—R. H. Macy & Co. announced today that it would offer to stockholders additional common stock in the ratio of one new share to each 10 held. The price of the offering will be specified later.

Directors stated the filing of a registration statement with the SEC for the additional common shares had been authorized. They explained "that it is prudent to raise additional capital at this time to provide against contingencies calling for greater working capital and to provide against reductions of its cash funds, which, assuming a reasonable dividend policy, would otherwise take place over the next year due to increased working capital requirements resulting from a general expansion in the company's volume of business."

Survey Sees Gains By Chemical Industry

New York, July 22.—Substantial earnings gains by chemical companies are generally anticipated for the first half of 1937, as the result of an indicated record volume of business. This should run from 20 per cent to 30 per cent above the same period of 1936, according to Poor's industry and investment surveys.

In spite of wage increases granted this year and the possible tapering off in sales growth over the next few months, earnings for the whole of 1937 should exceed 1936 profits by a substantial margin.

Decline in New York Volume Offsets Increases in Other Cities.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 22.—Bank clearings for 22 leading cities in the week ended July 21, of $5,711,211,000, decreased 0.3 per cent from $5,731,232,000 for the like period last year, due chiefly to the poor showing made in New York, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

In the preceding week the year-to-year comparison indicated a gain of 15.8 per cent.

Clearings at New York were $3,355,421,000, against $3,561,464,000 for the 1936 comparative, a drop of 5.8 per cent.

Missouri Pac. To Pay $7,742,687 Interest

St. Louis, July 22 (AP).—Arrangements for immediate payment of $7,742,687, representing a six-month installment of delinquent interest on bonds of the Missouri Pacific Railroad and two of its subsidiaris, were being made today by Trustee Guy A. Thompson.

United States District Judge George H. Moore authorized the payment last July 9, but stayed his order to allow an appeal by the railroad company, which contended the payment would interfere with its pending reorganization proceedings. Thompson informed the court yesterday the railroad's attorneys, without giving a reason, had advised him they had abandoned plans to appeal the order.

American Radiator Net 20 Cents on Common

New York, July 22 (AP).—American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corporation and subsidiary and affiliates, heating and plumbing supplies manufacturers and distributors, reporting today for the June quarter indicated net profit of $2,080,785 after charges, but before undistributed profits surtax, equal after preferred dividend requirements to 20 cents a common share.

Ickes Accused Anew in Delay On Sugar Bill

O'Mahoney Repeats Charge Secretary Is Blocking Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Joseph O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, reiterated last night charges Secretary Ickes is standing in the way of enactment of pending legislation extending the sugar quota system and restoring benefit payments to sugar producers.

Earlier the Interior Department Chief had issued a statement denying he had held up the legislation sponsored by O'Mahoney and Senator Adams, of Colorado.

Ickes also said the Senators, in framing their bill, had failed to follow the President's wishes as outlined in the Executive's message of last March.

Statistics Stressed.

O'Mahoney, in answering Ickes' assertion that he had been misinformed and deceived, said Interior Department statistics disclosed the following points on which to base demands for import limitations:

1. Thirty-four Puerto Rican corporations produce 50 per cent of all the Puerto Rican sugar.

2. The sugar mills either own or control 42 per cent of all Puerto Rican cane lands.

3. Puerto Rican corporations have been paying "little or no attention" to laws prohibiting any one corporation from operating, either directly or indirectly, more than 500 acres of land.

Ickes had quoted O'Mahoney as accusing Ickes' Interior Department of preventing enactment of the pending bill.

Urging that Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands be given fair treatment, Ickes asserted that the refiners were "selfishly insisting . . . on a provision to give them a more complete monopoly of the refining of sugar by setting up discriminatory trade barriers against a large group of American citizens."

Would Continue Limitation.

The provision would continue the present limitation on the amount of sugar the off-shore producing areas could refine.

Ickes' statement coincided with renewed efforts in Congress to pass legislation extending the existing marketing quota system, which balances supply and demand, and to revive benefit payments to producers. O'Mahoney has contended that the Interior Department was blocking action.

Other provisions of a bill already approved by the Agriculture Committee also fail to conform to President Roosevelt's recommendations in his March 1 message to Congress, Ickes said.

Discussing his statement at a press conference, Ickes said he would prefer no sugar regulation legislation to the bill now pending.

Asked if he would favor a veto of the bill if it were passed, he said:

"I don't know about that, but if we're consistent, and if the bill is passed and we are asked for a recommendation, we should recommend a veto."

Ickes said his statement was not meant as criticism of Senator O'Mahoney, but merely as an answer.

"He seemed to think that the Interior Department was David with a sling shot marching alone on Goliath," Ickes commented.

Hostages to Help Condemn Traxler

Hugo, Okla., July 22.—Two courageous hostages who halted the wild flight of Roy (Pete) Traxler with his own firearms joined prosecutors tonight in efforts to send the escaped Texas desperado to the electric chair.

County attorneys of both Madill and Bryan counties, both of whom charged Traxler with armed robbery, a capital offense, said the hostages agreed to help prosecute the outlaw they wounded after slaying his fugitive companion, Fred Tindol.

"Sure I'll testify against him," said James E. Denton, oil field worker who, with Frank Trimmer, a farmer, was forced to accompany Traxler and Tindol in the fugitives' flight from a posse. Trimmer also agreed to help prosecutors.

7 Vessels Unable To Refloat Omaha

Despite efforts of seven ships to refloat her, the light cruiser, Omaha, is still aground off Castle Island Light, at the entrance to Crooked Island Passage, in the Bahamas.

Two more vessels were on the way to aid the Omaha which grounded Monday while heading for the Charleston Navy Yard for overhauling, officials said yesterday.

Capt. Howard B. Mecleary, commander of the Omaha, reported last night that his stores were being transferred to the naval tanker Salinas in an effort to lighten his ship. Weather conditions were favorable

Girl, 17, Will Testify In Murder of Chum

Coushatta, La., July 22 (AP).—Pretty Jessie Pepper, 17, will get a chance tomorrow to tell if and why she shot and killed May Elvin Allen, her comely schoolgirl chum. The dead girl's mother testified before a coroner's jury that Jessie and Jessie's mother had been "telling lies on Elvin."

"She (Elvin) spent a month with her Uncle Bill in Vivian," Mrs. Allen said. "She (Jessie) told that Elvin had a baby while up there. She told Elvin's fellow, Percy Methivin." The girls met July 5 in a plantation cow pasture. Officers said an argument and scuffle ensued in which a pistol was discharged. A preliminary hearing for Jessie was set for tomorrow.

2 on Ground Killed, 19 Hurt as Plane Falls

Copenhagen, Denmark, July 22 (AP). A Danish man and wife riding a motorcycle were killed today when a German military airplane crashed into a group of German soldiers maneuvering near Flensburg, in northwestern Germany.

The pilot was killed and 19 soldiers were injured. Flaming gasoline drenched the Danish motorcyclists, who died of burns.

5-Mile Run Barefoot Marks 60th Birthday

Memphis, Tenn., July 22 (AP).—Tom Collier, Memphis attorney, celebrated his sixtieth birthday anniversary today by running 5 miles in his bare feet.

Using the fairgrounds racing track, he ran the distance in 42 minutes 1 second, lowering his previous record of 45 minutes.

Collier had trained a month for today's exhibition. "Best exercise I know," he said, panting just a bit, when the run was over. "It keeps you in trim."

New Attendance Record Is Set At Camp Letts

201 Boys Now Enrolled at Y. M. C. A. Vacation Spot on River.

All attendance records for any given period were broken Wednesday at Camp Letts, the Y. M. C. A. boys' camp on the Rhode River near Annapolis, Md., when an enrollment of 201 boys were reached.

For the first time in the camp's history the number of campers went over the 200 mark, when two additional campers enrolled yesterday to report at the camp today. The previous record attendance was 194 last year.

Thomas Blackburn, of Arlington, Va., has been adjudged the best camper during the first two weeks of its operation this season. Carl Johnson has been awarded the camp honor emblem for all-around achievement at the camp, including intellectual, physical, devotional and service development.

Thirty-eight of the boy campers have passed the beginners swimming tests, which require that they be able to swim 50 feet and make a plain front dive, it was announced yesterday by camp officials. The boys who passed the tests are:

Chester Lewis, Robert Hubalek, William Tucker, John Hewsill, Joseph Gauld, Ralph Smith, Robert Dade, David Cobb, Roger Holt, Donald Clazeit, Lionel Richmond, Edward Wright, Robert Busey, William Stoner, Paul Richardson, Stewart Bicknell, Henry Coleman, Ben Hall, James Hill, Raymond Deaner, John Walls, Marcus Uhler, John R. Clark, William Clark, James Thompson, John Higgs, William Esch, William Gerhardt, David Lum, Brickman Brown, James Shaw, Frederick Sonneman, Robert Blum, Roger Mudd, Richard Ellison, Robert French and Morris Schreiber.

Robert Davis, Willem Malkus, John Fuller, Lawrence Taylor, Robert Marsh and Bradford Hazle have passed the swimmers' test, requiring the swimming of 100 yards in 1 minute and 55 seconds.

The Junior Red Cross life-saving test has been passed by Roy Burton, Lawrence Wiesinger, Alan Kinsel and Graham Hereford.

Grand Rapids Man Elected Head of Knights Templar

Norris, who was deputy grand master, succeeds Andrew Davison Agnew, of Milwaukee. In the only election that presented a contest, C. Byron Lear, of Ridgewood, N. J., was named grand junior warden over John S. Phelps, of Miami.

Harry Pollard, of Lowell, Mass., succeeded Norris and Charles N. Orr, of St. Paul, who was grand senior warden, moved up to Pollard's post of grand generalissimo. John T. Rice, of El Paso, Tex., former grand junior warden, was made right eminent grand captain general in place of the late John Campbell, of Seattle. Robert B. Gaylord, of San Francisco, former grand standard bearer, succeeded to Orr's position.

Storm Maps Fight To Retain Child

A court fight over the custody of 11-year-old Fred Storm was broadened yesterday when his father, Robert E. Storm, of 1681 Columbia road northwest, who now has his custody, filed an answer to a petition by his divorced wife which sought to have the boy awarded to her.

The father cited the recent occurrence in which his divorced wife caused his arrest on a charge of mistreating the boy, a charge dismissed in Police Court. Because of the publicity arising from that case, the father, through Jean M. Boardman, attorney, said the boy is no longer amenable to his dicipline.

The father asked that the court reject the appeal to give the boy to his mother and instead give him permission to place him in a boarding school when the camp is over.

Doughton Delays Candidacy Stand

By the Associated Press.

Representative Robert L. Doughton, of Laurel Springs, N. C., in a letter made public yesterday, said he will "at or near the close of the present session of Congress advise my friends and the people of North Carolina, what office, if any, I will seek in the next Democratic primary."

The letter was in reply to one from Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill (N. C.) Weekly, in which the Representative was asked to say whether he was going to run for the Senate next year.

Doughton has been mentioned as a possible candidate against Senator Robert R. Reynolds, who comes up for re-election in 1937.

Shoe Output For This Year At Top Level

Production Expected to Reach 500 Million Pairs This Year.

New York, July 22.—The output of shoes in the United States during the first five months of 1937 amounted to 197,000,000 pairs as compared with 165,000,000 pairs in the same period of 1936, an increase of approximately 20 per cent according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. If this percentage gain should be maintained during the rest of the year, the annual output in 1937 would reach a new high record of approximately 500,000,000 pairs. This would represent the third consecutive year in which the industry has made a new high record and the fifth consecutive year of expansion. Production last year amounted to 415,000,000 pairs as compared with only 361,000,000 pairs at the pre-depression peak in 1929. The low for the depression was reached in 1930 when 304,000,000 pairs were produced.

The expansion of shoe production since 1932 to record high volumes has been the result of maintaining shoe prices at a relatively low level in the face of a rising national income. Last year, the index of shoe prices, on the basis of 1929 as 100, was 55.8, or 44.2 per cent below the pre-depression level. This was the lowest figure for any year during the period beginning with 1929. So far in 1937, shoe prices have been only slightly higher than a year ago, an increase more than offset by a gain in the national income, thus making possible the boom in shoe production this year.

Low labor costs have been an important factor in keeping shoe prices at a low level. Low labor costs have been the result of greatly increased efficiency and a consequent sharp gain in the output per man-hour which last year was 53.8 per cent above the pre-depression level. This resulted in a substantial reduction in labor costs despite the fact that wage rates were nearly as high last year as they were before the depression.

Goldwyn Explains Mrs. Roosevelt's Status as Writer

By the United Press.

Hollywood, July 22.—Samuel Goldwyn, the movie producer, has addressed a public apology to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosvelt for making it appear that she has gone on his payroll as an advertising writer. He said she merely had sold him an editorial.

The studio Monday night announced that Mrs. Roosevelt would write a "plug" for "Stella Dallas," a Goldwyn picture which is to be previewed here tomorrow night. The producer tonight explained himself:

"I want to apologize to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt for the publicity statements recently circulated that she has been engaged as one of my advertising writers.

"This is not true. Mrs. Roosevelt, through her literary agent, Mr. George Bye, of New York, was told the story of 'Stella Dallas' and, as a result, wrote a beautiful editorial entitled: Stella Dallas inspires a discussion of a mother's vital problem."

"Mrs. Roosevelt graciously permitted me to buy this editorial and use it in a series of advertisements to appear in national magazines and newspapers.

"At no time, however, was she ever engaged as an advertising writer for me."

Faithful to Meet At Mormonism Birthplace in N.Y.

Palmyra, N. Y., July 22 (AP).—To this little town and its environs, revered as the birthplaceof Mormonism, thousands of members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints came tonight to commemorate the ninetieth aninversary of the arrival of Bringham Young's pioneer band in Salt Lake City.

With song and pageantry, a devoted cast will depict Mormon history on a terraced open air stage on the sacred hill Cumorah tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday nights.

Don B. Colton, president of the Eastern States Mission, said approximately 10,000 members and visitors will witness the pageants from the foot of the hill, on the summit of which Mormon doctrine says, the boy Joseph Smith received from the Angel Moroni the golden plates from which the book of Mormon was translated.

Buffalo Strike Imperils Food Of 1,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 21.—One million western New York residents tonight faced a basic-food shortage as twin strikes gripped the Buffalo wholesale butter and egg and meat-packing industries.

Local leaders for the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization, both involved, indicated they would shelve their bitter national rivalry to keep picket lines around 40 strike-bound warehouses and three packing plants.

Hugh Thompson, C. I. O. regional director, said his men "were willing to co-operate with labor anywhere."

Firm Ignores Union.

Thompson intensified the strike situation today by calling out union members at the Dold and Hygrade packing plants. He said the companies had refused to recognize a C. I. O. Butchers & Meat Packers Union as collective bargaining agent.

Meanwhile 1,000 striking truck drivers, affiliated with the A. F. of L. through a teamsters' local, virtually tied up butter and egg shipments.

Raymond Wattles, chairman of a wholesalers' committee, said a canvass showed "a serious butter shortage and shrinking supply of eggs and canned goods."

Wattles' committee met today to reiterate its belief that the closed shop, bone of contention in the truckers' strike, is "un-American and against the constitutional right of every man to gainful employment."

Ford Calls 30 Witnesses.

Detroit, July 22 (AP).—Evidence intended to support the Ford Motor Co.'s claim that union organizers were trespassing on private property May 26 when they were beaten and chased from the gates of the company's Dearborn plant, went into the record at a National Labor Relations Board hearing today.

Ford attorneys called [illegible] rst of about 30 witnesses expected to testify for the company, after the board concluded its case and Trial Examiner John T. Lindsay overruled a motion to dismiss the complaint which charged unfair labor practices.

Pittsburgh, July 22 (AP).—The Federation of Flat Glass Workers made progress today in closing the breach within the union when its national convention ruled out of order a motion to remove President Glen W. McCabe.

New York, July 22 (AP)—A "little NRA" for the millinery industry of this area was completed today when officials and workers' representatives signed a fair trade practice compact in the presence of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia. About 800 employers and 20,000 workers in New York and New Jersey are covered by the agreement, which sets up a policing agent, and provides that hats will carry a label, similar to the old NRA labels, for manufacture under the code.

Bathers Warned To Protect Ears

Warning to use care to avoid ear infections when swimming was issued yesterday by the American Society for the Hard of Hearing.

While healthy ears need not be above water because their outer canals are lined with skin, infection may develop in the middle ear if there is a hole in the eardrum, the society said.

"Anyone with an infection of the ears or nose or any part of the body is a potential source of danger to himself and others," stated the warning.

"All such should be prohibited from bathing near other people. Swimming pools are often little better than septic tanks because of the failure to prohibit bathing to those with nose, throat, ear and other infections.

River Victim's Cap Found Near Scene

As harbor police continued to drag the Potomac River for the body of Woodrow Cronk, who drowned last Sunday as he leaped with eight others from their burning cruiser, his friend Dennis Hollowell, one of the survivors, yesterday discovered Cronk's cap floating near the scene of the accident.

Cronk, the last to leave the boat could not swim. His eight companions were all rescued by nearby launches. Robert Cronk, father of the drowned man, identified the cap.

Gold Treasure Missing, Finder Shoots Himself

Attempts Suicide After Leading Police to Spot; $3,000,000 Gone.

By the United Press.

Panama City, July 22.—A mystery as bizarre as any in the history of Panama's mountain jungles hid the whereabouts of $3,000,000 in gold treasure, whose disappearance was announced simultaneously with an official report that Joanes van Steck, who informed authorities about the discovery, had shot himself.

The first report said van Steck's self-inflicted wound was fatal, but later word said he was still alive but in a critical condition.

A message to President Juan Demosthenes Arosemena from Police Chief Col. Manuel Pino said Van Steck, a Frenchman, shot himself in the head after leading police to the sunken tunnel where he alleged the treasure, consisting of 120 gold bars, weighing 50 pounds each, was found by himself, Arrin G. Thorpe, an American, and Antonio Hill, a German.

"I'll go in first," the police said Van Steck told them upon arrival at the mouth of the tunnel near Piedra Candela, a remote mountain settlement in southwestern Chiriqui Province.

Gold Disappears.

He took a machete and cut his way through the thick brush covering the entrance. Immediately police heard the report of a gun. They rushed into the tunnel and found the Frenchman lying on the ground, a wound in his head.

The gold was nowhere to be found, despite assurances of a Czechoslovakian workman nearby that he knew the treasure had been in the tunnel.

Although Van Steck named Thorpe and Hill as co-finders of the gold and even charged to Bugaba police the German tried to kill him to steal the treasure, neither of the other two men has been mentioned in official reports.

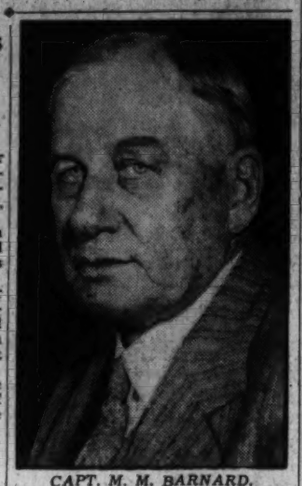
Thorpe, who was located at Concepcion, an outpost of civilization in Bugaba district, denied all knowledge of the treasure. Hill has not yet been found.

Police were unable to understand how 3 tons of gold could be moved without exciting attention of inhabitants of the region. Located high in the heavily wooded mountains, the only communication with the rest of the republic is by mule train down narrow mountain paths.

Pino has been ordered by the President to investigate thoroughly all facts connected with the alleged discovery. Authorities here, who officially confirmed the find after receiving reports from provincial officials, were at a loss to understand how two police captains and the Governor of Chiriqui were able to announce the discovery without any basis in fact. So convinced was the government that the treasure existed that a trimotor transport plane was sent to David, capital of Chiriqui, to fly the gold here for safekeeping.

Capt. Barnard, Former Head Of D.C. Penal Institutions, Dies

Paralytic Attack Is Fatal; Retired in April After 21 Years' Service.



CAPT. M. M. BARNARD.

Capt. Morris Macy Barnard, for 21 years head of District penal institutions, died at 6:45 p. m. yesterday at his new home, Dunmovin, near Pohick, Va. He was 75.

Capt. Barnard, who retired in April, suffered a stroke July 5 and little hope had been held for his recovery because of his age.

Capt. Barnard came here after heading penal institutions in Indiana and Michigan. He had achieved considerable distinction for operating penitentiaries without walls or cells.

Opposed to capital punishment, he worked against the execution of criminals here, and applied the Golden Rule to prisoners.

"I just don't think it does any good," he said of executions. "Just because a man commits murder, why should we commit another murder to even the score?"

Favored Alcatraz

"I'm heartily in favor of the new Federal island prison at San Francisco. When a man goes there for life knowing it's the finish, he'll really be punished."

Commissioner George E. Allen once described Capt. Barnard as "the best penal head in the country." Barnard remained at his post at Allen's personal request until he was 75—five years beyond the retirement age.

Strenuous duties and lack of funds to guard, house, and educate prisoners adequately were cited among his reasons for retirement last April 1.

Capt. Barnard all his life regarded prisoners as "unfortunates" and worked to educate rather than punish them. In his letter of resignation he pleaded for a "well-regulated probation system for the young first offenders who are sent to the reformatory.

Urged Inebriates Hospital.

He also asked that the District establish a hospital for inebriates, concluding, "I feel sure that with these two propositions the public of the institutions would be reduced 25 to 50 per cent."

Born at Burlington, Ind., Barnard received a high school education in his home town. In 1916 he came here, 28 years after his marriage to Edith F. Fellows, of Burlington. He has two children, Kathryn Bayard Green and Lois Barnard Thurman, and five grandchildren.

Tall, powerful, courteous, he believed in the power of good will. His credo was "we allow prisoners as much liberty as circumstances permit." Upon his retirement he remarked "it was the most fascinating work in the world."

In May he moved out of the house provided for him at Lorton Reformatory to spend his waning days in his own home, fishing and farming. He worked in the fields, still a powerful man at 75, until three weeks ago, when his legs were stricken with a slight paralysis. Confined to bed ever since, the ailment crept slowly through his body, rendering him unconscious three days ago.

Jersey Unions United by Ban On Closed Shop

A. F. of L. and C. I. O. Join to Upset Court's Injunction.

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., July 22.—Under what labor leaders termed the shadow of a possible national merger, New Jersey C. I. O. and A. F. of L. organizers and unions joined forces today to "save unionism from certain death" under a State chancery court injunction which declared the closed shop "illegal and unenforceable."

Spurred by the chancery ruling which added that strikes for the closed shop were "unlawful," seven A. F. of L. and six C. I. O. unions organized a labor anti-injunction league and promised "close co-operation" in all labor matters.

Leaders said they felt the action would bring about eventual merging of the rival systems.

Fears Death of Unionism.

"The league's first fight," said Harry Wendrich, A. F. of L. leader and president of the jointly sponsored league, "will be to win an appeal from Vice Chancellor Maja Leon Berry's ruling against the closed shop.

"Unions cannot function successfully under such an injunction and if an appeal is lost it means the absolute death of unionism."

Notice of appeal to the Court of Errors and Appeals, the State's highest tribunal, was filed today in Trenton. The court is in recess until October.

Berry's ruling amplified a previous oral prohibition of picketing at the International Ticket Co. plant, scene of a strike called by seven A. F. of L. unions, which demanded a closed shop.

Urges Close Co-operation.

William J. Carney, State organizer for the C. I. O., asserted there should be the "greatest co-operation" between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., and Charles Cullen, State organizer for the A. F. of L., said "it is time we all joined together to fight this injuntion evil."

Wendrich told the 26 labor leaders he hoped "we will all soon be cemented together and the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. will become one."

You Can't Even Match Pennies Now in Commerce Department

Roper's Little Memorandum Forbids All Forms of Gambling, Betting, Lending, Borrowing; Threatens 'Disciplinary Measures.'

If a Commerce Department employe flips a penny with a fellow to see who gets the penny, or if a superior in the department tries to put an underling on the cuff, it will bring a frown from Secretary Roper and a pentaly, too.

The Secretary has issued an order against gambling in all forms and the borrowing and lending of money. A personnel office spokesman says it doesn't mean an orgy of gambling compelled the ukase, but was just a little memorandum the Secretary had distributed. There are many memorandums distributed every week, it was explained.

The order embraces all officials and employes. It covers them while they are in the building, while on the premises and while on duty at any place. It forbids administrative officers from "making touches" on those beneath them and forbids the borrowing or lending of money at unlawful rates of interest, the latter being an old army custom.

Rather than a statement of policy, the Secretary makes it an amendment to the personnel regulations and arms it with teeth. The order reads:

"Gambling, Betting, Lending or Borrowing Money.—Officers and employes, while in or on property or facilities of the department, wherever located, or while in a duty status, are prohibited from engaging, directly or indirctly, in any form of gambling, betting, lending or borrowing money at unlawful rates of interest, and from borrowing money from those under their supervision. Any violation of this regulation will result in the imposition of such disciplinary measures as the department may consider justified."

The personnel office denied reports disciplinary action was taken a month ago in the cases of ten persons who, it was said, were called up for lending money.

Seattle Protest Declared 'Plot' To Wreck Guild

Publishers Accused by Chapter Head as 40 Sign Petition.

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, July 22.—H. Richard Seller, president of the American Newspaper Guild chapter here, charged tonight a petition of 40 Seattle Post-Intelligencer guild members accusing the guild of "taxation without representation" was linked with a "Nation-wide effort by publishers to wreck the guild."

He said he referred to recent action by the American Newspaper Publishers Associatoin and the National Editorial Association in opposing a "closed shop" for editorial workers.

Forty editorial employes of the Hearst-owned morning daily said in a petition they refused to pay dues and assessments to the guild because of present policies. The petition was addressed to the guild's international executive board and President Heywood Broun.

"The petition automatically tosses them out of the guild," Seller said, "unless special dispensation is accorded either by the international or the Seattle chapter."

He described the leaders of the dissenting members as "misguided in their efforts to render the guild impotent."

He denied the petitioners had had no voice in guild affairs, and said if they had no opportunity to vote on instructions to delegates to the recent St. Louis national convention, it was because "none of them had been a member for more than 30 days prior to the convention."

Referendum Held Likely.

New York, July 22 (AP).—Headquarters of the American Newspaper Guild said tonight opponents of guild affiliation with the Committee for Industrial Organization have apparently mustered strength enough to demand a national referendum on the issue. The international executive committee will meet here Saturday to consider the motion for a referendum.

Rebels Kill 63 In Bombarding Madrid Region

Air Attack Leaves 50 Dead in Town 15 Miles From Capital.

The government high command believes that by driving behind the siege line, completely isolating it from the main body of the insurgents, it can lift the siege of the capital, and, possibly, deliver the crucial blow of the war.

"Hill No. 660," east of Villaneuva de la Canada, in the middle of the "thumb," again was the scene of fierce fighting. Insurgent troops driving from the east side of the "thumb" seized it yesterday in close-quarter fighting and government forces charged back today.

Insurgent infantry waited in trenches near Quijorna, Brunete and Villaneuva del Pardillo, north of "Hill No. 660," while their artillery attempted to drive government troops from their positions.

Government artillery, employing similar tactics, tried to break up insurgent concentrations at all three points while its troops remained under cover.

Both sides bombarded enemy rear-guard towns. At least 25 persons were killed at Colmenar Viejo, north of Madrid, in an insurgent air raid. Government artillery shelled Navalcarnero.

London, July 22 (AP).—Great Britain will submit an entirely new plan to break the deadlock on isolation of the Spanish Civil War, informed quarters said today.

Details of the proposals were kept secret and will not be disclosed, they said, even to the non-intervention powers until the neutrality group's directing sub-committee is reconvened, possibly early next week.

British circles expressed belief that the reception of the new proposals will show whether the last British compromise plan stalled because of fundamental differences or merely because of a dispute over procedure.

Italian circles declared Italy had no intention of refusing to discuss the withdrawal of foreign troops from Spain. They contended, however, that granting belligerent rights would strengthen the international control system and, therefore, should logically precede the withdrawal of volunteers as a subject of discussion.
